November Ballot On Aqueduct Bond

$23 Million Staged Project Is Proposed

Over the objections of one director, the Marin Municipal Water District board voted Wednesday to put a $23 million bond issue — to finance part of a Russian River water supply project — on the November ballot. (Another story, page 38.)

Directors decided to ask voters to approve stages two and three of the four-stage project. Stage one, the North Marin intertie, was approved in a 1970 bond election.

Director Ronald T. Stafford voted against the Russian River project, reiterating his contention that the district should not import water from outside the county. Stafford said he favored obtaining water from Walker Creek in West Marin, one of the alternative supply projects rejected by the board.

The intertie, between Hamilton Air Force Base and Highway 37, when undertaken, is to tie into the North Marin County Water District system and provide the district with an additional 4,000 acre-feet of water within a year at the start of construction.

Stage two, a pipeline from Hamilton to Freitas Parkway in Terra Linda will provide an additional 4,000 acre-feet a year through additional pumps and storage facilities.

Stage three, from Novato to Cotati, will make the pipeline capable of bringing in 13,400 acre feet a year and is scheduled for completion by the fall of 1979.

That amount of water is required to support the limited growth proposed by the Marin countywide plan.

The board agreed to postpone seeking funds for the fourth stage, from Cotati to the Russian River, which will hook the district's lines directly to the river at a cost of about $10 million.

Under the other three stages, the district will be receiving "off peak" water through lines from the North Marin Water District and the Sonoma County Water Agency. The water will be available only during times — like the winter — when the demands on the northern agencies' systems are lowest.

Until Marin Municipal's system is hooked directly to the river, the district cannot expect to obtain water during the summer when demands on the northern systems are greatest.

There was some disagreement over how much of the project should be included in the November bond issue.

Stafford thought the district should put the entire $33 million pipeline on the ballot, saying it would "be deceptive" to ask for approval of only a part.

Board President Jordan L. Martinelli Jr. favored asking voters to approve only stage two and expressed doubts that the $23 million bond issue would pass because of today's economic situation.

"This is the worst time in history to try to pass a bond issue," he said. "I'm afraid voters may turn it down."

Several persons in the audience, including David G. Greenlee, manager of the Marin Builders Exchange, agreed with Martinelli. Greenlee said he thought the board would have a much better chance of getting a smaller bond issue passed.

Attorney Tom Thorner warned that a bond issue for only stage two might not provide enough additional water to permit the district to lift its moratorium on new connections. He said this might strengthen lawsuits now in the courts which charge the district has not been pursuing additional water supply "in good faith."

The bond issue, if approved, would be financed through higher water rates and connection fees.

PART OF FUTURE FLEET

New Ferryboat Shown

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

SAN DIEGO — After seven years of planning, a new ferry fleet to link Marin and San Francisco is rising in the cacophony of a dusty shipyard.

Officials of Campbell Industries, which is building the initial fleet of three luxury ferries under a $14 million contract, proudly displayed its work Wednesday before newsmen.

Their star attraction was Hull 95, the first of the vessels. Due for delivery by June 1, it stands an impressive 18 feet. It will tower at 34 feet when completed for sea trials in early May.

Attachment of the aft section next week will bring it to its full 165-foot length. The 2,500-horsepower gas turbines will start arriving in October from Avco-Lycoming's factory in Stratford, Conn.

Each vessel will be powered by three turbines, each driving a water jet. Tanks tests in England showed they should make 25 knots easily, which would mean a 32-minute trip from the Larkspur ferry terminal and 20 minutes rom Sausalito.

The speed estimate, however, will not be proven until the sea trials. The president of Campbell, George J. Soares, said the ferries "are supposed to be fast; sometime in May we'll find out just how fast they are."

Rather like baking an upside-down cake, workers prefabricate hull sections from the deck plate up to the keel. Model airplane builders would be familiar with the side frames spaced every two feet.

The shipyard uses aluminum, however, not balsa wood. Its thickness ranges from just over a quarter inch on the deck to one-inch girders in the engine compartment. The bottom plates are a half-inch thick.

Aluminum was specified for its light weight by the bridge district's naval architect, Philip Spaulding of Seattle. It costs 50 cents a pound.

Two of the five hull sections for the second ferry already have been assembled, and aluminum sheets up to 40 feet in length and nine feet wide have been stockpiled at the shipyard for the third ferry. The second and third ferries are to be delivered at four-month intervals after the first one.

The third section of the second boat, with its twin fuel tanks that will hold a total of 14,000 gallons of diesel fuel, will be completed next week.

Soares said the first boat will be completed on land to make it easier to correct any problems, "like where to put seats and how to get air to the whistle." The yard is about 100 yards from San Diego Bay, and the boats will be trundled to the water on dollies.

Fully loaded, each will weigh 292 tons.

A tour of the first boat was conducted by Rex McCardell of Mill Valley, the bridge district's resident inspector. He pointed with special pleasure to welding throughout the boat. It was so smooth it seemed the boat lacked only a coat of paint — and two more decks.

The only machinery aboard so far were two pumps that will empty sewage holding tanks when in port.

Fifty men were at work on the various sections of the two boats, and the work force will double as completion nears.

Erection of the upper deck will include four doorways on each side designed to unload the capacity of 750 passengers in two and a half minutes and take on the next load in another two and a half minutes. Combined width of the four doors on each side is 34 feet.

Six of the 18 directors of the bridge district went on the inspection tour: board president Stephan C. Leonoudakis, Daniel F. Del Carlo and Lawrence Mazzola, all of San Francisco, William R. Lucius and E. J. Guidotti of Sonoma County, and Carl Daubeneck of Mendocino County. It was the second visit since construction began in October for Leonoudakis, Guidotti, Mazzola and Lucius.

With round-trip air fare at $50, the directors' trips thus far have cost $500. More trips are planned by the bridge board.

The six present Wednesday said their trips were justified by their responsibility to oversee the work.

Leonoudakis, the prime mover behind the district's entry into the ferry business, proclaimed the new boats as "undoubtedly the finest commute vessels anywhere in the world."

Psychiatrist Says Bedayan Felt Praise Was Due For Killing Evil

Brent William Bedayan feels he should be praised for ridding the world of "evil" through the murder of Daniel R. Schallock, a San Francisco psychiatrist said at Bedayan's trial Tuesday.

Dr. Joseph Satten said Bedayan thought he was acting in self defense when he killed 19-year-old Schallock and the young man's parents in March and he expected to turn himself over to police and receive the praise of the community.

Satten — a consultant of Truman Capote in the preparation of "In Cold Blood," a novel about the apparently motiveless killing of a Kansas family — was Deputy Public Defender Frank J. Cox's third expert winess as he attempted to prove Bedayan insane at the time he killed the Schallocks.

He gave the same descriptions of delusion and psychotic state which previous defense witnesses had given in describing Bedayan.

On cross examination by Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales said Bedayan told him he did not surrender to police at the scene of the murders because he feared neighbors might shoot him or police might beat him. The psychiatrist quoted Bedayan as saying, "When you shoot someone, even for a good reason, tensions rise."

Satten said Bedayan thought he was under some sort of spell by Daniel Schallock which was causing him pain. This delusion was the basis for Bedayan's thoughts of self-defense, the doctor said.

When cross-examined by Bales, Satten said the idea that a person such as Bedayan could manipulate psychiatric test results and deceive a doctor is a "common misconception of lawyers."

"Psychotic patients, even facing the death penalty, don't change their stories to alter verdicts," he said.

Satten said Bedayan believes people either want him dead or convicted of a felony to prevent him from becoming president, an office he thinks he can attain.

The doctor also reviewed a series of 21 sketches prepared by Bedayan prior to his first interview with the doctor. Among them were drawings of a nonexistant subbasement below the Schallock home and sketches of the enforcer, an all-powerful Mill Valley figure whom Bedayan sometimes thought was Melvin Schallock, Daniel's father.

He said he did not believe Bedayan could make a mature, meaningful reflection on the seriousness of the murder or could realize his obligation not to kill at the time of the murders.

Testifying today, the fourth expert witness for the defense, Dr. Bernard Bradman of Kentfield, also described Bedayan as having had a schizophrenic reaction of the paranoid type at the time of the murders.

Dr. Bradman described Bedayan as an "isolate" who was outside the realm of young people his own age, who could not develop deep friendships and had little identification with the world around him.

Bedayan's feelings against Daniel Schallock began when Bedayan felt cheated in the purchase of a guitar which Schallock arranged, the doctor said. That Schallock once put potato chips on Bedayan's stereo equipment also angered the defendant. The psychiatrist said Bedayan indicated he would kill anyone who tampered with the stereo equipment.

Gen. Bradley Serious After Chest Surgery

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Omar N. Bradley, last of the five-star officers who commanded the American military in World War II, underwent an emergency operation early today and was reported in serious condition.

An army spokesman said drug treatments to remedy "massive blood clots" in the 80-year-old general's lungs had failed, necessitating surgery.

"An emergency surgical procedure has just been completed," the UCLA Medical Center announced at 1:45 a.m. PDT today. "General Bradley's condition is considered serious."

"A small umbrella-like sieve was inserted into the vena cava (the great vein leading into the heart) to prevent blood clots from traveling to the lungs," a Medical Center spokesman said.

Bradley was hospitalized Sunday for blood clots in the lungs, believed to be the result of an injury received when he played football as a cadet at West Point more than 50 years ago.

During World War II, Bradley commanded the 1.3 million men of the 12th Army Group, the largest body of troops under one field commander in the history of warfare. He saw them storm ashore at Normandy and led them through France and Germany to Berlin, crushing the Nazis.

Bradley was known as the "GI's General" and was highly regarded by his men. His wife said news of his illness had set off an "outpouring of love, prayers, telegrams and flowers."

Windmills Answer To Brownout?

MONTPELIER, Vt. (UPI) — Prof. William Heronemus of the University of Massachusetts Wednesday called for a network of ultra-modern windmills to take the place of nuclear energy as the power source of the future.

Speaking at a meeting of a regional study group, he said windmills "technically more advanced than Skylab" could be harnessed to capture up to 70 per cent of the wind's energy and produce more than twice the 15 billion kilowatt hours that will needed in Vermont by 1990.

He said it would take 957 windmills 370 feet in height to meet the state's estimated needs.

Another idea, he said, would be to let the oceans act as "natural collectors" for solar energy. The stored heat could be suitable for generating all of the nation's electricity, he said.

"If we have suffered from anything in the last 15 years, we have put too many eggs in one basket," he said, urging a lessening of the concentration on nuclear energy as the power source for the future.

At an earlier session of the Hoff electrical energy study committee an executive of the New England Power Pool called for an increase in the region's nuclear power generating capacity.

William Tallman, chairman of the New England Power Pool (NEPOOL) executive committee, said the pool would like to see the percentage of electricity generated in New England through nuclear power plants increased from the present 20 per cent to 30 per cent.

Tallman, who is also president of the New Hampshire Public Service Corp., said a moratorium on nuclear power production as proposed by environmentalists would put "This country...in real trouble." Power would have to be strictly rationed, he said.

Monthly Sewage Charge Is Approved For Mill Valley

By KAREN PETERSON

The Mill Valley City Council voted 3-to-2 Wednesday night to add a $3.40-a-month sewer service charge to property tax bills at least for this fiscal year. (Another Mill Valley City Council story, page 5.)

The decision before an audience of about 25 persons was a reversal of last week's 4-to-1 vote rejecting the charge after protests from a standing-room-only crowd.

The charge, opposed by councilmen Robert E. Capron and Gerald J. Hood, is part of a six-year, $1.4 million project to prevent infiltration of outside water into the city's sewer system, which places an extra burden on the system's treatment plant during rainy months.

The council also unanimously approved a decision to hold well-publicized public hearings during the year to discuss other means of collecting the money needed for the project.

Alternatives to the service charge include a tax override or bond issue on the April 1974 ballot. If an alternative is approved, the service charge will be dropped.

The council, which unanimously approved the charge in June, has been discussing the project for 14 months, said Mayor Jean S. Barnard.

"I feel we have a very serious problem here," she said, "A problem we have to confront."

Mrs. Barnard also suggested city billing for the charge, similar to the quarterly bills sent to homeowners by the Mill Valley Refuse Co.

City Mgr. William H. Cunningham said that would be the

Nixon Says He's Innocent; Chides Watergate Team

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon said Wednesday night it is the "simple truth" that he is innocent of guilt in the Watergate affair. He suggested Senate investigators help solve the country's problems instead of trying to put the blame for the scandal on him.

Nixon asked the public to join him in demanding that the Senate end its hearings on Watergate and turn the matter "over to the courts where the questions of guilt or innocence belong."

Nixon's remarks, made in a half-hour television address from the Oval Office, were a clear signal to his critics that he was coming out fighting after four months of self-imposed silence on the scandal that has wrecked the upper echelons of his staff and sent his popularity rating to an all-time low.

He declined to answer any of the specific charges of wrongdoing raised during the 37 days of Watergate testimony on grounds that "it would be neither possible to provide nor appropriate to attempt a definitive account of all that took place."

Rather, he sought to convince the public that foes bent on his political destruction were preventing an innocent President from solving inflation and other urgent problems.

"We must not stay so mired in Watergate that we fail to respond to the challenges of surpassing importance to America and the world," he said.

"We cannot let an obsession with the past destroy our hopes for the future...These are matters that will not wait. They cry out for action now."

His appeal received mixed reaction. Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., chairman of the Senate investigating committee, had no immediate comment. Sen. Howard Baker, the ranking Republican, issued a terse statement saying any information from the President would be helpful.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., a spokesman for the conservative wing of the Republican Party that Nixon considers his natural constituency, said the President had provided no information that would allay suspicions of his own involvement. But he seconded the President's efforts to draw attention to "existing and obvious dangers to our republic."

Nixon said that, while the Senate committee had set out initially to uncover facts about the bugging at the Democratic national headquarters, it had become clear after more than two million words of testimony that it has "become increasing-

Conferees Vote To Drop Extra Cent Tax

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislative tax writers today agreed on a bill to reduce the sales tax increase by one cent for six months starting Oct. 1 and to grant income tax payers a $380 million rebate in April. (See earlier story, page 17.)

The plan accepted by five of the six negotiators was a carbon copy replica of the last minute proposal Gov. Ronald Reagan offered the Legislature June 29 but which was rejected.

The only member of the sales tax conference committee who refused to sign the compromise was Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael.

The compromise was expected to be voted on today by the Assembly and Senate. Republican lawmakers voiced assurance that Reagan would sign the bill.

"This is exactly what the governor offered at the last moment on June 29," said Sen. Robert J. Lagomarsino, R-Ojai, one of the conferees.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon will address the annual national convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in New Orleans Monday on his way to California for a two-week stay, the White House announced today.

Nixon will appear at the opening session of the gathering at the Rivergate Convention Center before 45,000 VFW members, Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said.

November Ballot On Aqueduct Bond

$23 Million Staged Project Is Proposed

Over the objections of one director, the Marin Municipal Water District board voted Wednesday to put a $23 million bond issue — to finance part of a Russian River water supply project — on the November ballot. (Another story, page 38.)

Directors decided to ask voters to approve stages two and three of the four-stage project. Stage one, the North Marin intertie, was approved in a 1970 bond election.

Director Ronald T. Stafford voted against the Russian River project, reiterating his contention that the district should not import water from outside the county. Stafford said he favored obtaining water from Walker Creek in West Marin, one of the alternative supply projects rejected by the board.

The intertie, between Hamilton Air Force Base and Highway 37, when undertaken, is to tie into the North Marin County Water District system and provide the district with an additional 4,000 acre-feet of water within a year at the start of construction.

Stage two, a pipeline from Hamilton to Freitas Parkway in Terra Linda will provide an additional 4,000 acre-feet a year through additional pumps and storage facilities.

Stage three, from Novato to Cotati, will make the pipeline capable of bringing in 13,400 acre feet a year and is scheduled for completion by the fall of 1979.

That amount of water is required to support the limited growth proposed by the Marin countywide plan.

The board agreed to postpone seeking funds for the fourth stage, from Cotati to the Russian River, which will hook the district's lines directly to the river at a cost of about $10 million.

Under the other three stages, the district will be receiving "off peak" water through lines from the North Marin Water District and the Sonoma County Water Agency. The water will be available only during times — like the winter — when the demands on the northern agencies' systems are lowest.

Until Marin Municipal's system is hooked directly to the river, the district cannot expect to obtain water during the summer when demands on the northern systems are greatest.

There was some disagreement over how much of the project should be included in the November bond issue.

Stafford thought the district should put the entire $33 million pipeline on the ballot, saying it would "be deceptive" to ask for approval of only a part.

Board President Jordan L. Martinelli Jr. favored asking voters to approve only stage two and expressed doubts that the $23 million bond issue would pass because of today's economic situation.

"This is the worst time in history to try to pass a bond issue," he said. "I'm afraid voters may turn it down."

Several persons in the audience, including David G. Greenlee, manager of the Marin Builders Exchange, agreed with Martinelli. Greenlee said he thought the board would have a much better chance of getting a smaller bond issue passed.

Attorney Tom Thorner warned that a bond issue for only stage two might not provide enough additional water to permit the district to lift its moratorium on new connections. He said this might strengthen lawsuits now in the courts which charge the district has not been pursuing additional water supply "in good faith."

The bond issue, if approved, would be financed through higher water rates and connection fees.

Nixon Says He's Innocent; Chides Watergate Team

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon said Wednesday night it is the "simple truth" that he is innocent of guilt in the Watergate affair. He suggested Senate investigators help solve the country's problems instead of trying to put the blame for the scandal on him.

Nixon asked the public to join him in demanding that the Senate end its hearings on Watergate and turn the matter "over to the courts where the questions of guilt or innocence belong."

Nixon's remarks, made in a half-hour television address from the Oval Office, were a clear signal to his critics that he was coming out fighting after four months of self-imposed silence on the scandal that has wrecked the upper echelons of his staff and sent his popularity rating to an all-time low.

He declined to answer any of the specific charges of wrongdoing raised during the 37 days of Watergate testimony on grounds that "it would be neither possible to provide nor appropriate to attempt a definitive account of all that took place.".

Rather, he sought to convince the public that foes bent on his political destruction were preventing an innocent President from solving inflation and other urgent problems.

"We must not stay so mired in Watergate that we fail to respond to the challenges of surpassing importance to America and the world," he said.

"We cannot let an obsession with the past destroy our hopes for the future...These are matters that will not wait. They cry out for action now."

His appeal received mixed reaction. Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., chairman of the Senate investigating committee, had no immediate comment. Sen. Howard Baker, the ranking Republican, issued a terse statement saying any information from the President would be helpful.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., a spokesman for the conservative wing of the Republican Party that Nixon considers his natural constituency, said the President had provided no information that would allay suspicions of his own involvement. But he seconded the President's efforts to draw attention to "existing and obvious dangers to our republic."

Nixon said that, while the Senate committee had set out initially to uncover facts about the bugging at the Democratic national headquarters, it had become clear after more than two million words of testimony that it has "become increasing-

Gen. Bradley Serious After Chest Surgery

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Omar N. Bradley, last of the five-star officers who commanded the American military in World War II, underwent an emergency operation early today and was reported in serious condition.

An army spokesman said drug treatments to remedy "massive blood clots" in the 80-year-old general's lungs had failed, necessitating surgery.

"An emergency surgical procedure has just been completed," the UCLA Medical Center announced at 1:45 a.m. PDT today. "General Bradley's condition is considered serious."

"A small umbrella-like sieve was inserted into the vena cava (the great vein leading into the heart) to prevent blood clots from traveling to the lungs," a Medical Center spokesman said.

Bradley was hospitalized Sunday for blood clots in the lungs, believed to be the result of an injury received when he played football as a cadet at West Point more than 50 years ago.

During World War II, Bradley commanded the 1.3 million men of the 12th Army Group, the largest body of troops under one field commander in the history of warfare. He saw them storm ashore at Normandy and led them through France and Germany to Berlin, crushing the Nazis.

Bradley was known as the "GI's General" and was highly regarded by his men. His wife said news of his illness had set off an "outpouring of love, prayers, telegrams and flowers."

Conferees Vote To Drop Extra Cent Tax

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislative tax writers today agreed on a bill to reduce the sales tax increase by one cent for six months starting Oct. 1 and to grant income tax payers a $380 million rebate in April. (See earlier story, page 17.)

The plan accepted by five of the six negotiators was a carbon copy replica of the last minute proposal Gov. Ronald Reagan offered the Legislature June 29 but which was rejected.

The only member of the sales tax conference committee who refused to sign the compromise was Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael.

The compromise was expected to be voted on today by the Assembly and Senate. Republican lawmakers voiced assurance that Reagan would sign the bill.

"This is exactly what the governor offered at the last moment on June 29," said Sen. Robert J. Lagomarsino, R-Ojai, one of the conferees.

Nixon To Address VFW Convention

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon will address the annual national convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in New Orleans Monday on his way to California for a two-week stay, the White House announced today.

Nixon will appear at the opening session of the gathering at the Rivergate Convention Center before 45,000 VFW members, Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said.

U.S. Joins U.N. Anti-Israel Vote

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States cast a rare vote against Israel Wednesday, joining the Security Council in unanimously condemning the Israelis for seizing an Arab airliner over Lebanon last Friday.

The resolution originated with the Lebanese-led moderate wing of the Arab world and was sponsored by Britain and France. But it refrained from any mention of sanctions against Israel and the United States went along with it.

U.S. Ambassador John Scali had threatened to use the U.S. veto for the sixth time in U.N. history if there was a call for sanctions. Three of the past U.S. vetoes killed anti-Israeli resolutions.

Wednesday's measure told Israel to desist from "any and all acts" violating Lebanon's sovereignty and territorial integrity and endangering international civil aviation. It "solemnly warned" that if such acts are repeated, the council will consider taking adequate steps or measures to enforce its resolutions.

Nixon Pocket Veto Is Ruled Improper

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration is expected to appeal a federal court decision declaring illegal President Nixon's "pocket" veto of 1970 legislation designed to train family doctors.

U.S. District Judge Joseph C. Waddy ruled Wednesday the pocket veto was impropr because it frustrated Congress' constitutional right to attempt to override the veto.

The Constitution gives a President 10 days to sign or veto a bill after he gets it from Congress. If the period runs out while Congress is adjourned and the President has not signed the bill, it fails to become law on a pocket veto.

The 10-day period on the doctor bill ran out while Congress was recessed during Christmas, 1970. The court noted the veto occurred while Congress was in a brief recess but had not adjourned its session.

"...The short recess of the Senate in this case, extending only two days beyond the 10-day period...did not prevent the return of the bill to the Senate in which it originated," the judge ruled. "It follows therefore that the pocket veto was invalid."

Work Cuts Costs

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — Convicts in the Texas prison system are required to work 40-hour weeks in agricultural, industrial, construction or maintenance programs. Prison officials say because of this employment the cost of keeping a prisoner in Texas is $4.55 a day, compared with $20 a day in states without the work programs.

JUST TOO MUCH WHEAT

Leonel Jensen of Wall, S.D., has a problem — just too much wheat. He has 8,000 bushels piled in his farm yard because bins in the area are overflowing due to the bumper crop that cannot be shipped because of a shortage of boxcars. He couldn't do anything yesterday but shovel and look at it. Wheat now is at an all time high of $5 a bushel. His yield this year is 41.5 bushels per acre.

Balance Of Payments Is Looking Up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the first time in nearly four years the United States has a favorable balance of payments.

The Commerce Department reported Wednesday that foreign currency coming into the United States during the second quarter of this year was nearly $11 billion more than the outflow of dollars during the first three months, for a $463 illion surplus.

It was the first surplus since the last quarter of 1969.

A $10.5 billion deficit was recorded during the first three months of the year. Officials, however, cautioned against assigning great significance to the relatively small, seasonally adjusted, surplus.

Cambodians Capture Town, Without Jets

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Government troops fought the war for the first time in 4-½ years without U.S. air support today and the high command said they reoccupied a town south of Phnom Penh aided only by propeller-driven Cambodian warplanes.

The U.S. bombing of Cambodia officially ended at 11 a.m. Wednesday and field reports said ground fighting around Phnom Penh throughout the rest of the day dipped to the lowest level in months.

But at midmorning today, what appeared to be a U.S. F4 Phantom fighter-bomber passed high over Phnom Penh heading south. Under orders from the Defense Department, unarmed U.S. reconnaissance resupply flights will continue, and presumably the American jet sighted over the capital was on such a mission.

A command spokesman said government troops supported by Cambodian air force propeller-drived T28 bombers today reoccupied Kompong Kantuot 14 miles south of Phnom Penh.

Around the capital today, however, little rebel activity was reported. Reports from newsmen in the field Wednesday said it was one of the lightest days of combat around Phnom Penh since the escalated U.S. air war over the country began in March.

Despite the fall-off in fighting, the government has acknowledged there are about 10,000 rebel troops lurking in the thick jungles around the outskirts of the city.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Bombs Planted

SANTIAGO (UPI) — Terrorists planted pipe bombs in driveways of three U.S. embassy officials Wednesday night but all were dismantled before they could explode. The incident followed a campaign by President Salvador Allende's Socialist party to link the U.S. mission with Chile's transport crisis.

Earlier in the day, hundreds of striking truckers' wives seized four radio stations and broadcast their support of the three-week walkout. Police made no move to evict them.

Socialist Deputy Mario Palestro had said prior to the bomb planting incidents that his party's congressional delegation would demand expulsion of U.S. Ambassador Nathaniel Davis for alleged meddling in Chile's internal affairs.

Vietnam Troops

PARIS (UPI) — The Viet Cong said today South Vietnam has sent about 10,000 troops into Cambodia to fight for the Lon Nol regime.

South Vietnam struck back with accusations the Vietnamese Communists were sending thousands of their own troops and political agitators into Cambodia and Laos.

The exchange of accusations highlighted today's 21st negotiating session between Saigon and Viet Cong diplomats on South Vietnam's political future. The session again ended in a deadlock.

Train Hijacked

BELFAST (UPI) — Gunmen hijacked a freight train today and boobytrapped it with milk cans full of explosives. The locomotive exploded later in a sheet of flame when army sharpshooters used rifles to try to shoot off the fuse to the boobytrap in the cab.

The explosion spread flames to the freight cars pulled by the train, the first ever to be hijacked in Northern Ireland, but caused no injuries, an army spokesman said.

The action came after British troops surrounding the train near the border with the Irish Republic waited for more than 12 hours for two explosive-packed milk cans planted by 10 gunmen to explode.

Paralysis Unsure

HYANNIS, Mass. (UPI) — Specialists treating 18-year-old Pamela Kelley say it may be two weeks before they know the extent of paralysis resulting from injuries in a car accident involving two sons of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

Miss Kelley remains in serious but "stable" condition this morning in Cape Code Hospital's intensive care unit.

Sunken Ship A Mess

FAIRHAVEN, Mass. (UPI) — Divers who entered the purser's office area of the sunken liner Andrea Doria found the vessel "really busted up" from its collision with a Swedish ship 17 years ago, a spokesman said Wednesday.

Jay Fiondella, a spokesman for the divers, said they found that "everything was so banged up they decided to wait until daylight today to see which direction to go in."

Plea For Bombing

SAIGON (UPI) — Four pro-government senators in a letter to U.S. Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., asked the United States to reconsider the bombing halt in Cambodia, the semi-official Vietnam Press reported today.

The report said the letter, asking that the bombing be resumed and continued until December, was sent Aug. 6 but was not made public until today. America's 4½-year-old bombing campaign in Cambodia ended Wednesday under an agreement between President Nixon and Congress.

Dollar Gains

LONDON (UPI) — The U.S. dollar, buoyed by a rare American foreign trade surplus, registered marked gains against most European currencies in early trading today, rising to new highs in London and Frankfurt.

In London, dealers said massive dollar buying sent the U.S. currency rising to $2.4440 against the pound, a 1.61 cent gain against Tuesday's closing rate of $2.4601.

Murder Indictments

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Seven Philadelphia men were indicted Wednesday for the murder of seven Hanafi Muslims last January.

Five of the seven victims were children, ranging in age from nine days to 10 years old. Four of the children were drowned in a bathtub at the house donated to the sect by basketball star Kareem Abdul Jabaar, while another child and two adults were shot to death.

Those charged were Ronald Harvey, John W. Clark, William Christian, James Price, John Griffin, Theodore Moody and Jeremy Sinclair. All were charged with murder, armed robbery and assault with intent to kill.

Skylab Busy

HOUSTON (UPI) — Skylab 2 astronauts no longer are grumbling about not having enough work to do and Commander Alan L. Bean predicts the rest of the flight will go off without a hitch.

The crew's flight surgeon has given his approval to a full 59-day mission.

Officials added 11 man hours a day to the crew's work day after Bean said none of the astronauts was sleeping the allotted eight hours a night and didn't need as much time scheduled for meals and getting ready for bed.

Yuba City Blaze

YUBA CITY (AP) — Thousands of tons of hay, grain and sawdust burst into flames Wednesday causing an estimated $500,000 in damages to a grain storage plant near here, fire officials said.

Cotati's City Manager Gleefully Departs City Hall

By BONNIE BARD

Paul Salfen controlled a strong urge to click his heels high in the air Wednesday as he left his job as Cotati city manager.

Salfen, who had been under fire from the young council majority for a year, said he harbored few regrets as he went about the task of clearing personal items from his office.

"I've been city manager here three years and 46 days," he said. "Needless to say, I've been looking forward to this day with great anticipation." Salfen submitted his resignation five days before that council majority had planned to fire him.

"It doesn't pay to be bitter," he said softly, smoking his ever-present pipe. "It doesn't get anyone anywhere and would be a detriment to the community."

"I had intended to retire here, but it just didn't work out that way," Salfen said.

Salfen said he came to Cotati with great expectations. "I had been working in the Santa Clara Valley and saw the complete disembowelment of a beautiful area," he said.

Bringing that background to Cotati, Salfen set about to make development policies more stringent. "We really had no controls here," he said. "In the beginning there was some problem bringing them about, but the developers have since become very cooperative."

When Salfen speaks of growth control and preserving the rural atmosphere of Cotati, it is reminiscent of the successful election campaign waged in April of 1972 by the three Sonoma State College graduates who later became his adversaries.

"There was really very little difference in philosophies between us and I was looking forward to working with them," Salfen said. "What happened? Who knows — they were power hungry, I guess."

The council majority — Geoffrey Dunham, Annette Lombardi and Stephen Laughlin — charged that Salfen had been uncooperative and was working against them in their efforts to make improvements.

Their plans to fire Salfen, in turn, sparked a recall movement against them. That election will be held Sept. 4.

Salfen believes his struggle with the council is not unusual and sees it as a growing trend in small town government.

"The average tenure — or life span if you will — of a city manager is four and a half years and decreasing," he said.

New French Test?

PAPEETE, Tahiti (UPI) — France has resumed a close weather watch over the Mururoa Atoll test site, a further indication that new blasts in its controversial 1973 nuclear test program may not be far off, observers said Thursday.

Salfen said he believes conflicts come about because city managers must be fair to all and hold rigidly to city requirements and policies.

"City councils on the other hand have political influences and can be very promiscuous," Salfen said. "When the city manager tries to follow the policies laid down, very often he finds himself in disfavor with the city council and others."

Salfen said city managers had a greater degree of security when he first entered the field in July of 1955 as the first full-time employee of Los Altos. He became the city's first manager in 1957.

Although Salfen, 56, does not yet have another job to go to, he remains optimistic. "First I plan to take a vacation to Washington and then there are a couple of good possibilities to look at," he said.

Salfen believes the circumstances under which he left his job will not hurt his chances for getting another job.

"This will be a betterment to my career," he said. "I'm now in a position to gain great status in employment and financially, too. Really, it's a gift."

Salfen said prospective employers now look at applicants individually and take into consideration the circumstances under which they left their last job.

"I hope whatever job I take I can continue to live in Cotati," he said. I like it here . . . no question about that."

Salfen says he plans to attend city council meetings as a private citizen and to speak up when he feels the council is making a mistake.

"There's a good possibility I may even run for the council if I remain in the city," Salfen said. "I may get a completely different picture sitting on the other side of the table."

Man To Be Tried In Forgery Case

A San Rafael man was ordered Tuesday to Marin Superior Court Aug. 27 to stand on two counts of forgery.

Aldo Barberini, 40, was bound over to the higher court by Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court after the judge ruled there is enough evidence to try him.

Barberini is said to have cashed four bad checks totaling $450 at a San Anselmo poultry market between July 11 and 13.

N. Korean Pilots In Egyptian Unit

TEL AVIV (UPI) — The military command said Wednesday that a number of North Korean pilots have joined the Egyptian Air Force.

News reports indicated that 10 to 20 North Korean pilots had joined the Egyptian Air Force recently. Their participation was arranged during a visit by the Egyptian chief of staff to North Korea several months ago, the reports said.

Cotati's City Manager Gleefully Departs City Hall

By BONNIE BARD

Paul Salfen controlled a strong urge to click his heels high in the air Wednesday as he left his job as Cotati city manager.

Salfen, who had been under fire from the young council majority for a year, said he harbored few regrets as he went about the task of clearing personal items from his office.

"I've been city manager here three years and 46 days," he said. "Needless to say, I've been looking forward to this day with great anticipation." Salfen submitted his resignation five days before that council majority had planned to fire him.

"It doesn't pay to be bitter," he said softly, smoking his ever-present pipe. "It doesn't get anyone anywhere and would be a detriment to the community."

"I had intended to retire here, but it just didn't work out that way," Salfen said.

Salfen said he came to Cotati with great expectations. "I had been working in the Santa Clara Valley and saw the complete disembowelment of a beautiful area," he said.

Bringing that background to Cotati, Salfen set about to make development policies more stringent. "We really had no controls here," he said. "In the beginning there was some problem bringing them about, but the developers have since become very cooperative."

When Salfen speaks of growth control and preserving the rural atmosphere of Cotati, it is reminiscent of the successful election campaign waged in April of 1972 by the three Sonoma State College graduates who later became his adversaries.

"There was really very little difference in philosophies between us and I was looking forward to working with them," Salfen said. "What happened? Who knows — they were power hungry, I guess."

The council majority — Geoffrey Dunham, Annette Lombardi and Stephen Laughlin — charged that Salfen had been uncooperative and was working against them in their efforts to make improvements.

Their plans to fire Salfen, in turn, sparked a recall movement against them. That election will be held Sept. 4.

Salfen believes his struggle with the council is not unusual and sees it as a growing trend in small town government.

"The average tenure — or life span if you will — of a city manager is four and a half years and decreasing," he said.

New French Test?

PAPEETE, Tahiti (UPI) — France has resumed a close weather watch over the Mururoa Atoll test site, a further indication that new blasts in its controversial 1973 nuclear test program may not be far off, observers said Thursday.

Salfen said he believes conflicts come about because city managers must be fair to all and hold rigidly to city requirements and policies.

"City councils on the other hand have political influences and can be very promiscuous," Salfen said. "When the city manager tries to follow the policies laid down, very often he finds himself in disfavor with the city council and others."

Salfen said city managers had a greater degree of security when he first entered the field in July of 1955 as the first full-time employee of Los Altos. He became the city's first manager in 1957.

Although Salfen, 56, does not yet have another job to go to, he remains optimistic. "First I plan to take a vacation to Washington and then there are a couple of good possibilities to look at," he said.

Salfen believes the circumstances under which he left his job will not hurt his chances for getting another job.

"This will be a betterment to my career," he said. "I'm now in a position to gain great status in employment and financially, too. Really, it's a gift."

Salfen said prospective employers now look at applicants individually and take into consideration the circumstances under which they left their last job.

"I hope whatever job I take I can continue to live in Cotati," he said. I like it here . . . no question about that."

Salfen says he plans to attend city council meetings as a private citizen and to speak up when he feels the council is making a mistake.

"There's a good possibility I may even run for the council if I remain in the city," Salfen said. "I may get a completely different picture sitting on the other side of the table."

Man To Be Tried In Forgery Case

A San Rafael man was ordered Tuesday to Marin Superior Court Aug. 27 to stand on two counts of forgery.

Aldo Barberini, 40, was bound over to the higher court by Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court after the judge ruled there is enough evidence to try him.

Barberini is said to have cashed four bad checks totaling $450 at a San Anselmo poultry market between July 11 and 13.

N. Korean Pilots In Egyptian Unit

TEL AVIV (UPI) — The military command said Wednesday that a number of North Korean pilots have joined the Egyptian Air Force.

News reports indicated that 10 to 20 North Korean pilots had joined the Egyptian Air Force recently. Their participation was arranged during a visit by the Egyptian chief of staff to North Korea several months ago, the reports said.

Dr. Charlotte Baer Found Dead In Auto

Charlotte C. Baer of San Rafael, an internist and professor of medicine in San Francisco, was found dead yesterday in an automobile parked on Mount Tamalpais.

According to the coroner's office, three picnickers discovered her lying on the floor in the back of the car at about 6 p.m. parked in the Bootjack Camp area and notified police. Cause of death was not known and an autopsy was scheduled.

A specialist in internal medicine, Dr. Baer had been on the board of directors and vice president of the San Francisco Medical Society, president of the California Society of Internal Medicine and a clinical professor of medicine at the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco.

She had been an adviser and consultant to California Blue Shield and was on the attending staff at Franklin and Children's hospitals in San Francisco.

Dr. Baer, 64, was a native of Germany. She received two medical degrees in Europe at Goethe Medical School in Vienna in 1934 and the University of Berne, Switzerland, in 1938. She came to the United States in 1938 and received another medical degree from the University of California in 1941.

She was a swimmer representing Germany in the 1936 Olympics.

She and her husband Leonard, who works for Bechtel Corp., lived at 357 Margarita Drive in the country club tract just outside San Rafael's city limits.

Funeral arrangements were pending today at Halsted and Co. in San Francisco.

NIXON

ly absorbed in an effort to implicate the President personally in the illegal activities that took place."

His television address was accompanied by a 3,000-word statement in which the only specific charge he dealt with was the claim by John W. Dean III, his ousted White House counsel, that he had been warned as early as last September that a Watergate cover-up was underway.

On the contrary, Nixon said, "he gave me no reason whatever to believe that any others were guilty." And on top of this, he said Dean's testimony had been contradicted by the 34 other witnesses before the committee.

"I had no prior knowledge of the Watergate operation. I neither took part in nor knew about any of the subsequent cover-up activities. I neither authorized nor encouraged subordinates to engage in illegal or improper campaign activities," Nixon said.

"That was and is the simple truth."

He also pointed to other assurances that nobody other than G. Gordon Liddy, E. Howard Hunt and the five burglars caught in the Watergate wre involved.

On Sept. 12, he said he received assurances from Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst, since gone from office, that the Justice Department had conducted "the most extensive investigation since the assassination of President Kennedy" and found no further involvement.

On Feb. 12 while talking with acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray, also a Watergate casualty, about his forthcoming confirmation hearings before the Senate he was assured that the FBI investigation had been thorough.

As he had on May 22 in a previous public statement, Nixon said it was not until March 21 when Dean came into his office and laid out the whole story that he became aware of the dimensions of the scandal.

"Because I trusted the agencies conducting the investigations and because I believed the reports I was getting, I did not believe the newspaper accounts of a cover-up," he said.

"I was convinced that there was no cover-up because I was convinced that no one had anything to cover up."

In a philosophical vein, Nixon said he recognized that the term "Watergate" had come to mean far more than the burglary of the national Democratic headquarters.

"It has come to stand for excessive partisanship, for 'enemies lists,' for efforts to use the great institutions of government for partisan political purposes." He said he deplored these actions and promised greater vililance against them.

But he claimed they were a reaction to the violence and rioting of the 1960s when persons asserting the right to take the law into their own hands were "praised in the press and from some of our pulpits as evidence of a new idealism."

"Thus it is not surprising, even though it is deplorable, that some persons in 1972 adopted the morality that they themselves had rightly condemned and committed acts that have no place in our political system," he said.

"We must recognize that one excess begets another and that the extremes of violence and discord in the 1960s contributed to the extremes of Watergate."

Nixon also defended his decision to withhold from investigators records of Watergate conversations which could clear up the conflicting claims of his former associates.

To do so would cripple all future presidents by inhibiting conversations between them and their advisers and make it impossible for them to get the candid advice needed to do their job, he said.

He pointed out that other relationships such as those between a lawyer and client, a priest and penitent and a husband and wife are privileged and testimony about them cannot be compelled by courts.

TAX

the penny on the dollar sales tax increase would consume about $330 million of the state's unprecedneted $826 million tax surplus. Reagan vetoed a Democratic sponsored bill that would have reduced the tax for half a year, plus providing a 30 per cent income tax rebate — with a maximum rebate of $200 per couple and $100 for a single person.

Reagan objected to fixing a limit on the amount of rebate a person could receive. He offered instead a plan proposing a sliding scale for income tax rebates ranging from 20 per cent for the most wealthy to 35 per cent for low income persons.

Democratic legislators rejected that eleventh hour proposal but finally ended up settling for it today.

The compromise measure, worked out by four Democrats and two Republicans behind closed doors, also would eliminate any state income tax liability for single persons whose income was less than $4,000 a year of $8,000 a year for married couples.

Sanitary Board Calls Fill Bids

The San Rafael Sanitation District board Wednesday night called for bids on fill needed to build a levee around the district's main plant off Irene Street.

About 20,000 square yards of fill are needed for the protective screen, according to Norris M. Rawles, district administrator.

He said the district will also landscape the plant grounds in a beautification effort. "We're going to have a nice, beautiful plant, one that we can all be proud of in the community," Rawles said.

The board next meets at 5 p.m. Aug. 29 in city hall.

CHARGE

"most expensive way to go and would involve extra time and money to the city."

The city will send billing lists for 4500 individual property owners to the county auditor today, the deadline for the lists had been extended one week.

An average single-family homeowner would pay $3.40 a month or $40.80 per year. An apartment building would be charged $3.40 for its first dwelling unit and about $3 for all others. A commercial building, such as a retail store, would be charged about $3.40 for its first 500 square feet of space and about $1.20 for each additional square foot. Bars, service stations and restaurants would pay higher rates.

A sparsely attended meeting, said Capron, should not be the time to reconsider the service charge.

"Important as it is," te said, "I place higher importance on the faith the council has in the people who attend the meetings."

Hood agreed that the public didn't have a chance to speak and said the decision should be postponed. "Community participation is absolutely essential," he said.

Councilman Edward Boessenecker, who said he found the service charge distasteful, also said the council has "passed the point of no return as far as financing. There's a fear that we have created a credibility gap," he said, "but by postponing the decision we would fall back one year on the project. I don't see any other alternative."

Mill Valley has always been concerned with protecting the environment, said Councilman Robert E. Burton, the lone dissenter at last week's meeting, and by "allowing raw effluent to escape into the bay during wet weather does not show concern for the environment."

Burton also said the council could still decide to refund half the money, a suggestion made by Mrs. Barnard just to get the project started. The total amount has to go on the tax rolls this fall, he said, but the city could refund the money later in the year. "If we feel in faith that we should refund it, let's spend the $2,000 to do so," he said.

A Plea Of Innocent To Pot Counts

Four persons arrested in a Novato drug raid have pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to charges of cultivating marijuana and possessing the drug for sale.

Joseph Antone Homen Sr., 42, of Novato, and Richard Fremont Robinson, 19, of Denver, denied the charges Tuesday and are due to appear next Tuesday in Municipal Court for preliminary hearings.

Also to appear that day are two other Novato men who pleaded innocent Monday. They are Rickey Charles Tynes, 21, and Joseph Antone Homen III, 20.

Police said they found 200 suspected marijuana plants growing outside and inside the house at 1500 South Novato Boulevard when they acted on a tip and raided the residence Friday.

Muir Beach Meeting Heats Up

Sheriff's deputies were called Wednesday night to quell a disturbance that erupted during a meeting of the Muir Beach Community Services District board.

Board chairman Bruce E. Harlow said he would file a formal complaint today with the Marin County district attorney's office against two men identified as Calvin M. Garrison and Jack Magruder. Garrison is president of the Muir Beach Property Owners Association and Magruder is chairman of the association board.

According to board member Doris Clark, the two men made accusations that negligence on the part of the community services district was responsible for flooding that occurred at their homes in January. Heavy rains reportedly washed out a portion of road and snapped a drainage pipe in the road easement, Mrs. Clark said.

Members of the audience reportedly told the men to shut up and heated remarks and obscenities preceded a pushing and shoving match between the two men and several persons in the audience. "It was like the Hatfields and the McCoys," said Hazel Melo, board secretary.

Garrison and Magruder were ousted from the meeting and left before police arrived at about 8:30 p.m. Order was restored and the meeting continued, Harlow said.

Pair Held In Motor Theft

Two Bolinas men were booked into Marin County Jail today on suspicion of stealing a $300 outboard motor from a yacht in Sausalito.

Bail had not yet been set for John Edward Russell, 27, of Grove Road, and Steven Robert Perkins, 21, of 6 Wharf Road who were being held for investigation of grand theft to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

Sausalito police said a witess reported seeing Perkins board the yacht Galaxy at the Sausalito Yacht Harbor at about 12:35 a.m. and remove an outboard motor. Officers said the witness attempted to stop Perkins from placing the motor in the trunk of a car, but left when Russell came at him with a club.

The witness took the car's license number and reported it to police. The men were stopped a short time later on Shoreline Highway.

"I sold our house myself. But I'd never try to do it again!"

"You know how it is. You hear you can save money if you sell your home yourself. Well, I tried it, and learned a painful lesson the hard way.

I ran an ad and before I knew it, my family's life was turned upside-down. Our phone rang at all hours and total strangers appeared at the door demanding to be shown through. Our flowers were trampled and one day, as we came home, people were sitting on our doorstep.

I thought I had the house sold, but problems of the escrow-impounds, closing costs, title insurance, pre-payment penalty, termite work, eliminating deed encumbrances—delayed everything. (How can this stuff be so complicated!)

Then after all this, the buyer couldn't qualify for a loan. The house was finally sold, but while we were suffering by doing it ourselves, our neighbor's house across the street was sold for 15% more than ours. And it was essentially the same house! His sale was quick, smooth and professionally handled through a Realtor, who knew the true market value of the house. Sell your own home yourself? Take my advice and use a Realtor. Dr. Charlotte Baer Found Dead In Auto

Charlotte C. Baer of San Rafael, an internist and professor of medicine in San Francisco, was found dead yesterday in an automobile parked on Mount Tamalpais.

According to the coroner's office, three picnickers discovered her lying on the floor in the back of the car at about 6 p.m. parked in the Bootjack Camp area and notified police. Cause of death was not known and an autopsy was scheduled.

A specialist in internal medicine, Dr. Baer had been on the board of directors and vice president of the San Francisco Medical Society, president of the California Society of Internal Medicine and a clinical professor of medicine at the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco.

She had been an adviser and consultant to California Blue Shield and was on the attending staff at Franklin and Children's hospitals in San Francisco.

Dr. Baer, 64, was a native of Germany. She received two medical degrees in Europe at Goethe Medical School in Vienna in 1934 and the University of Berne, Switzerland, in 1938. She came to the United States in 1938 and received another medical degree from the University of California in 1941.

She was a swimmer representing Germany in the 1936 Olympics.

She and her husband Leonard, who works for Bechtel Corp., lived at 357 Margarita Drive in the country club tract just outside San Rafael's city limits.

Funeral arrangements were pending today at Halsted and Co. in San Francisco.

NIXON

ly absorbed in an effort to implicate the President personally in the illegal activities that took place."

His television address was accompanied by a 3,000-word statement in which the only specific charge he dealt with was the claim by John W. Dean III, his ousted White House counsel, that he had been warned as early as last September that a Watergate cover-up was underway.

On the contrary, Nixon said, "he gave me no reason whatever to believe that any others were guilty." And on top of this, he said Dean's testimony had been contradicted by the 34 other witnesses before the committee.

"I had no prior knowledge of the Watergate operation. I neither took part in nor knew about any of the subsequent cover-up activities. I neither authorized nor encouraged subordinates to engage in illegal or improper campaign activities," Nixon said.

"That was and is the simple truth."

He also pointed to other assurances that nobody other than G. Gordon Liddy, E. Howard Hunt and the five burglars caught in the Watergate wre involved.

On Sept. 12, he said he received assurances from Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst, since gone from office, that the Justice Department had conducted "the most extensive investigation since the assassination of President Kennedy" and found no further involvement.

On Feb. 12 while talking with acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray, also a Watergate casualty, about his forthcoming confirmation hearings before the Senate he was assured that the FBI investigation had been thorough.

As he had on May 22 in a previous public statement, Nixon said it was not until March 21 when Dean came into his office and laid out the whole story that he became aware of the dimensions of the scandal.

"Because I trusted the agencies conducting the investigations and because I believed the reports I was getting, I did not believe the newspaper accounts of a cover-up," he said.

"I was convinced that there was no cover-up because I was convinced that no one had anything to cover up."

In a philosophical vein, Nixon said he recognized that the term "Watergate" had come to mean far more than the burglary of the national Democratic headquarters.

"It has come to stand for excessive partisanship, for 'enemies lists,' for efforts to use the great institutions of government for partisan political purposes." He said he deplored these actions and promised greater vililance against them.

But he claimed they were a reaction to the violence and rioting of the 1960s when persons asserting the right to take the law into their own hands were "praised in the press and from some of our pulpits as evidence of a new idealism."

"Thus it is not surprising, even though it is deplorable, that some persons in 1972 adopted the morality that they themselves had rightly condemned and committed acts that have no place in our political system," he said.

"We must recognize that one excess begets another and that the extremes of violence and discord in the 1960s contributed to the extremes of Watergate."

Nixon also defended his decision to withhold from investigators records of Watergate conversations which could clear up the conflicting claims of his former associates.

To do so would cripple all future presidents by inhibiting conversations between them and their advisers and make it impossible for them to get the candid advice needed to do their job, he said.

He pointed out that other relationships such as those between a lawyer and client, a priest and penitent and a husband and wife are privileged and testimony about them cannot be compelled by courts.

TAX

the penny on the dollar sales tax increase would consume about $330 million of the state's unprecedneted $826 million tax surplus. Reagan vetoed a Democratic sponsored bill that would have reduced the tax for half a year, plus providing a 30 per cent income tax rebate — with a maximum rebate of $200 per couple and $100 for a single person.

Reagan objected to fixing a limit on the amount of rebate a person could receive. He offered instead a plan proposing a sliding scale for income tax rebates ranging from 20 per cent for the most wealthy to 35 per cent for low income persons.

Democratic legislators rejected that eleventh hour proposal but finally ended up settling for it today.

The compromise measure, worked out by four Democrats and two Republicans behind closed doors, also would eliminate any state income tax liability for single persons whose income was less than $4,000 a year of $8,000 a year for married couples.

Sanitary Board Calls Fill Bids

The San Rafael Sanitation District board Wednesday night called for bids on fill needed to build a levee around the district's main plant off Irene Street.

About 20,000 square yards of fill are needed for the protective screen, according to Norris M. Rawles, district administrator.

He said the district will also landscape the plant grounds in a beautification effort. "We're going to have a nice, beautiful plant, one that we can all be proud of in the community," Rawles said.

The board next meets at 5 p.m. Aug. 29 in city hall.

CHARGE

The city will send billing lists for 4500 individual property owners to the county auditor today, the deadline for the lists had been extended one week.

An average single-family homeowner would pay $3.40 a month or $40.80 per year. An apartment building would be charged $3.40 for its first dwelling unit and about $3 for all others. A commercial building, such as a retail store, would be charged about $3.40 for its first 500 square feet of space and about $1.20 for each additional square foot. Bars, service stations and restaurants would pay higher rates.

A sparsely attended meeting, said Capron, should not be the time to reconsider the service charge.

"Important as it is," te said, "I place higher importance on the faith the council has in the people who attend the meetings."

Hood agreed that the public didn't have a chance to speak and said the decision should be postponed. "Community participation is absolutely essential," he said.

Councilman Edward Boessenecker, who said he found the service charge distasteful, also said the council has "passed the point of no return as far as financing. There's a fear that we have created a credibility gap," he said, "but by postponing the decision we would fall back one year on the project. I don't see any other alternative."

Mill Valley has always been concerned with protecting the environment, said Councilman Robert E. Burton, the lone dissenter at last week's meeting, and by "allowing raw effluent to escape into the bay during wet weather does not show concern for the environment."

Burton also said the council could still decide to refund half the money, a suggestion made by Mrs. Barnard just to get the project started. The total amount has to go on the tax rolls this fall, he said, but the city could refund the money later in the year. "If we feel in faith that we should refund it, let's spend the $2,000 to do so," he said.

A Plea Of Innocent To Pot Counts

Four persons arrested in a Novato drug raid have pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to charges of cultivating marijuana and possessing the drug for sale.

Joseph Antone Homen Sr., 42, of Novato, and Richard Fremont Robinson, 19, of Denver, denied the charges Tuesday and are due to appear next Tuesday in Municipal Court for preliminary hearings.

Also to appear that day are two other Novato men who pleaded innocent Monday. They are Rickey Charles Tynes, 21, and Joseph Antone Homen III, 20.

Police said they found 200 suspected marijuana plants growing outside and inside the house at 1500 South Novato Boulevard when they acted on a tip and raided the residence Friday.

Muir Beach Meeting Heats Up

Sheriff's deputies were called Wednesday night to quell a disturbance that erupted during a meeting of the Muir Beach Community Services District board.

Board chairman Bruce E. Harlow said he would file a formal complaint today with the Marin County district attorney's office against two men identified as Calvin M. Garrison and Jack Magruder. Garrison is president of the Muir Beach Property Owners Association and Magruder is chairman of the association board.

According to board member Doris Clark, the two men made accusations that negligence on the part of the community services district was responsible for flooding that occurred at their homes in January. Heavy rains reportedly washed out a portion of road and snapped a drainage pipe in the road easement, Mrs. Clark said.

Members of the audience reportedly told the men to shut up and heated remarks and obscenities preceded a pushing and shoving match between the two men and several persons in the audience. "It was like the Hatfields and the McCoys," said Hazel Melo, board secretary.

Garrison and Magruder were ousted from the meeting and left before police arrived at about 8:30 p.m. Order was restored and the meeting continued, Harlow said.

Pair Held In Motor Theft

Two Bolinas men were booked into Marin County Jail today on suspicion of stealing a $300 outboard motor from a yacht in Sausalito.

Bail had not yet been set for John Edward Russell, 27, of Grove Road, and Steven Robert Perkins, 21, of 6 Wharf Road who were being held for investigation of grand theft to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

Sausalito police said a witess reported seeing Perkins board the yacht Galaxy at the Sausalito Yacht Harbor at about 12:35 a.m. and remove an outboard motor. Officers said the witness attempted to stop Perkins from placing the motor in the trunk of a car, but left when Russell came at him with a club.

The witness took the car's license number and reported it to police. The men were stopped a short time later on Shoreline Highway.

Mill Valley Sets Work On Key Link

Plans for improvement of Miller Avenue in Mill Valley, two years in the making, were approved Wednesday night by the city council, clearing the way for start of the project. (Another Mill Valley City Council story, page 1.)

It now remains only for the city planning commission to verify that the plans conform to the city's general plan before the first phase of the two-year project is let out to bid.

The council vote was 3-to-2 with councilmen Gerald J. Hood and Edward Boessenecker opposed.

Deputy City Engineer Jesper Strandgaard said the first phase, which will cost approximately $123,020, will improve traffic regulation on Miller Avenue between Evergreen and Locust streets. Included in will be left turn lanes, four stop signs, bike trails and sidewalks.

A small 25-foot plaza, or "pedestrian focus point," said Strandgaard, would also be built in the southwest intersection of Montford Street and Miller.

Funds for the first phase will be drawn from city and topic funds. Topic funds, which are federally funded specifically for improving street capacity and safety, now total $53,780. The city's share from gas tax funds will total $69,240. City Mgr. William H. Cunningham estimated gas tax revenue at the end of the fiscal year will total between $130,000 and $135,000.

Landscaping, traffic signals and street lighting will not be included in this first phase of improvements, said Strandgaard, and topic funds cannot be used for these items.

Boessenecker said the minority was not against improvements but has its "priorities somewhere else."

First Death From Farm Labor Dispute

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (UPI) — The battle between the Teamsters and United Farm Workers Union to organize California's field hands claimed its first life Wednesday.

Nagi Baifulluh, 24, a UFW picket from Keene, Calif., died in a Bakersfield hospital of head injuries received during an altercation with police Tuesday outside a tavern in nearby Lamont.

Violence also flared on the picket lines Wednesday when a farm hand opened fire on UFW pickets, including the son of union leader Cesar Chavez, at a ranch near Earlimart in Tulare County.

No one was hit when a nonstriking employe of George Lucas ranch fired several shots at the UFW supporters following a rock throwing fight between pickets and workers.

Chavez' son, Fernando, 24, an intern on the staff of State Assemblyman Richard Valatorre, dived behind a car when the shooting broke out. Chavez said he had joined the pickets as a legislative observer.

Tulare County sheriff's deputies arrested Luis Q. Rivera, 29, of Earlimart, in connection with the shooting.

Baifulluh died following an operation for injuries received the previous night after a brawl in a Lamont tavern.

Kern County sheriff's office said Baifulluh was fleeing from Deputy Gilbert Cooper when he fell and struck his head. They said Cooper had been hit by a bottle throw by Baifulluh in the tavern.

Mill Valley Sets Work On Key Link

Plans for improvement of Miller Avenue in Mill Valley, two years in the making, were approved Wednesday night by the city council, clearing the way for start of the project. (Another Mill Valley City Council story, page 1.)

It now remains only for the city planning commission to verify that the plans conform to the city's general plan before the first phase of the two-year project is let out to bid.

The council vote was 3-to-2 with councilmen Gerald J. Hood and Edward Boessenecker opposed.

Deputy City Engineer Jesper Strandgaard said the first phase, which will cost approximately $123,020, will improve traffic regulation on Miller Avenue between Evergreen and Locust streets. Included in will be left turn lanes, four stop signs, bike trails and sidewalks.

A small 25-foot plaza, or "pedestrian focus point," said Strandgaard, would also be built in the southwest intersection of Montford Street and Miller.

Funds for the first phase will be drawn from city and topic funds. Topic funds, which are federally funded specifically for improving street capacity and safety, now total $53,780. The city's share from gas tax funds will total $69,240. City Mgr. William H. Cunningham estimated gas tax revenue at the end of the fiscal year will total between $130,000 and $135,000.

Landscaping, traffic signals and street lighting will not be included in this first phase of improvements, said Strandgaard, and topic funds cannot be used for these items.

Boessenecker said the minority was not against improvements but has its "priorities somewhere else."

First Death From Farm Labor Dispute

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (UPI) — The battle between the Teamsters and United Farm Workers Union to organize California's field hands claimed its first life Wednesday.

Nagi Baifulluh, 24, a UFW picket from Keene, Calif., died in a Bakersfield hospital of head injuries received during an altercation with police Tuesday outside a tavern in nearby Lamont.

Violence also flared on the picket lines Wednesday when a farm hand opened fire on UFW pickets, including the son of union leader Cesar Chavez, at a ranch near Earlimart in Tulare County.

No one was hit when a nonstriking employe of George Lucas ranch fired several shots at the UFW supporters following a rock throwing fight between pickets and workers.

Chavez' son, Fernando, 24, an intern on the staff of State Assemblyman Richard Valatorre, dived behind a car when the shooting broke out. Chavez said he had joined the pickets as a legislative observer.

Tulare County sheriff's deputies arrested Luis Q. Rivera, 29, of Earlimart, in connection with the shooting.

Baifulluh died following an operation for injuries received the previous night after a brawl in a Lamont tavern.

Kern County sheriff's office said Baifulluh was fleeing from Deputy Gilbert Cooper when he fell and struck his head. They said Cooper had been hit by a bottle throw by Baifulluh in the tavern.

Nuclear Power's Perils Decried

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Herbert Denenberg, Pennsylvania state insurance commissioner, today called on the atomic energy industry to prove "infinite perfection" as the only adequate insurance against catastrophic loss caused by a nuclear power plant failure.

Denenberg, chairing hearings on insurance risks posed by nuclear power plants, opened the third and final session with a challenge to the nuclear establishment to "stop building more nuclear power plants and to begin closing down the ones we have" unless it can assure the public there will be no major accidents.

"Nobody but God could write the insurance policy we need on nuclear power plants," he said, pointing out that the Atomic Energy Commission's (AEC) own studies indicate a major nuclear mishap could cause up to $280 billion in losses, most of which would not be covered by insurance.

Dr. John W. Gofman, noted doctor-physicist, laced into the AEC Wednesday, charging that any agency authorization of a "permissible dose" of radiation "is a permit to plan willful murder."

Gofman, resuming a heated controversy with the AEC, said agency standards governing permissible doses of radiation "are now, as they have always been, a fraud perpetrated on the public.

"There is no question that the AEC has tried in the past and still does try to suggest directly and obliquely that 'permissible' doses are 'safe.'

"There is no doubt radiation will produce mutations and resultant diseases and deaths. Therefore, any AEC authorized 'permissible dose' is a permit to plan willful murder," Gofman said.

A recognized expert in the field of diseases resulting from nuclear accidents, Gofman said radiation would produce "virtually all forms of human cancer and human leukemia ... in direct proportion to dose."

James F. Moore, manager of Westinghouse Nuclear Energy Systems, said nuclear power stations were "a safe, reliable method of generating electric power."

In "150 reactor years of operation of our nuclear power program, no member of the public has ever been killed or injured from any reacton-related accident," Moore said.

He branded as "far out" AEC studies which said a major nuclear power plant accident could create a disaster area the size of the state of Pennsylvania. Such studies, Moore said, were "based on wholly imaginary, fairy tale-type circumstances."

Open Space Tax Ballot Scheduled

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Sonoma County voters will be asked to approve a 10-cent property tax override on the Nov. 6 ballot to fund the purchase of open space.

The Sonoma County Board of Supervisors Tuesday agreed to put the measure to a vote. The tax would initially raise $600,000 per year for the purchase of development rights or the outright purchase of scenic land.

The supervisors said residents have been demanding the preservation of open space and should be willing to pay for it.

Supervisor Philip L. Joerger of Petaluma first proposed the measure and said he believed residents would rather vote extra taxes to preserve open space than to acquire and maintain new parks.

The money could also be used to purchase and lease back agricultural land or to buy scenic easements or buffer zones.

Hearing Set On X-Rated Photography

I-J Speial Report

SANTA ROSA — An ordinance banning X-rated films at outdoor theaters will be considered Aug. 27 by the Sonoma County Board of Supervisors.

The board has directed County Counsel James P. Botz to prepare an ordinance to ban the outdoor films and set a public hearing on the issue for 10 a.m. on Aug. 27.

Botz said he must study the constitutionality of any such ordinance. He said it could possibly be based on the contention that such films have a depreciating effect on land adjacent to outdoor theaters; that they have unavoidable visibility that invades the rights of others; and can be considered a public nuisance.

Supervisor Philip L. Joerger pushed for the ordinance, saying many Petaluma area residents have complained about X-rated films being shown at drive-in theaters.

The Petaluma City Council has already adopted a similar ordinance.

Mitchell, Stans Trial Delay Move Rejected

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former Nixon cabinet members John N. Mitchell and Maurice Stans will be tried on charges of perjury, conspiracy and obstruction of justice Sept. 11 as scheduled, despite their request for a delay.

U.S. District Judge Lee P. Gagliardi rejected their motion for a postponement Wednesday, saying, "Basically, this is a very simple case."

Both Mitchell, former attorney general, and Stans, former commerce secretary, gave up their cabinet posts last year to run President Nixon's reelection campaign. They are accused of trying to stop a federal investigation into financier Robert L. Vesco in exchange for a $200,000 campaign donation.

The Securities and Exchange Commission was investigating Vesco, of Boonton, N.J., for fraud when, according to the indictment, Mitchell and Stans engineered the scheme to get the SEC to leave Vesco alone if Vesco would make the donation.

Later, the government says, Mitchell and Stans lied about their participation in the deal to a federal grand jury.

The indictment suggests the $200,000 secret campaign donation from Vesco was used to pay Watergate burglars, and Mitchell's lawyers argued the government had improperly linked the New York case to the Watergate scandal in asking for the delay.

"Rightly or wrongly the government has now connected the entire Watergate matter to this case," Mitchell's motion declared.

The two defendants also argued for a change of venue because of adverse publicity they said they received when they testified before the Senate Watergate Committee on related matters.

Mitchell and Stans are each charged with six counts of perjury, one count of conspiracy and three counts of obstructing justice. Vesco is also under indictment in the case, but he has fled the country and is in Costa Rica.

A fourth defendent, former New Jersey Senate majority leader Harry L. Sears, who is also accused of participating in the scheme, will be tried separately.

Bus Plan Faces Gasoline Lack

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — "Good faith" effort by the city government may not be enough to provide sufficient gasoline to bus 27,000 of the Memphis school system's 130,000 students for the 1973-74 term.

Mayor Wyeth Chandler said Wednesday the only gasoline he could possibly obtain for the board of education would be the 23,000 gallons alloted for "executive and maintenance" board vehicles.

But the school board contends it needs 750,000 to one million gallons of gas to abide by the federal court approved school desegregation plan "Z".

Psychiatric Help Given To Accuser

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An Air Force master sergeant who tried to file court-martial charges of treason and obstructing justice against President Nixon is voluntarily undergoing psychiatric examination, the Pentagon says.

Defense Department officials said Wednesday the attempt was made by M. Sgt. Grant Schulke, 44, of Lowry Air Force Base, Colo. Schulke, a veteran of almost 23 years in the Air Force, took the matter to Air Force officials Aug. 7.

"He went to the judge advocate's office at Lowry and asked them to help him prepare charges against the President for treason and obstructing justice," the spokesman said.

The spokesman said he was unsure what prompted the sergeant's decision—whether it was the Watergate affair or the conduct of the war in Indochina.

Schulke was asked by an official in the judge advocate's office to come back with a letter saying he wanted to file the charges. When he did, Schulke's commander, Capt. L. M. Fausta, and a base psychiatrist asked the noncommissioned officer to voluntarily take a psychiatric examination.

The Pentagon spokesman said Schulke agreed and entered Fitzsimmons Army Hospital at Denver Tuesday for what was expected to be a three-day stay.

Until the study is completed, the Air Force will not decide what further action to take, the spokesman said.

Maternity Wards' Centralization Urged

A plan to centralize all maternity care in the county at a single hospital was approved Wednesday by the Comprehensive Health Planning Council of Marin.

The proposal calls for one countywide maternity ward at either Marin or Novato general hospitals or Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Rafael.

The council's facilities committee, which recommended the consolidation, said it would be more economical and make better care possible.

The committee said a hospital needs approximately 2,000 births annually to make efficient use of its maternity facilities. Marin General, the largest local hospital, averages 1,000 births each year.

If the three existing maternity wards were consolidated, it would be easier to keep up with the latest techniques and equipment, the council decided.

The recommendation will now be forwarded to the Bay Area Comprehensive Health Planning Council for inclusion in its area-wide Comprehensive Health Planning Council for inclusion in its area-wide plan to improve medical care. That board is expected to routinely approve the local board's recommendation, according to Joan M. Ripple, executive director of the Marin council.

The Comprehensive Health Planning Council of Marin also:

NEW MEMBERS — Appointed teacher Rose L. Kaplan of Novato, attorney Vincent E. Keyes of San Rafael, and Richard G. Morse of Tiburon to council seats.

REGIONAL DELEGATES — Chose council members Michael L. Harris, Derek Parker and Cynthia Wik as delegates to the Bay Area Comprehensive Health Planning Council.

OPEN HOUSE — Scheduled an open house for 4 p.m. Oct. 3 at the council's office, 710 C Street, San Rafael.

Psychiatric Help Given To Accuser

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An Air Force master sergeant who tried to file court-martial charges of treason and obstructing justice against President Nixon is voluntarily undergoing psychiatric examination, the Pentagon says.

Defense Department officials said Wednesday the attempt was made by M. Sgt. Grant Schulke, 44, of Lowry Air Force Base, Colo. Schulke, a veteran of almost 23 years in the Air Force, took the matter to Air Force officials Aug. 7.

"He went to the judge advocate's office at Lowry and asked them to help him prepare charges against the President for treason and obstructing justice," the spokesman said.

The spokesman said he was unsure what prompted the sergeant's decision—whether it was the Watergate affair or the conduct of the war in Indochina.

Schulke was asked by an official in the judge advocate's office to come back with a letter saying he wanted to file the charges. When he did, Schulke's commander, Capt. L. M. Fausta, and a base psychiatrist asked the noncommissioned officer to voluntarily take a psychiatric examination.

The Pentagon spokesman said Schulke agreed and entered Fitzsimmons Army Hospital at Denver Tuesday for what was expected to be a three-day stay.

Until the study is completed, the Air Force will not decide what further action to take, the spokesman said.

Maternity Wards' Centralization Urged

A plan to centralize all maternity care in the county at a single hospital was approved Wednesday by the Comprehensive Health Planning Council of Marin.

The proposal calls for one countywide maternity ward at either Marin or Novato general hospitals or Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Rafael.

The council's facilities committee, which recommended the consolidation, said it would be more economical and make better care possible.

The committee said a hospital needs approximately 2,000 births annually to make efficient use of its maternity facilities. Marin General, the largest local hospital, averages 1,000 births each year.

If the three existing maternity wards were consolidated, it would be easier to keep up with the latest techniques and equipment, the council decided.

The recommendation will now be forwarded to the Bay Area Comprehensive Health Planning Council for inclusion in its area-wide Comprehensive Health Planning Council for inclusion in its area-wide plan to improve medical care. That board is expected to routinely approve the local board's recommendation, according to Joan M. Ripple, executive director of the Marin council.

The Comprehensive Health Planning Council of Marin also:

NEW MEMBERS — Appointed teacher Rose L. Kaplan of Novato, attorney Vincent E. Keyes of San Rafael, and Richard G. Morse of Tiburon to council seats.

REGIONAL DELEGATES — Chose council members Michael L. Harris, Derek Parker and Cynthia Wik as delegates to the Bay Area Comprehensive Health Planning Council.

OPEN HOUSE — Scheduled an open house for 4 p.m. Oct. 3 at the council's office, 710 C Street, San Rafael.

Pet Foster Home Wins Reprieve On Tie Vote

Larkspur's No. 1 dog-lover, Helen Galantiere, Wednesday night, won at least a temporary reprieve from the Larkspur City Council for her foster home for pets on her one-acre residence.

The council split 2-2 over whether a city ordinance which prohibits more than two dogs and two cats in a single family residence should be enforced against Mrs. Galantiere.

Councilman Joan Sestak along with Mayor Alfred J. Malvino firmly insisted that despite what they called Mrs. Galantiere's "worthwhile" project, a Larkspur neighborhood was not the place for an animal shelter.

Councilmen William G. Fleckles, a lawyer who said the word "keeping" in the city ordinance was not clear, backed Mrs. Galantiere as did Councilman Robert H. Lee. Neil R. Brixon was absent.

Mrs. Galantiere readily admitted that she usually has about 10 dogs at her home at 410 Elm Avenue, but most are puppies, she said. The large dogs mentioned by a city inspector who went to her house, she said, are some puppies "which got pretty big."

Mrs. Galantiere, who said she places unwanted pets through newspaper ads, explained her biggest problem is with dogs returned because of "an allergy" or other difficulties with new owners.

She said that the animals usually stay in her home about a week. She was backed by a couple of fellow members of the St. Francis Animal Protection Society, a nonprofit corporation "dedicated to humane education."

Mrs. Galantiere also was accompanied to the meeting by her daughter, who held one of their tail-wagging friends on her lap.

Malvino told Mrs. Galantiere after the tie vote that the matter would remain dormant until a full council is present and someone puts it on the agenda again. A neighbor had complained about noise and odor.

The Larkspur City Council also:

HEARING — Introduced an ordinance governing hillside and slope developments and set a public hearing for Sept. 5.

DISTRICT — Introduced an ordinance concerning planned development districts and set a public hearing for Sept. 5.

TRAFFIC — Approved making traffic one-way on Upper and Lower Via Casitas, adding more parking spaces.

GIFT — Voted to give Survival Inc. $500 for its recycling activities, with Malvino voting no.

TAX — Official set the city's tax rate for 1973-74 at $1.48 per $100 of assessed valuation and 50 cents per $100 for the city sanitary district. The rate is the same as last year.

MAP — Approved a final map for the San Pan Bay subdivision on Larkspur Plaza Road.

INTERCHANGE — Requested the Division of Highways to study the Greenbrae interchange for possible improvements.

WALL — Called for bids for a retaining wall on Walnut Avenue.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. next Wednesday to review the environmental impact report of the Larkspur Ferry Terminal project.

Murder Charged Against Drifter

SANTA ROSA (UPI) — A 21-yar-old drifter in custody for parole violations was indicted on first degree murder charges wednesday for the slaying of a woman parole agent.

The Sonoma County Grand Jury indicted Frederick Cox, who had been living with Greta Modecke, 37, prior to when her body was found in a sleeping bag near Guerneville June 7.

Cox was arrested in San Francisco the day after the slaying, but murder charges were dismissed for lack of evidence. He remained in jail as a parole violator and on charges of forging and cashing checks on the victim's account.

The indictment Wednesday was based on "new and different evidence" heard by two witnesses before the grand jury, said District Attorney John Hawkes.

Novato Council Suggests Airport Land Commission

The Novato City Council Wednesday night voted to recommend to the board of supervisors that it form an airport land use commission.

The vote was 4-0 with Councilman David Price Jones absent.

The commission would be charged with planning the land around the county's airport, Gnoss Field.

It would be composed of seven members — two named by the board of supervisors, two by the Marin County Council of Mayors and Councilmen, two appointed by the airport manager and the seventh named by the other six, according to Michael C. Sweeney, chairman of the Marin County Aviation Commission.

James J. Bigelow, chairman of the San Mateo County Aviation Commission and member of the San Carlos Airport Commission said that the main purpose of the airport land use commission would be to protect the airport from encroachment.

"The airport commission was created to run the airport; the land use commission would be created to plan the land use around the airport, so there is no conflict," he said.

The California State Legislature in 1969 passed a law requiring the creation of such commissions, he said. It is still working on the guide lines to be used by the commissions, he said.

The state will set the standards for noise zones around the airport and name the types of installations that can be used in these zones.

For example, golf courses are very acceptable for the ends of runways, he said. In a less noisy zone, some types of industries would be permitted. The further away from the noise of take-offs and landings of planes, the more business would be allowed until finally single family dwellings and then apartments would be permitted, Bigelow said.

The commission would have a set area around the airport in which it had jurisdiction. In the case of Gnoss Field, under proposed regulations, it would be a strip six miles wide and 11 miles long, he said.

The Novato City Council Also:

PROCESSING — Approved renting an International Business Machines word processing set at $689 per month for six months. It took no action on buying a $9,500 mobile home to house the equipment in the city hall parking lot.

RATIFICATION — Could not agree on the wording of a proposed ordinance giving the council back the authority to ratify hiring and firing of Department heads, so did not introduce the proposed ordinance. It asked for a rewording of portions and approval by the city attorney of the changes before bringing it before a full council.

AQUEDUCT — Approved the environmental impact report made by Arthur D. Little Co. for the North Marin County Water District on the proposed Sonoma-Marin aqueduct as being in conformity with the Novato General Plan. Councilman F. Wayne Sartain objected to backpumping water into Stafford Lake as a flood danger, but Mayor Fred F. Ruegg said that it had already been approved by the water district board.

KTIM — Voted no objections to a request from KTIM to broadcast five minute tapes on council meetings.

CITY SEAL — Rejected the latest drawing of the city seal and asked that the flag pole be eliminated from it and the design showing the city hall be slightly altered. This version of the proposed city seal shows the city hall surrounded by the wording, "The City of Novato, California."

O'HAIR — Authorized City Mgr. Charles A. Brown to seek bids to lease the grazing land on the O'Hair property, renting the house and pool, and bringing the bids back to the council.

PLAN REVIEW — Set 7:30 p.m. Aug. 28 at the community house for a meeting with the plan review committee.

ADJOURNED — Adjourned to 7:30 p.m., next Tuesday to meet wih the North Marin County Water Board at the Novato Community house.

Gasoline Situation Is Better

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The gasoline shortage in California and Nevada has eased and travelers should experience no fuel problems if tanks are kept half-full and traveling is restricted to daylight hours, the California State Automobile Association reported today.

In its weekly forecast of gasoline availability in California and Nevada through Aug. 24, the association reported fuel supplies to be "considerably improved" over past weeks.

But night and Sunday travel is still difficult in some areas because few stations are open all night north of Petaluma and south of San Jose, according to the association.

The gasoline situation in the Bay Area is normal and there are enough daylight outlets and sufficient all-night stations to meet demands, the association said.

Residents traveling through the mountains on U.S. Highway 50 should follow the half-tank practice because there are few all night stations, according to the association.

Judges Shun Sitting On Agnew Case

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Maryland's nine federal judges have disqualified themselves from any court action involving Vice President Spiro T. Agnew.

Chief U.S. District Judge Edward Northrop said Wednesday the judges in Maryland would not "handle anything relating to the vice president" because of Agnew's "unique position" in the state. Agnew is the former governor of Maryland.

Northrop asked the 4th U.S. Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., to designate a judge from outside Maryland to "supervise and handle all future matters arising from the inquiry of the special grand jury which in any matter whatever pertains to the vice president of the United States."

Agnew is being investigated by the U.S. District Attorney in Baltimore for allegations he was involved in a kickback scheme involving government contracts while he was governor. The vice president has called the allegations "damned lies."

The New York Times reported today that Agnew was briefed by Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson 10 days ago about the federal bribery and kickback investigation involving the vice president.

The Times said Richardson told Agnew what the government's case consisted of so far, including testimony that three former Agnew associates had told prosecutors they gave cash payments to Agnew.

Northrop also announced he was granting U.S. District Judge C. Stanley Blair's request to be relieved of supervising the grand jury's investigation.

New Auto Stolen

A brand new yellow Cadillac coupe de ville, license 887 FXK, was reported stolen Wednesday while parked on a Larkspur alley, owner Sue Schafer of 39 Longview Avenue, San Anselmo, told police. She is president of the Larkspur Chamber of Commerce.

Novato Council Suggests Airport Land Commission

The Novato City Council Wednesday night voted to recommend to the board of supervisors that it form an airport land use commission.

The vote was 4-0 with Councilman David Price Jones absent.

The commission would be charged with planning the land around the county's airport, Gnoss Field.

It would be composed of seven members — two named by the board of supervisors, two by the Marin County Council of Mayors and Councilmen, two appointed by the airport manager and the seventh named by the other six, according to Michael C. Sweeney, chairman of the Marin County Aviation Commission.

James J. Bigelow, chairman of the San Mateo County Aviation Commission and member of the San Carlos Airport Commission said that the main purpose of the airport land use commission would be to protect the airport from encroachment.

"The airport commission was created to run the airport; the land use commission would be created to plan the land use around the airport, so there is no conflict," he said.

The California State Legislature in 1969 passed a law requiring the creation of such commissions, he said. It is still working on the guide lines to be used by the commissions, he said.

The state will set the standards for noise zones around the airport and name the types of installations that can be used in these zones.

For example, golf courses are very acceptable for the ends of runways, he said. In a less noisy zone, some types of industries would be permitted. The further away from the noise of take-offs and landings of planes, the more business would be allowed until finally single family dwellings and then apartments would be permitted, Bigelow said.

The commission would have a set area around the airport in which it had jurisdiction. In the case of Gnoss Field, under proposed regulations, it would be a strip six miles wide and 11 miles long, he said.

The Novato City Council Also:

PROCESSING — Approved renting an International Business Machines word processing set at $689 per month for six months. It took no action on buying a $9,500 mobile home to house the equipment in the city hall parking lot.

RATIFICATION — Could not agree on the wording of a proposed ordinance giving the council back the authority to ratify hiring and firing of Department heads, so did not introduce the proposed ordinance. It asked for a rewording of portions and approval by the city attorney of the changes before bringing it before a full council.

AQUEDUCT — Approved the environmental impact report made by Arthur D. Little Co. for the North Marin County Water District on the proposed Sonoma-Marin aqueduct as being in conformity with the Novato General Plan. Councilman F. Wayne Sartain objected to backpumping water into Stafford Lake as a flood danger, but Mayor Fred F. Ruegg said that it had already been approved by the water district board.

KTIM — Voted no objections to a request from KTIM to broadcast five minute tapes on council meetings.

CITY SEAL — Rejected the latest drawing of the city seal and asked that the flag pole be eliminated from it and the design showing the city hall be slightly altered. This version of the proposed city seal shows the city hall surrounded by the wording, "The City of Novato, California."

O'HAIR — Authorized City Mgr. Charles A. Brown to seek bids to lease the grazing land on the O'Hair property, renting the house and pool, and bringing the bids back to the council.

PLAN REVIEW — Set 7:30 p.m. Aug. 28 at the community house for a meeting with the plan review committee.

ADJOURNED — Adjourned to 7:30 p.m., next Tuesday to meet wih the North Marin County Water Board at the Novato Community house.

Gasoline Situation Is Better

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The gasoline shortage in California and Nevada has eased and travelers should experience no fuel problems if tanks are kept half-full and traveling is restricted to daylight hours, the California State Automobile Association reported today.

In its weekly forecast of gasoline availability in California and Nevada through Aug. 24, the association reported fuel supplies to be "considerably improved" over past weeks.

But night and Sunday travel is still difficult in some areas because few stations are open all night north of Petaluma and south of San Jose, according to the association.

The gasoline situation in the Bay Area is normal and there are enough daylight outlets and sufficient all-night stations to meet demands, the association said.

Residents traveling through the mountains on U.S. Highway 50 should follow the half-tank practice because there are few all night stations, according to the association.

Judges Shun Sitting On Agnew Case

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Maryland's nine federal judges have disqualified themselves from any court action involving Vice President Spiro T. Agnew.

Chief U.S. District Judge Edward Northrop said Wednesday the judges in Maryland would not "handle anything relating to the vice president" because of Agnew's "unique position" in the state. Agnew is the former governor of Maryland.

Northrop asked the 4th U.S. Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., to designate a judge from outside Maryland to "supervise and handle all future matters arising from the inquiry of the special grand jury which in any matter whatever pertains to the vice president of the United States."

Agnew is being investigated by the U.S. District Attorney in Baltimore for allegations he was involved in a kickback scheme involving government contracts while he was governor. The vice president has called the allegations "damned lies."

The New York Times reported today that Agnew was briefed by Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson 10 days ago about the federal bribery and kickback investigation involving the vice president.

The Times said Richardson told Agnew what the government's case consisted of so far, including testimony that three former Agnew associates had told prosecutors they gave cash payments to Agnew.

Northrop also announced he was granting U.S. District Judge C. Stanley Blair's request to be relieved of supervising the grand jury's investigation.

Commune Ordinance And Sikh Ashram

Somewhat of a furore — certainly not unexpected — has arisen over the proposal of the San Rafael Planning Commission for an ordinance defining what constitutes a family for purposes of zoning.

The ordinance — like similar ones which have been adopted in other Marin cities — has promptly been labeled an "anti-commune ordinance." It has that character, because, by declaring that not more than five unrelated persons can be included in a family, it outlaws communes from single-family residential zones.

THE FACT THAT it should even be necessary to define "family" itself shows the need for such an ordinance. No longer is it accepted that a family consists of parents and children, with possibly grandparents and some in-laws sharing the home.

The "anti-commune" feature of such ordinances strikes at the practice, which is wholly without legal standing, of groups of adults of both sexes living together without benefit of matrimony and without solid ties — legal or otherwise — linking any man and woman in the group.

The opposition raises the familiar cry that, by outlawing communes in single-family residential zones, the city is trying to "legislate morals."

THERE IS, however, another reason for the existence of communes or what may appear to be communes: an economic reason. High rents in Marin virtually force group living on young couples who in many cases want no part of communes and would prefer the privacy of their own home or apartment.

This economic factor is put in sharp focus by the case of the ashram in the former Babcock mansion on Culloden Park Road.

This beautiful old home contains 25 rooms. It obviously is too big for today's families, and the rent (reportedly $1,500 per month) is prohibitive for a single-family dwelling. But it is in a single-family zone so cannot be split up into apartments.

In this home live some 28 members of a religious sect. The religion is Sikhism, which was begun by separatists within the Hindu religion who rejected both the Hindu caste system and its multiplicity of gods.

There are ascetic features to the Sikh religion, and an ashram is supposedly somewhat monastic, although the priesthood are permitted to marry.

This presents a quandary in enforcement of the proposed ordinance. The San Rafael City Council may, however, have a ready-made way out. The ordinance, as prepared, permits a use permit to be granted for a variance from the single-family requirement. If the ashram can demonstrate that it is a genuine religious colony, it might well be entitled to such a variance.

Not Just Good Eating

Some Marinites grow garlic in their gardens for its big, showy lavender blossoms. But it is for eating that most of us know garlic and its cousin, the onion.

However, both are important in European folk medicine. Both are powerful antiseptics. Garlic is helpful in influenza and bronchitis as an expectorant and for inducing perspiration. Onions have been used as a diuretic and for treating anemia and high blood pressure. Recently, doctors have learned that onions help reduce the amount of fat in the circulatory system.

That's worth a little halitosis.

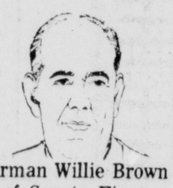
U.C. Princelings Begin To Lose Tax Exemptions



By EARL G. WATERS

The disclosures of high living at the taxpayers' expense enjoyed by favored officials of the University of California have brought about some leveling consequences.

Through the efforts of this column, the regents released the secret contract executed with U.C. President Charles J. Hitch. This revealed that, in addition to his $52,000 annual salary (which exceeds that paid the governor), he is also provided a home, servants, and other benefits which makes the job cost the taxpayers something more than $150,000 a year.

Subsequently it was discovered that other highly paid U.C. officials, namely the executive vice president and the chancellors, receive similar "fringe" benefits of homes, servants and entertainment funds. It was also learned that four of the 19 state college presidents are provided homes at less than nominal rent. Further, that State College Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke had recently been the beneficiary of a windfall in the form of a $350,000 Bel Air estate. This was given to the state and Dumke, who had previously provided his own home, has taken up residence for the ridiculous rental of $136 a month.

COINCIDENT WITH THAT revelation was the fact that an item in the recently adopted state budget proposed a gift of public funds in the form of housing allowances for the other state college presidents as well as an $8,000 maintenance allowance for Dumke's gift house.

The first consequence of these exposures was a deletion from the budget of the housing allowances. This was done by Ways and Means Chairman Willie Brown with the concurrence of Senate Finance Chairman Randolph Collier.

The next occurrence was the realization by some county assessors that they had been overlooking the levy of possessory interest taxes. Some, like Butte County Assessor Dave A. Vasco, had already levied the tax. So, too, had San Diego Assessor E. C. Williams, Contra Costa Assessor E. F. Wanaka, and Fresno Assessor Gerald B. Gard. Alameda Assessor Don J. Hutchinson had levied on Vice President McCorkle but had been stopped from levying on Chancellor Albert Bowker by the county counsel.

Santa Barbara Assessor William H. Cook and Santa Cruz Assessor John H. Seidlinger have now commenced the levy and it is reported Los Angeles Assessor Phillip Watson is moving on the residences of Dumke and others. However, Riverside Assessor Frank C. Seeley has reported the chancellor residence in his county "is not taxable as there is no possessory interest."

His view is at odds with all of the other assessors. It is also contrary to an opinion of the legislative counsel obtained by Sen. John Stull (R-Encinitas). The solon asked if residences provided its employees by the state were subject to local taxation. The counsel replied that "any possessory interest a state employee may have in such property is subject to taxation." Stull also asked if the state had authority to pay such taxes for the employee and if it did so would that payment be subject to income tax. The counsel said the state could pay but it would be subject to income tax.

THE COUNSEL, however, overlooked State Board of Control rules which declare that possessory interest taxes levied on employees "shall not be reimbursed directly or indirectly."

The question of state income tax liability for the homes, servants and other benefits provided these officials was also asked. The counsel ruled these should be included in income tax computations unless specifically exempted or if the employee is required to live on the premises.

Federal law provides that neither an employment contract nor state law shall be determinative as to the taxability of such benefits. The claim that these officials must live in these mansions in order to do their job is sheer fiction.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Bus Service Cutback Hard On Pocketbook

Enjoy reading your editorials each day and am prompted to write and say thank you for Friday's gem as it surely hits home.

That the supervisors may not "know a great deal about mass transit" is probably heightened by the fact that they are not in need of it for their personal use.

We are recently moved here from San Francisco and were delighted to find we had nearby transportation to enable us to get around the county. We are among the small percentage who haven't a second car (the Mr. has use of company truck so in fact we haven't even a first).

With the recent cutback it will almost force us to use a taxi for use to doctor appointments, for one, so that we don't have to spend all day to get to and from our destinations. We understand the cutback as there have been few riders on the bus when we have had need for the service, but it certainly isn't going to help our budget any to have to start using cabs to get to shopping areas or just into Corte Madera to the transfer points where buses run more frequently.

Large Benefits Seen From Watergate

Now that the Watergate hearings have been recessed, I am moved to comment regarding some of the salutary by-products which I feel will evolve from this blot upon our escutcheon.

Never again will a President attempt to lead us stealthily into a dictatorship by entering into an unholy collaboration among the executive branch of our government, the military and wealthy corporate vested interests, each existing for mutual benefit and power, deaf to the interests of the people of the U.S.

No more will the chief executive be able to euphemize a cooruptive venal posture by shouting "national security." No more will he be able to impound funds, ignore congressional resolutions, or subvert the FBI or the CIA, or attack a free press which in its conscience saw fit to disagree with him, or threaten IRS adults, commit burglaries, bugging or secret tapings, or pack a supreme court as a "tailor made" instrument for personal support.

With the demise of these evils, the police state must disappear, and once again civil liberty and human dignity will become a way of life, instead of having to bear a rape upon itself.

We are a lucky people, because once again we have been given an opportunity to exercise our democratic vigilance against corruption, and threat against privacy invasion, to elect representatives who will have the legislative "guts" to exercise restraint against the military, the burgeoning executive power and the industrial tycoons who never have to worry about the affliction of inflation.

If we fail now, "So what else is new?"

ART BUCHWALD

Doing Husband's Penance, Or, Fun At The Laundromat

(Art Buchwald has gone off for a few weeks to forget about Watergate. He left behind some of his all-time favorite columns which he insists to the best of his recollection, at that point in time and in hindsight, everyone wanted to read again.)

WASHINGTON — There comes a time in every man's vacation when he has to go to the laundromat. My time came earlier than I had expected and I found myself struggling with not one but two baskets of dirty laundry. I threw one into the machine and then sat down on the bench to watch it as it whirled around.

"What are you in for?" the man sitting next to me asked.

"I got caught playing gin rummy when I was supposed to be watching the kids in the swimming pool," I said. "What did you do?"

"I made the mistake of taking a sunbath next to the house," he replied. "My wife said, 'As long as you're doing nothing why don't you take the clothes to the laundromat?' I said I wasn't doing nothing, I was doing something. I was sunbathing. She said, 'That's next to nothing.' So here I am. I never realized there was this much dirty laundry in the world."

"WHAT DO YOU use?"

"I don't know. Just any detergent."

"Don't you use a bleach?"

"I did once, and the towels came out lily white."

"What's wrong with that?"

"They were blue when I put them in. What do you use?"

"I use an all-purpose soap that makes our clothes fluffy and clean because it has no harsh ingredients. Look at my hands. They're so soft you would hardly guess I did any laundry at all."

"My hands are rough all the time. Maybe I'll switch over to your soap. Who told you about it?"

"My mother-in-law."

"I guess she should know."

"LET ME ASK you something. Do you find it's a mistake to put blue jeans in with sheets?"

"I try to avoid it, if I possibly can. But if I only have one basket, I don't have a choice."

"Which cycle do you like the best?"

"I like to watch the clothes being rinsed after they've been washed."

"I prefer the drying cycle because then I know I'm almost finished. But sometimes you can get some fun out of the first cycle when the soap starts attacking the clothes. Once, two of my sport shirts got all tangled up, and I bet the guy sitting next to me five bucks the blue one would win. But I lost."

"I never thought of betting on laundry."

"I'll tell you one thing. It was more interesting than watching the Super Bowl."

"THAT LADY over there has her eye on my laundromat. I still have another basket to do."

"You'd better go over and protect it. Women have no mercy in this place."

"How come they look so nice on the beach and so mean when they come here?"

"I've always wondered that myself. Maybe it's because they couldn't get their husbands to come. Hey, look! There's a bra caught in a beach robe."

"Gee, it's as much fun as watching 'Last Tango.' "

"I'll give you five bucks the beach robe wins," he said.

"You're got yourself a bet," I replied excitedly.

MARQUIS CHILDS

Agnew Admission Hints Reason For Highway Lobby's Power

WASHINGTON — The one confession that Vice-President Spiro Agnew made, if only glancingly, in his press conference, gets down to the guts of the matter. Anyone who doesn't know that campaign contributions come from contractors doing business with the state is naive, he said.

The vice president as governor of Maryland was a large and vital part of the highway operation, with contractors spending hundreds of millions of dollars to pave the state with concrete. What the grand jury in Baltimore is trying to sort out is when a campaign contribution becomes a bribe. The line between the two is almost invisible.

It is the system of contracts for contributions in which Agnew has been a willing player that should be gone into, and eventually rooted out. This is far more important than whether one individual or several individuals took contractors' money meant to be paid off with a reward once the recipient was in the seat of authority.

THE HIGHWAY BILLIONS are entwined with Congress and every state capital in the country. The highway lobby, with the principal focus in the American Roadbuilders Association, is rated as the most powerful in Washington. The affinity with Senate and House Public Works Committees is close and mutually endearing.

An example of the bond that ties the two together is in the year-long struggle to bring out a highway bill that would yield something more than cheese parings for mass transit. Harpooned at the end of the 1972 session, the bill was wrangled over this year, ending with a Senate-House conference that went on for three months. It was in this closed-door struggle that the highway lobbyists and their congressional allies made a last-ditch stand.

Waiting on the sidelines, asking like Oliver Twist for just a little bit more, were the advocates of help for mass transit, the starving poor relative of the highway builders. What finally came out was more than what at one time seemed possible.

OUT OF THE HIGHWAY Trust Fund, broken for the first time, there will be $200 million for bus purchases beginning in January. In fiscal 1976 mass transit will get $800 million not restricted to any form of transportation. A few senators from city-city states held out against the highway bulldozers.

But the triumph for mass transit pales alongside what the highway contractors walked away with. The total for interstate roads was $8.6 billion over three years and for primary and secondary roads it was $3.3 billion. This will mean additional thousands of square miles of concrete spread over the tortured earth.

Even so, this was not enough to satisfy the voracious appetite of those who want it all. Rep. William H. Harsha of Ohio, ranking Republican member of the House Public Works Committee, demanded to know after the conference report became public why, if the highway lobby is so powerful, it had not been around to block this steal from the sacred trust fund.

Behind the highway lobby are the motor car industry and the oil companies. Here are the powers that rule the economy, with one out of every six persons employed in building cars or keepingger the wheels running. They may, however, have their rule challenged by a new broom in the Environmental Protection Agency.

Russell E. Train, appointed director after the post had been vacant for many weeks, may put a brake on the motor car, the chief pollutant of the atmosphere. Plans have been formulated for curbing the one-driver-one-car commuter into the central city from the suburbs. Train has proved his ability and he is said to have been given ample authority to move against the pollution rapidly destroying the environment.

IN CALLING a press conference and uttering forthright denials of the charges brought against him by the Baltimore prosecutor, Agnew made a good beginning in his own defense. That he will continue to be equally forthright, with no evasion behind legal technicalities, is important both for the vice president and for the public belief in what is left of integrity and confidence.

For Agnew, however, thereis a larger opportunity. Given his knowledge of the contracting-contribution system he could, when the dust of his own alleged involvement has cleared away, call for drastic reforms. That he will do so is highly improbable.

East-West Detente Means Yalta Agreements Ratified

The old familiar cold war world is coming down.

The State Department in Washington has issued visas for a delegation of North Korean observers to come to the United Nations in New York. No North Korean was ever allowed to come to New York before. And formal talks have been opened by Washington with the East Germans over the establishments of embassies in the two countries.

This is the immediate meaning of detente — North Koreans at the U.N. and an East German embassy in Washington. There will also be an American embassy in East Germany.

But what of the long range meaning of detente?

THE RECOGNITION of East Germany by the United States, by West Germany, and by the rest of Western Europe, is a momentous fact. It is part of the larger fact that the West has given Russia one thing which the Russians have wanted ever since the end of World War II. The West has finally, at long last, accepted the control by men of the Kremlin of everything lying between the Pripet marshes and the river Elbe. Another way of saying it is that the West has finally ratified the Yalta agreements.

Those Yalta agreements were the most controversial feature of the World War II settlement. They recognized that the Kremlin was in effective control of those parts of Europe from which the German armies had been expelled by Russian troops. It meant that many a great city of classic Europe — Warsaw, Prague, Belgrade, Budapest, and, above all, Berlin — had been severed from its normal relations with the West and been chained to Russia. Winston Churchill's phrasing was that an iron curtain had been rung down "from Stettin to Trieste."

The cold war was about many things, but more than anything else about whether Moscow should indeed continue to be in control of all those great cities of old Europe which lie behind the line which runs "from Stettin to Trieste." The West was most reluctant to accept a condition which severed the ties between Western and Eastern Europe. For a quarter of a century after the West held back from ratifying the Yalta agreements, a cold war seemed preferable. It kept open the possibility of liberation for the peoples of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania, and Bulgaria.

WELL, THE LIBERATION did not come. The decisive moment came when Russian tanks moved into Prague and ended Czechoslovakia's bid for freedom. The West never lifted a finger to try to halt those Russian tanks. Resistance was crushed out among the Czechoslovaks.

So now we have detente, which means ratification of Yalta. And that in turn means that Moscow is now in undisputed control over all that lies behind the old iron curtain.

But what comes later? Is the Kremlin satisfied? Is it enough for their sense of security to know that the West no longer challenges their control over Eastern Europe? Or do they want more.

No one in the foreign offices of the West seriously thinks any more that the Kremlin has military designs on Western Europe, or even wants to obtain control over it through Communist governments. But there is a deep anxiety about another possible development.

If Western Europe remains disunited, and becomes estranged from the United States, and American troops go home, Moscow will be in effect in control of Western Europe without having to move a soldier or ferment a revolution.

THE UNITY of Western Europe and the continued association between that unity and the United States is the crucial thing. Will Europe as it grows more united (if it does) retain cordial and cooperative relations with the United States?

These are the great questions troubling western diplomats and statesmen these days. And the most troubling fact of all is that no one can be entirely sure that the right answers are coming up.

This is just one reason why among western diplomats there is a hope that Washington will find a way out of Watergate soon, so that firm leadership will again be available for tackling the problems of improving the unity of the West.

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

The gasoline shortage has reached serious proportions in Colorado, where lawmen report that it's causing a scarcity of drunk drivers.

Nobody knows where all the drunk drivers have gone, but we suspect they're holed up in taverns.

Filling the wrong tank, no doubt.

Unable to waste their money on gasoline, Coloradans may be spending it on booze.

The trouble with reducing inebriated-driver totals, it increases the number of drunk walkers.

The "anti-commune" feature of such ordinances strikes at the practice, which is wholly without legal standing, of groups of adults of both sexes living together without benefit of matrimony and without solid ties — legal or otherwise — linking any man and woman in the group.

The opposition raises the familiar cry that, by outlawing communes in single-family residential zones, the city is trying to "legislate morals."

THERE IS, however, another reason for the existence of communes or what may appear to be communes: an economic reason. High rents in Marin virtually force group living on young couples who in many cases want no part of communes and would prefer the privacy of their own home or apartment.

This economic factor is put in sharp focus by the case of the ashram in the former Babcock mansion on Culloden Park Road.

This beautiful old home contains 25 rooms. It obviously is too big for today's families, and the rent (reportedly $1,500 per month) is prohibitive for a single-family dwelling. But it is in a single-family zone so cannot be split up into apartments.

In this home live some 28 members of a religious sect. The religion is Sikhism, which was begun by separatists within the Hindu religion who rejected both the Hindu caste system and its multiplicity of gods.

There are ascetic features to the Sikh religion, and an ashram is supposedly somewhat monastic, although the priesthood are permitted to marry.

This presents a quandary in enforcement of the proposed ordinance. The San Rafael City Council may, however, have a ready-made way out. The ordinance, as prepared, permits a use permit to be granted for a variance from the single-family requirement. If the ashram can demonstrate that it is a genuine religious colony, it might well be entitled to such a variance.

Not Just Good Eating

Some Marinites grow garlic in their gardens for its big, showy lavender blossoms. But it is for eating that most of us know garlic and its cousin, the onion.

However, both are important in European folk medicine. Both are powerful antiseptics. Garlic is helpful in influenza and bronchitis as an expectorant and for inducing perspiration. Onions have been used as a diuretic and for treating anemia and high blood pressure. Recently, doctors have learned that onions help reduce the amount of fat in the circulatory system.

That's worth a little halitosis.

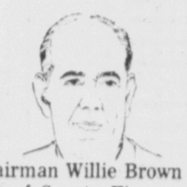
U.C. Princelings Begin To Lose Tax Exemptions



By EARL G. WATERS

The disclosures of high living at the taxpayers' expense enjoyed by favored officials of the University of California have brought about some leveling consequences.

Through the efforts of this column, the regents released the secret contract executed with U.C. President Charles J. Hitch. This revealed that, in addition to his $52,000 annual salary (which exceeds that paid the governor), he is also provided a home, servants, and other benefits which makes the job cost the taxpayers something more than $150,000 a year.

Subsequently it was discovered that other highly paid U.C. officials, namely the executive vice president and the chancellors, receive similar "fringe" benefits of homes, servants and entertainment funds. It was also learned that four of the 19 state college presidents are provided homes at less than nominal rent. Further, that State College Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke had recently been the beneficiary of a windfall in the form of a $350,000 Bel Air estate. This was given to the state and Dumke, who had previously provided his own home, has taken up residence for the ridiculous rental of $136 a month.

COINCIDENT WITH THAT revelation was the fact that an item in the recently adopted state budget proposed a gift of public funds in the form of housing allowances for the other state college presidents as well as an $8,000 maintenance allowance for Dumke's gift house.

The first consequence of these exposures was a deletion from the budget of the housing allowances. This was done by Ways and Means Chairman Willie Brown with the concurrence of Senate Finance Chairman Randolph Collier.

The next occurrence was the realization by some county assessors that they had been overlooking the levy of possessory interest taxes. Some, like Butte County Assessor Dave A. Vasco, had already levied the tax. So, too, had San Diego Assessor E. C. Williams, Contra Costa Assessor E. F. Wanaka, and Fresno Assessor Gerald B. Gard. Alameda Assessor Don J. Hutchinson had levied on Vice President McCorkle but had been stopped from levying on Chancellor Albert Bowker by the county counsel.

Santa Barbara Assessor William H. Cook and Santa Cruz Assessor John H. Seidlinger have now commenced the levy and it is reported Los Angeles Assessor Phillip Watson is moving on the residences of Dumke and others. However, Riverside Assessor Frank C. Seeley has reported the chancellor residence in his county "is not taxable as there is no possessory interest."

His view is at odds with all of the other assessors. It is also contrary to an opinion of the legislative counsel obtained by Sen. John Stull (R-Encinitas). The solon asked if residences provided its employees by the state were subject to local taxation. The counsel replied that "any possessory interest a state employee may have in such property is subject to taxation." Stull also asked if the state had authority to pay such taxes for the employee and if it did so would that payment be subject to income tax. The counsel said the state could pay but it would be subject to income tax.

THE COUNSEL, however, overlooked State Board of Control rules which declare that possessory interest taxes levied on employees "shall not be reimbursed directly or indirectly."

The question of state income tax liability for the homes, servants and other benefits provided these officials was also asked. The counsel ruled these should be included in income tax computations unless specifically exempted or if the employee is required to live on the premises.

Federal law provides that neither an employment contract nor state law shall be determinative as to the taxability of such benefits. The claim that these officials must live in these mansions in order to do their job is sheer fiction.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Bus Service Cutback Hard On Pocketbook

Enjoy reading your editorials each day and am prompted to write and say thank you for Friday's gem as it surely hits home.

That the supervisors may not "know a great deal about mass transit" is probably heightened by the fact that they are not in need of it for their personal use.

We are recently moved here from San Francisco and were delighted to find we had nearby transportation to enable us to get around the county. We are among the small percentage who haven't a second car (the Mr. has use of company truck so in fact we haven't even a first).

With the recent cutback it will almost force us to use a taxi for use to doctor appointments, for one, so that we don't have to spend all day to get to and from our destinations. We understand the cutback as there have been few riders on the bus when we have had need for the service, but it certainly isn't going to help our budget any to have to start using cabs to get to shopping areas or just into Corte Madera to the transfer points where buses run more frequently.

Large Benefits Seen From Watergate

Now that the Watergate hearings have been recessed, I am moved to comment regarding some of the salutary by-products which I feel will evolve from this blot upon our escutcheon.

Never again will a President attempt to lead us stealthily into a dictatorship by entering into an unholy collaboration among the executive branch of our government, the military and wealthy corporate vested interests, each existing for mutual benefit and power, deaf to the interests of the people of the U.S.

No more will the chief executive be able to euphemize a cooruptive venal posture by shouting "national security." No more will he be able to impound funds, ignore congressional resolutions, or subvert the FBI or the CIA, or attack a free press which in its conscience saw fit to disagree with him, or threaten IRS adults, commit burglaries, bugging or secret tapings, or pack a supreme court as a "tailor made" instrument for personal support.

With the demise of these evils, the police state must disappear, and once again civil liberty and human dignity will become a way of life, instead of having to bear a rape upon itself.

We are a lucky people, because once again we have been given an opportunity to exercise our democratic vigilance against corruption, and threat against privacy invasion, to elect representatives who will have the legislative "guts" to exercise restraint against the military, the burgeoning executive power and the industrial tycoons who never have to worry about the affliction of inflation.

If we fail now, "So what else is new?"

ART BUCHWALD

Doing Husband's Penance, Or, Fun At The Laundromat

(Art Buchwald has gone off for a few weeks to forget about Watergate. He left behind some of his all-time favorite columns which he insists to the best of his recollection, at that point in time and in hindsight, everyone wanted to read again.)

WASHINGTON — There comes a time in every man's vacation when he has to go to the laundromat. My time came earlier than I had expected and I found myself struggling with not one but two baskets of dirty laundry. I threw one into the machine and then sat down on the bench to watch it as it whirled around.

"What are you in for?" the man sitting next to me asked.

"I got caught playing gin rummy when I was supposed to be watching the kids in the swimming pool," I said. "What did you do?"

"I made the mistake of taking a sunbath next to the house," he replied. "My wife said, 'As long as you're doing nothing why don't you take the clothes to the laundromat?' I said I wasn't doing nothing, I was doing something. I was sunbathing. She said, 'That's next to nothing.' So here I am. I never realized there was this much dirty laundry in the world."

"WHAT DO YOU use?"

"I don't know. Just any detergent."

"Don't you use a bleach?"

"I did once, and the towels came out lily white."

"What's wrong with that?"

"They were blue when I put them in. What do you use?"

"I use an all-purpose soap that makes our clothes fluffy and clean because it has no harsh ingredients. Look at my hands. They're so soft you would hardly guess I did any laundry at all."

"My hands are rough all the time. Maybe I'll switch over to your soap. Who told you about it?"

"My mother-in-law."

"I guess she should know."

"LET ME ASK you something. Do you find it's a mistake to put blue jeans in with sheets?"

"I try to avoid it, if I possibly can. But if I only have one basket, I don't have a choice."

"Which cycle do you like the best?"

"I like to watch the clothes being rinsed after they've been washed."

"I prefer the drying cycle because then I know I'm almost finished. But sometimes you can get some fun out of the first cycle when the soap starts attacking the clothes. Once, two of my sport shirts got all tangled up, and I bet the guy sitting next to me five bucks the blue one would win. But I lost."

"I never thought of betting on laundry."

"I'll tell you one thing. It was more interesting than watching the Super Bowl."

"THAT LADY over there has her eye on my laundromat. I still have another basket to do."

"You'd better go over and protect it. Women have no mercy in this place."

"How come they look so nice on the beach and so mean when they come here?"

"I've always wondered that myself. Maybe it's because they couldn't get their husbands to come. Hey, look! There's a bra caught in a beach robe."

"Gee, it's as much fun as watching 'Last Tango.' "

"I'll give you five bucks the beach robe wins," he said.

"You're got yourself a bet," I replied excitedly.

MARQUIS CHILDS

Agnew Admission Hints Reason For Highway Lobby's Power

WASHINGTON — The one confession that Vice-President Spiro Agnew made, if only glancingly, in his press conference, gets down to the guts of the matter. Anyone who doesn't know that campaign contributions come from contractors doing business with the state is naive, he said.

The vice president as governor of Maryland was a large and vital part of the highway operation, with contractors spending hundreds of millions of dollars to pave the state with concrete. What the grand jury in Baltimore is trying to sort out is when a campaign contribution becomes a bribe. The line between the two is almost invisible.

It is the system of contracts for contributions in which Agnew has been a willing player that should be gone into, and eventually rooted out. This is far more important than whether one individual or several individuals took contractors' money meant to be paid off with a reward once the recipient was in the seat of authority.

THE HIGHWAY BILLIONS are entwined with Congress and every state capital in the country. The highway lobby, with the principal focus in the American Roadbuilders Association, is rated as the most powerful in Washington. The affinity with Senate and House Public Works Committees is close and mutually endearing.

An example of the bond that ties the two together is in the year-long struggle to bring out a highway bill that would yield something more than cheese parings for mass transit. Harpooned at the end of the 1972 session, the bill was wrangled over this year, ending with a Senate-House conference that went on for three months. It was in this closed-door struggle that the highway lobbyists and their congressional allies made a last-ditch stand.

Waiting on the sidelines, asking like Oliver Twist for just a little bit more, were the advocates of help for mass transit, the starving poor relative of the highway builders. What finally came out was more than what at one time seemed possible.

OUT OF THE HIGHWAY Trust Fund, broken for the first time, there will be $200 million for bus purchases beginning in January. In fiscal 1976 mass transit will get $800 million not restricted to any form of transportation. A few senators from city-city states held out against the highway bulldozers.

But the triumph for mass transit pales alongside what the highway contractors walked away with. The total for interstate roads was $8.6 billion over three years and for primary and secondary roads it was $3.3 billion. This will mean additional thousands of square miles of concrete spread over the tortured earth.

Even so, this was not enough to satisfy the voracious appetite of those who want it all. Rep. William H. Harsha of Ohio, ranking Republican member of the House Public Works Committee, demanded to know after the conference report became public why, if the highway lobby is so powerful, it had not been around to block this steal from the sacred trust fund.

Behind the highway lobby are the motor car industry and the oil companies. Here are the powers that rule the economy, with one out of every six persons employed in building cars or keepingger the wheels running. They may, however, have their rule challenged by a new broom in the Environmental Protection Agency.

Russell E. Train, appointed director after the post had been vacant for many weeks, may put a brake on the motor car, the chief pollutant of the atmosphere. Plans have been formulated for curbing the one-driver-one-car commuter into the central city from the suburbs. Train has proved his ability and he is said to have been given ample authority to move against the pollution rapidly destroying the environment.

IN CALLING a press conference and uttering forthright denials of the charges brought against him by the Baltimore prosecutor, Agnew made a good beginning in his own defense. That he will continue to be equally forthright, with no evasion behind legal technicalities, is important both for the vice president and for the public belief in what is left of integrity and confidence.

For Agnew, however, thereis a larger opportunity. Given his knowledge of the contracting-contribution system he could, when the dust of his own alleged involvement has cleared away, call for drastic reforms. That he will do so is highly improbable.

East-West Detente Means Yalta Agreements Ratified

The old familiar cold war world is coming down.

The State Department in Washington has issued visas for a delegation of North Korean observers to come to the United Nations in New York. No North Korean was ever allowed to come to New York before. And formal talks have been opened by Washington with the East Germans over the establishments of embassies in the two countries.

This is the immediate meaning of detente — North Koreans at the U.N. and an East German embassy in Washington. There will also be an American embassy in East Germany.

But what of the long range meaning of detente?

THE RECOGNITION of East Germany by the United States, by West Germany, and by the rest of Western Europe, is a momentous fact. It is part of the larger fact that the West has given Russia one thing which the Russians have wanted ever since the end of World War II. The West has finally, at long last, accepted the control by men of the Kremlin of everything lying between the Pripet marshes and the river Elbe. Another way of saying it is that the West has finally ratified the Yalta agreements.

Those Yalta agreements were the most controversial feature of the World War II settlement. They recognized that the Kremlin was in effective control of those parts of Europe from which the German armies had been expelled by Russian troops. It meant that many a great city of classic Europe — Warsaw, Prague, Belgrade, Budapest, and, above all, Berlin — had been severed from its normal relations with the West and been chained to Russia. Winston Churchill's phrasing was that an iron curtain had been rung down "from Stettin to Trieste."

The cold war was about many things, but more than anything else about whether Moscow should indeed continue to be in control of all those great cities of old Europe which lie behind the line which runs "from Stettin to Trieste." The West was most reluctant to accept a condition which severed the ties between Western and Eastern Europe. For a quarter of a century after the West held back from ratifying the Yalta agreements, a cold war seemed preferable. It kept open the possibility of liberation for the peoples of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania, and Bulgaria.

WELL, THE LIBERATION did not come. The decisive moment came when Russian tanks moved into Prague and ended Czechoslovakia's bid for freedom. The West never lifted a finger to try to halt those Russian tanks. Resistance was crushed out among the Czechoslovaks.

So now we have detente, which means ratification of Yalta. And that in turn means that Moscow is now in undisputed control over all that lies behind the old iron curtain.

But what comes later? Is the Kremlin satisfied? Is it enough for their sense of security to know that the West no longer challenges their control over Eastern Europe? Or do they want more.

No one in the foreign offices of the West seriously thinks any more that the Kremlin has military designs on Western Europe, or even wants to obtain control over it through Communist governments. But there is a deep anxiety about another possible development.

If Western Europe remains disunited, and becomes estranged from the United States, and American troops go home, Moscow will be in effect in control of Western Europe without having to move a soldier or ferment a revolution.

THE UNITY of Western Europe and the continued association between that unity and the United States is the crucial thing. Will Europe as it grows more united (if it does) retain cordial and cooperative relations with the United States?

These are the great questions troubling western diplomats and statesmen these days. And the most troubling fact of all is that no one can be entirely sure that the right answers are coming up.

This is just one reason why among western diplomats there is a hope that Washington will find a way out of Watergate soon, so that firm leadership will again be available for tackling the problems of improving the unity of the West.

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

The gasoline shortage has reached serious proportions in Colorado, where lawmen report that it's causing a scarcity of drunk drivers.

Nobody knows where all the drunk drivers have gone, but we suspect they're holed up in taverns.

Filling the wrong tank, no doubt.

Unable to waste their money on gasoline, Coloradans may be spending it on booze.

The trouble with reducing inebriated-driver totals, it increases the number of drunk walkers.

IF MOTHER NATURE RAPS CALIFORNIA ...

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The 10 major geological hazards facing California from 1970 to the year 2000 and their projected losses are:

Earthquake shaking, $21 billion.

Loss of mineral resources (due to urban development in mineral areas), $17 billion.

Landsliding, $919 billion.

Flooding, $6.5 billion.

Erosion, $600 million.

Expansive soil (shrinking and swelling), $150 million.

Fault displacement, $76 million.

Volcanic eruption, $49 million.

Tsunami, $41 million.

Subsidence (due to ground water, oil, gas removal), $26 million.

Geologists Plan State Safety Plan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Earthquakes in California in the next 30 years could kill more than 70,000 persons, injure tens of thousands of others and cause an estimated $21 billion damage, a state geological report said Wednesday.

The Urban Geology Master Plan for California also said that in addition to earthquakes the state faces nine other major geological hazards, including loss of mineral resources, flooding and landslides, which could cause $55 billion damage.

The report, prepared over a three year period is intended to help state and local agencies plan for safe and orderly growth in relation to geological hazards.

State Geologist Wesley G. Bruer said the study also makes broad recommendations which could possibly reduce the total $55 billion damage by 69 per cent, but at a cost to the state of $6 billion.

The recommendations include better earthquake prediction, vigorous enforcement of improved building codes, land use zoning, and the addition of geologists to the staffs of state and local agencies.

Thomas E. Gay Jr., a senior state geologist and one of three authors of the study, said that although the report dramatized loss figures, it was not intended to be a "scare report."

But he added, "It's an expression of the seriousness of the problem. There are things that should be done and we should get to them."

He said state and local agencies should plan ahead and "not wait to be reminded by earthquakes or flooding disasters."

Pointing out that since 1812 recorded earthquakes have killed 1,020 persons and caused damage totaling $1.1 billion in the state, the report said:

"Given a continuation of present conditions, it is estimated that losses due to earthquake shaking will total $21 billion in California between 1970 and the year 2000. Most of the damage and loss of life will occur in zones of known high seismic activity."

The report also said "as many as 10,360 deaths and 40,360 hospitalized injuries have been projected to result from an 8.3 magnitude earthquake on the San Andreas fault near San Francisco."

An additional 30,000 deaths could result from earthquake induced dam failures in the San Francisco Bay area, it added.

"A hypothetical, but expectable, large earthquake in the Los Angeles area has been projected to result in 10,000 deaths," it continued.

But the report also said quake damage and loss of life could be dramatically reduced.

"If present day techniques for reducing losses from earthquake shaking were applied to the fullest degree, life loss could be reduced by at least 90 per cent, and the total dollar value of losses could be reduced by as much as 50 per cent," the report said.

The cost of the loss reduction, the report added, would be more than $2 billion.

"Priority efforts, such as strengthening, demolishing, or reducing to a lesser use, need to be applied to reducing life loss due to collapse of hazardous old buildings," it said.

"Priority of geologic and seismologic efforts should be given to areas which are undergoing redevelopment or rapid urbanization or which are anticipated to become urbanized between the present and the year 2000."

East San Rafael Area Industry Zone Voted

The San Rafael Planning Commission Tuesday night approved a zoning change which will permit construction of an office and light industrial complex on a 6.5-acre parcel off the Jacoby Street extension.

The commission denied owner Kart Kissman's original request that the property be zoned for "heavy commercial manufacturing". Instead it granted the more restrictive "planned commercial manufacturing" zoning, which it felt was "more consistent" with Kissman's intended use, according to James Louie, city associate planner.

The plan calls for the construction of 248,928 square feet of buildings on the parcel in four phases. Office space will confined to 24,084 square feet, with the remainder used for light industrial and warehouse area.

Louis said that each phase must pass design review by the commission before construction can go on.

Tenants of the complex will be members of a condominium association that will own the development and maintain the building and grounds by forming as assessment district.

The development will include 309 parking spaces. Commissioners expressed concern that care be taken in landscaping and design to "insure it's an attractive development because it's at an entry point into Marin" via Highway 17, Louis said.

San Rafael Planning Commission also:

BUS FACILITY — Heard a report but took no action on progress of an environmental impact study of Golden Gate Bridge District's proposed enlargement of bus maintenance facilities on Jacoby Street extension.

TERRA LINDA — Agreed on appeal to consider a new request by Carlos Gonzalez for a two-lot subdivision of a 32.2 acre parcel owned by the Freitas family at the end of Terra Linda Drive. The city planning staff had refused to pass on the request on grounds that it was substantially unchanged from one refused by the commission July 10.

NORTHGATE EAST — Approved a three-lot subdivision and site and landscaping plans for a "Velvet Turtle" restaurant and office building on property owned by Arthur R. Nicolaisen at 4040 Civic Center Drive.

AUTO DEALER — Approved site plans for construction of a new Wisnes Pontiac dealership at 601 DuBois Street, but asked that landscaping plans be submitted for further consideration.

CATALOG SALES — Approved a 10,000 square foot addition to Consumers Distributing Co., a catalog sales house, in Northgate Shopping Center.

SEARS — Approved additional parking area and site plans for a 1,000 square foot service building for the Sears facility at 2143 Francisco Boulevard.

HILLSIDE AVENUE — Declared there would be no general plan conflict with a proposed five-lot subdivision for construction of four homes on a 13-acre parcel with the remaining 8-acre parcel dedicated to open space, between Ross Valley and Westwood Drive, owned by the Meadowhill Corp.

YARD — Gave two-year approval for continued use by Piombo Brothers of its property at 2155 Francisco Boulevard as a construction yard, with the understanding that when the general plan takes effect it may be rezoned for other uses.

OUTDOOR SALES — Gave temporary approval to Miles Ferguson to use his property at 666 Francisco Boulevard for outdoor sale of Christmas trees, trucks, used cars, and recreation vehicles, with the understanding that it may be rezoned when the general plan takes effect.

SUBDIVISIONS — Approved subdivisions for Edwin Culter on his property at 708 Las Ovejas, Robert B. Freeman at 101 Toyon Way and V. Cliff and R. Deming at 217 and 221 Locust Avenue.

VARIANCES — Approved request for 12-inch deck encroachment into front yard setback at 54 Tierra Vista Way, requested by the owner, Summit Building Co.

ADJOURNED — Adjourned to 7:30 p.m. August 28 in city hall.

Refund Sought For Children's Care Program

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Reagan administration has filed to claim $18 million in available federal reimbursements for foster care programs, the chairman of the Joint Legislative Audit Committee says.

In a committee report on foster care in California, chairman Vincent Thomas, D-San Pedro, Tuesday said the unclaimed reimbursement funds occurred because of "inadequate, and in some cases inaccurate, information supplied to the county welfare agencies by the state Social Welfare Department for approximately 2,600 federally eligible children."

To correct the problem, Thomas recommended the department provide county welfare agencies with the needed information and properly identify children qualified for federal reimbursement.

He said the state's failure to claim the $18 million occurred since the inception of the child care program on Jan. 2, 1967, through last June 30.

Carnival Planned As Disease Benefit

A neighborhood carnival to benefit Muscular Dystrophy research will be held from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Aug. 25 at the Mary-Anne Holman home, 609 Vendola Drive.

The carnival, planned by Mrs. Holman's daughter, Marie, will include fortune-telling and children's games.

Burglary Case Trial Scheduled

A San Rafael woman involved in two cases in Marin courts was bound over to Marin Superior Court Tuesday to stand trial on a burglary charge.

Judge David R. Baty of Marin Municipal Court ordered Mynelle Glenny Griswold, 19, to appear in the higher court Monday after ruling during a preliminary hearing that there is enough evidence to try her.

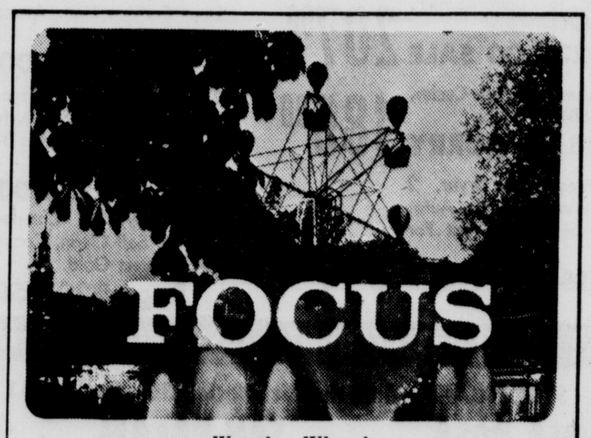
She is accused of taking part in the theft of $2,270 worth of goods from a San Rafael sport shop June 3.

Miss Griswold also faces a bad check charge and is awaiting trial in superior court in that case.

Moretti Becomes Reagan's Neighbor

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti has become a neighbor of Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Moretti Wednesday told newsmen he has rented a Sacramento home just yards away from Reagan's residence. "If he looks across his back yard, he looks at my house," Moretti said of the governor.



Wonder Wheel

Mr. Ferris' wheel and its offspring have been thrilling young and old alike for almost 80 years. Although the modern versions of the revolving wheel are somewhat different from the original, the high ride is still a popular attraction at most fairs and carnivals. George Ferris designed his first wheel for the 1893 Exposition in Chicago. Instead of the usual gondola carrying two or three persons, the first wheel had 36 cars capable of carrying 40 people each. During the Exposition over a million people each paid 50¢ for a ride that offered a panoramic view of Chicago and the surrounding area. Steam powered, the first wheel had a diameter of 250 feet.

DO YOU KNOW — Where is the largest ferris wheel now in operation?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Dr. Syngman Rhee was the first President of the Republic of Korea.

IF MOTHER NATURE RAPS CALIFORNIA ...

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The 10 major geological hazards facing California from 1970 to the year 2000 and their projected losses are:

Earthquake shaking, $21 billion.

Loss of mineral resources (due to urban development in mineral areas), $17 billion.

Landsliding, $919 billion.

Flooding, $6.5 billion.

Erosion, $600 million.

Expansive soil (shrinking and swelling), $150 million.

Fault displacement, $76 million.

Volcanic eruption, $49 million.

Tsunami, $41 million.

Subsidence (due to ground water, oil, gas removal), $26 million.

Geologists Plan State Safety Plan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Earthquakes in California in the next 30 years could kill more than 70,000 persons, injure tens of thousands of others and cause an estimated $21 billion damage, a state geological report said Wednesday.

The Urban Geology Master Plan for California also said that in addition to earthquakes the state faces nine other major geological hazards, including loss of mineral resources, flooding and landslides, which could cause $55 billion damage.

The report, prepared over a three year period is intended to help state and local agencies plan for safe and orderly growth in relation to geological hazards.

State Geologist Wesley G. Bruer said the study also makes broad recommendations which could possibly reduce the total $55 billion damage by 69 per cent, but at a cost to the state of $6 billion.

The recommendations include better earthquake prediction, vigorous enforcement of improved building codes, land use zoning, and the addition of geologists to the staffs of state and local agencies.

Thomas E. Gay Jr., a senior state geologist and one of three authors of the study, said that although the report dramatized loss figures, it was not intended to be a "scare report."

But he added, "It's an expression of the seriousness of the problem. There are things that should be done and we should get to them."

He said state and local agencies should plan ahead and "not wait to be reminded by earthquakes or flooding disasters."

Pointing out that since 1812 recorded earthquakes have killed 1,020 persons and caused damage totaling $1.1 billion in the state, the report said:

"Given a continuation of present conditions, it is estimated that losses due to earthquake shaking will total $21 billion in California between 1970 and the year 2000. Most of the damage and loss of life will occur in zones of known high seismic activity."

The report also said "as many as 10,360 deaths and 40,360 hospitalized injuries have been projected to result from an 8.3 magnitude earthquake on the San Andreas fault near San Francisco."

An additional 30,000 deaths could result from earthquake induced dam failures in the San Francisco Bay area, it added.

"A hypothetical, but expectable, large earthquake in the Los Angeles area has been projected to result in 10,000 deaths," it continued.

But the report also said quake damage and loss of life could be dramatically reduced.

"If present day techniques for reducing losses from earthquake shaking were applied to the fullest degree, life loss could be reduced by at least 90 per cent, and the total dollar value of losses could be reduced by as much as 50 per cent," the report said.

The cost of the loss reduction, the report added, would be more than $2 billion.

"Priority efforts, such as strengthening, demolishing, or reducing to a lesser use, need to be applied to reducing life loss due to collapse of hazardous old buildings," it said.

"Priority of geologic and seismologic efforts should be given to areas which are undergoing redevelopment or rapid urbanization or which are anticipated to become urbanized between the present and the year 2000."

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Former Indian Defense Minister V. K. Krishna Menon was hospitalized here early today after apparently suffering a heart attack.

East San Rafael Area Industry Zone Voted

The San Rafael Planning Commission Tuesday night approved a zoning change which will permit construction of an office and light industrial complex on a 6.5-acre parcel off the Jacoby Street extension.

The commission denied owner Kart Kissman's original request that the property be zoned for "heavy commercial manufacturing". Instead it granted the more restrictive "planned commercial manufacturing" zoning, which it felt was "more consistent" with Kissman's intended use, according to James Louie, city associate planner.

The plan calls for the construction of 248,928 square feet of buildings on the parcel in four phases. Office space will confined to 24,084 square feet, with the remainder used for light industrial and warehouse area.

Louis said that each phase must pass design review by the commission before construction can go on.

Tenants of the complex will be members of a condominium association that will own the development and maintain the building and grounds by forming as assessment district.

The development will include 309 parking spaces. Commissioners expressed concern that care be taken in landscaping and design to "insure it's an attractive development because it's at an entry point into Marin" via Highway 17, Louis said.

San Rafael Planning Commission also:

BUS FACILITY — Heard a report but took no action on progress of an environmental impact study of Golden Gate Bridge District's proposed enlargement of bus maintenance facilities on Jacoby Street extension.

TERRA LINDA — Agreed on appeal to consider a new request by Carlos Gonzalez for a two-lot subdivision of a 32.2 acre parcel owned by the Freitas family at the end of Terra Linda Drive. The city planning staff had refused to pass on the request on grounds that it was substantially unchanged from one refused by the commission July 10.

NORTHGATE EAST — Approved a three-lot subdivision and site and landscaping plans for a "Velvet Turtle" restaurant and office building on property owned by Arthur R. Nicolaisen at 4040 Civic Center Drive.

AUTO DEALER — Approved site plans for construction of a new Wisnes Pontiac dealership at 601 DuBois Street, but asked that landscaping plans be submitted for further consideration.

CATALOG SALES — Approved a 10,000 square foot addition to Consumers Distributing Co., a catalog sales house, in Northgate Shopping Center.

SEARS — Approved additional parking area and site plans for a 1,000 square foot service building for the Sears facility at 2143 Francisco Boulevard.

HILLSIDE AVENUE — Declared there would be no general plan conflict with a proposed five-lot subdivision for construction of four homes on a 13-acre parcel with the remaining 8-acre parcel dedicated to open space, between Ross Valley and Westwood Drive, owned by the Meadowhill Corp.

YARD — Gave two-year approval for continued use by Piombo Brothers of its property at 2155 Francisco Boulevard as a construction yard, with the understanding that when the general plan takes effect it may be rezoned for other uses.

OUTDOOR SALES — Gave temporary approval to Miles Ferguson to use his property at 666 Francisco Boulevard for outdoor sale of Christmas trees, trucks, used cars, and recreation vehicles, with the understanding that it may be rezoned when the general plan takes effect.

SUBDIVISIONS — Approved subdivisions for Edwin Culter on his property at 708 Las Ovejas, Robert B. Freeman at 101 Toyon Way and V. Cliff and R. Deming at 217 and 221 Locust Avenue.

VARIANCES — Approved request for 12-inch deck encroachment into front yard setback at 54 Tierra Vista Way, requested by the owner, Summit Building Co.

ADJOURNED — Adjourned to 7:30 p.m. August 28 in city hall.

Refund Sought For Children's Care Program

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Reagan administration has filed to claim $18 million in available federal reimbursements for foster care programs, the chairman of the Joint Legislative Audit Committee says.

In a committee report on foster care in California, chairman Vincent Thomas, D-San Pedro, Tuesday said the unclaimed reimbursement funds occurred because of "inadequate, and in some cases inaccurate, information supplied to the county welfare agencies by the state Social Welfare Department for approximately 2,600 federally eligible children."

To correct the problem, Thomas recommended the department provide county welfare agencies with the needed information and properly identify children qualified for federal reimbursement.

He said the state's failure to claim the $18 million occurred since the inception of the child care program on Jan. 2, 1967, through last June 30.

Carnival Planned As Disease Benefit

A neighborhood carnival to benefit Muscular Dystrophy research will be held from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Aug. 25 at the Mary-Anne Holman home, 609 Vendola Drive.

The carnival, planned by Mrs. Holman's daughter, Marie, will include fortune-telling and children's games.

Burglary Case Trial Scheduled

A San Rafael woman involved in two cases in Marin courts was bound over to Marin Superior Court Tuesday to stand trial on a burglary charge.

Judge David R. Baty of Marin Municipal Court ordered Mynelle Glenny Griswold, 19, to appear in the higher court Monday after ruling during a preliminary hearing that there is enough evidence to try her.

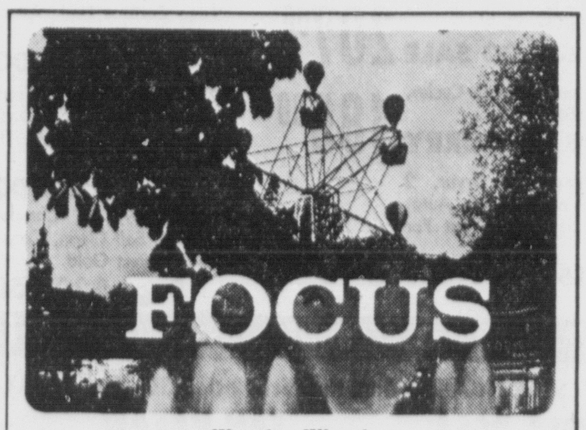
She is accused of taking part in the theft of $2,270 worth of goods from a San Rafael sport shop June 3.

Miss Griswold also faces a bad check charge and is awaiting trial in superior court in that case.

Moretti Becomes Reagan's Neighbor

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti has become a neighbor of Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Moretti Wednesday told newsmen he has rented a Sacramento home just yards away from Reagan's residence. "If he looks across his back yard, he looks at my house," Moretti said of the governor.



Wonder Wheel

Mr. Ferris' wheel and its offspring have been thrilling young and old alike for almost 80 years. Although the modern versions of the revolving wheel are somewhat different from the original, the high ride is still a popular attraction at most fairs and carnivals. George Ferris designed his first wheel for the 1893 Exposition in Chicago. Instead of the usual gondola carrying two or three persons, the first wheel had 36 cars capable of carrying 40 people each. During the Exposition over a million people each paid 50¢ for a ride that offered a panoramic view of Chicago and the surrounding area. Steam powered, the first wheel had a diameter of 250 feet.

DO YOU KNOW — Where is the largest ferris wheel now in operation?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Dr. Syngman Rhee was the first President of the Republic of Korea.

California Had Its Own Bug Furore

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

SACRAMENTO — The Watergate scandal rocking the Nixon administration is strikingly similar to an almost-forgotten page from California political history.

The imbroglio erupted in 1939 when Assembly Speaker Gordon Garland stood on the lower house floor and announced he had found a microphone in his room at the Hotel Senator.

The Legislature immediately convened a special investigating committee, which concluded the bug had been placed by a man hired by a former high aide to Gov. Culbert L. Olson. The committee censured the governor, who denied he or his staff had known anything about the bug.

One of the key persons involved in the incident was Stanley Mosk, now an associate justice of the California Supreme Court and a former state attorney general. Mosk was Olson's executive secretary.

The committee's report implicated Mosk, whose signatures were on checks that paid for the bugging. Mosk charged the report was a "frame-up" by enemies of the Olson administration, and denied he knew anything of the bugging.

The committee report said the checks signed by Mosk came from the governor's secret fund for "extraneous" investigation.

Mosk long has had a reputation for being a strong defender of civil liberties.

The lesson in California history was pointed out Tuesday to the Independent-Journal by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, who recalled the incident from his reading of "Olson's New Deal for California," written in 1953 by Robert E. Burke. The book was circulated to his fellow freshmen assemblymen in 1960 by Hugh I. Flournoy, former government professor and now state controller.

A reading of the incident as detailed by Burke also showed the bug was a dictaphone, a crude device by today's standards.

Garland today is the Sacramento lobbyist for the Golden Gate Bridge District.

Bids Wanted On Bay Area Transit Center

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The state Toll Bridge Authority has called for bids to construct a new regional transportation center for the San Francisco Bay Area.

The authority Tuesday said it will contract with a developer by next May 15 for design and construction of a terminal to serve all bus traffic in and out of San Francisco—estimated to reach 5,000 buses a day by 1995. The center will be built at First and Mission streets at the site of the state-owned Transbay Transit Terminal.

The project also will include a connection with the Bay Area Rapid Transit and San Francisco Muni.

The authority also authorized $458,000 to continue work on development of the project, including transportation and environmental impact studies.

Moving Costs Will BeHiked

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The state Public Utilities Commission has authorized increases of 3.4 per cent or $358,000 in charges for local moving and packing in the San Francisco Bay Area, effective Sept. 6.

The rates, approved Tuesday, will apply to household goods moving less than 50 miles in San Francisco, Alameda, Marin, Contra Costa, San Mateo, Santa Clara and part of Sonoma counties.

The increases are intended to offset boosts in labor costs, payroll taxes and workmen's compensation insurance rates as of Jan. 1.

Democrats See Some Good In Watergate

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Watergate legal tangle has helped Democrats by depriving the Republicans of millions of dollars that were to be used in congressional campaigns, Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss said Tuesday.

Strauss told a news conference that $4.5 million, earmarked for use in 75 key congressional races where the Republicans thought they could oust Democrats, is tied up because of the Watergate lawsuits.

Metronome Is Playing New Role—Correcting Stuttering

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — The metronome, that timing device every musician knows, now also is playing a rehabilitation role. It's helping to correct severe stuttering.

But in its new role, it's a mini-metronome, small enough to be worn like a hearing aid. The whole idea: the steady beat of the metronome paces the belabored speech of the stutterer, helping eliminate the seemingly uncontrollable habits of repetition, halting, pausing.

Dr. Charlotte Zitrin, the physician using it, says that "It's been known for a long time that sutterers don't stutter, for instance, when they sing."

Dr. Zitrin is director of the Behavior Therapy Clinic of the Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center at New Hyde Park, N.Y.

SHE SAID as best she can learn the device was developed by an Englishman who had used a regular metronome to treat his own stutter and set out to produce a highly portable one.

Dr. John Paul Brady, of the University of Pennsylvania department of psychiatry, brought it to the United States, she said. She's not certain how widely used it may be now.

The electric pacing device is built into the casing of a small plastic "hearing" aid to be worn behind the ear. Its mechanism can be regulated for both speech and volume, and be adjusted as the patient progresses.

Dr. Zitrin said that at the start of the treatment program, the metronome is set at a very slow pace of 60 words per minute. The rate is increased as the patient improves, to 112 words a minute, which corresponds to slow normal speech.

The stutterer visits the medical center's clinic once a week learning how to use and adjust the device. And with conscientious practice at home, most patients show noticeable progress within a month and marked improvement in six weeks.

THE RETRAINING of speech habits is coupled with psychotherapy to help minimize tensions and anxieties which may cause or contribute to stuttering.

The physician said treatment at the clinic usually spans a six-month period. The patient, however, continues to use the metronome for as long as he considers it helpful, eventually getting away from it by gradual decrease of length to time used every day.

She and other therapists at the clinic have used the timer in treatment of only a small sampling of patients. But all have been sucess stories, she said. All had a long history of stutter and previous treatment without success.

The physician cited the case of one patient who was almost unable to speak when he came to the clinic. So troubled was his speech, he was unable to give his case history to the therapist.

But there was almost instant improvement with the metronome pacer, she said, and within the subsequent several months, he attained ease and fluency.

"We believe sutterers have emotional problems," said the physician. "But we have not proved it.

"BY AND large, stutterers seem to share many of the same personality traits. They are usually unassertive, have low self esteem, feel inadequate and are easily intimidated. Even though they appear passive and unaggressive, they are often feeling extreme, unexpressed anger."

"All of us occasionally stumble on a word," she said. "And a stutter might be normal with three or four-year-olds. They're just beginning to use the language."

And for some reason, she said, there is more stuttering in males than females.

Metronome Is Playing New Role—Correcting Stuttering

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — The metronome, that timing device every musician knows, now also is playing a rehabilitation role. It's helping to correct severe stuttering.

But in its new role, it's a mini-metronome, small enough to be worn like a hearing aid. The whole idea: the steady beat of the metronome paces the belabored speech of the stutterer, helping eliminate the seemingly uncontrollable habits of repetition, halting, pausing.

Dr. Charlotte Zitrin, the physician using it, says that "It's been known for a long time that sutterers don't stutter, for instance, when they sing."

Dr. Zitrin is director of the Behavior Therapy Clinic of the Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center at New Hyde Park, N.Y.

SHE SAID as best she can learn the device was developed by an Englishman who had used a regular metronome to treat his own stutter and set out to produce a highly portable one.

Dr. John Paul Brady, of the University of Pennsylvania department of psychiatry, brought it to the United States, she said. She's not certain how widely used it may be now.

The electric pacing device is built into the casing of a small plastic "hearing" aid to be worn behind the ear. Its mechanism can be regulated for both speech and volume, and be adjusted as the patient progresses.

Dr. Zitrin said that at the start of the treatment program, the metronome is set at a very slow pace of 60 words per minute. The rate is increased as the patient improves, to 112 words a minute, which corresponds to slow normal speech.

The stutterer visits the medical center's clinic once a week learning how to use and adjust the device. And with conscientious practice at home, most patients show noticeable progress within a month and marked improvement in six weeks.

THE RETRAINING of speech habits is coupled with psychotherapy to help minimize tensions and anxieties which may cause or contribute to stuttering.

The physician said treatment at the clinic usually spans a six-month period. The patient, however, continues to use the metronome for as long as he considers it helpful, eventually getting away from it by gradual decrease of length to time used every day.

She and other therapists at the clinic have used the timer in treatment of only a small sampling of patients. But all have been sucess stories, she said. All had a long history of stutter and previous treatment without success.

The physician cited the case of one patient who was almost unable to speak when he came to the clinic. So troubled was his speech, he was unable to give his case history to the therapist.

But there was almost instant improvement with the metronome pacer, she said, and within the subsequent several months, he attained ease and fluency.

"We believe sutterers have emotional problems," said the physician. "But we have not proved it.

"BY AND large, stutterers seem to share many of the same personality traits. They are usually unassertive, have low self esteem, feel inadequate and are easily intimidated. Even though they appear passive and unaggressive, they are often feeling extreme, unexpressed anger."

"All of us occasionally stumble on a word," she said. "And a stutter might be normal with three or four-year-olds. They're just beginning to use the language."

And for some reason, she said, there is more stuttering in males than females.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Sometimes 'Instant Liberation' Can Be Carried To The Extremes

DEAR RAP:

I went to a women's liberation talk and became "aware," hearing how little girls are programmed toward second class citizenship —from first grade readers (where boys have all the good lines) to toothpaste ads (where brainless girls brighten their teeth to catch men).

Anyway, one of the speakers said she burned her daughter's Barbie doll bridal dress because she didn't want her child thinking a female's only aim in life was "to get married and live happily ever after."

So now I'm in trouble with Mom. You see, I talked my little sister into being a junior Lib, and we made a big ceremony of burning her Barbie doll's bridal dress —which had cost my father about three times as much as what might be called a career girl's outfit.

Mom says "liberate your thinking, but leave things alone!" But if we don't start changing things like school textbooks that downgrade women, and all those super-girly-girly toys, our thinking will never really change. Our culture has got to stop giving women the message that they're "for men only."

Right? — T.S.

DEAR S.:

Right and wrong. Primary grade readers, history books, etc. need massive injections of "female equality" — which they're getting as tax money allows. But "instant liberation" of your sister's Barbie doll is carrying symbolism a bit far — on your father's money! — HELEN

T.S.:

Liberating a mother's temper is no way to start her "awareness" program. Maybe you should offer to pay for the burned bridal dress — if she'll promise not to replace it with another. —SUE

RAP:

I started a rumor this summer just to see how far it would go. Just for fun I had my girlfriend whisper around little "leaks" about me being the illegitimate son of a very wealthy and famous politician "but don't tell anybody because there's enough trouble already in Washington what with Watergate and all."

The rumor is now all over town, and my mother gets stares like you wouldn't believe. (She's divorced.) So far she doesn't know why.

The more I try to tell people it was all a joke, the more they're convinced it isn't. The catch is my mother and this man grew up in the same town — that's why I chose his name. But they barely knew each other.

What'll I do now? — REFORMED TOO LATE IN VIRGINIA

Isn't it strange how lies can be so much more believable than truth —especially if the lies are scandalous and the truth is nothing but dull?

You'd better tell your mother about the hoax before someone — perhaps even a Washington Post reporter — starts asking direct questions. Let's hope she can lay the rumor to rest. — HELEN

R.T.L.:

. . .And now you've learned that gossip grows faster than algae in stagnant water, let's hope your next "rumor" is about a guy who got sick eating crow. Guess who. — SUE

FIRST YEAR

'Discipline' Doesn't Mean Punishment, But Learning

Tenth of a series.

The word "discipline" means teaching. It does not mean punishment, as many people think. Your child will be well "disciplined" when he learns to do those things which please you and which help him to grow and develop, and when he learns not to do those things which displease you and the people around him, and which keep him from growing and developing.

The key to learning and discipline is not punishment, but reward. When your baby first smiles, you pay attention to him and smile back. When he smiles again, you smile back and pay attention to him again, and you may talk to him and cuddle him.

He soon learns that when he smiles good things happen to him, and he learns to do a lot of smiling when you are around. In just the same way, when you pay attention to his first cooing and gurgling sounds, your smile, your voice and your fondling reward him. He coos and gurgles more and more frequently. When he is five or six months old, he begins to notice that you "reward" him more when he repeats sounds you make than when he makes just any old sound. Pretty soon he imitates everything you say, and begins to learn to talk.

If his smile is constantly ignored, he will stop smiling. And if his cooing and gurgling and making sounds is constantly ignored, he will soon stop making sounds. You actually teach your child to smile by rewarding him when he smiles, and you actually teach him to talk by rewarding him when he talks. You teach him by responding to what he does in a consistent way. If you want him to smile, you respond to the smile. If you don't want him to smile, you ignore it.

THE SAME thing holds true for almost all other kinds of behavior. When you respond to something your child does by giving your attention, a smile, a kind word, or by fondling or joy, your baby will do that thing more and more frequently. If you ignore it, it will be done less and less frequently. With these two methods, rewarding and ignoring, you will teach your child almost everything he learns.

What about punishment? Will a baby stop doing something if he is constantly punished for it? It should work that way but actually punishment doesn't work well in the first years of life. The baby usually can't figure out just what behavior is being punished. If you slap him when he throws a spoonful of food on the floor, he may not know whether he is being punished for eating, for trying to feed himself, or for something else. He may stop eating or trying to feed himself rather than start to become a neat eater. Then too, punishment is a form of attention. Some babies may enjoy attention more than they dislike the punishment. If a child who threw a spoonful of food on the floor saw just a slight frown on his mother's face and was rewarded with a smile for many of the times he got the spoon on his mouth, he would soon give up any purposeful spilling.

OF COURSE, the baby sooner or later must learn that some of the things he does makes people around him irritated or angry. You don't have to be always calm, smile or hold your temper. But, the fact that his behavior is sometimes irritating and that you show your irritation in natural ways at times is quite different from trying to teach him to behave through punishment.

There are some things your baby will do which are just plain dangerous. During the first year of life, if he gets hold of something sharp or something he can swallow, you just must take it away from him promptly. At the end of the first year, you can begin to teach him the meaning of "no" by rewarding him when he stops doing something dangerous when you say the word. Soon you will be able to use the word "no" to keep him out of dangerous situations. Save most of your harsh words and punishments for teaching him about things that are really dangerous. Don't waste your "no-no's" on things that really don't matter.

Important Years In Avoiding Drugs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Junior high school students who get poor grades and flout school rules are significantly more likely to use drugs during their high school years than are their more studious and orderly classmates.

This is among findings of a continuing five-year study of Boston elementary, junior high and high school students reported at a recent National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) seminar.

Older Workers Shown Efficient

A survey by the Prudential Insurance Company of America revealed that workers over the age of 65 had fewer on-the-job accidents and were absent from work less often because of illness.

"The number of 'over 65' people employed today is rapidly increasing," said Dr. Albert H. Domm, medical director of Prudential, "and this trend probably will be continued. It seems apparent that the older group can be effectively utilized in an expanding economy."

You actually teach your child to smile by rewarding him when he smiles, and you actually teach him to talk by rewarding him when he talks. You teach him by responding to what he does in a consistent way. If you want him to smile, you respond to the smile. If you don't want him to smile, you ignore it.

THE SAME thing holds true for almost all other kinds of behavior. When you respond to something your child does by giving your attention, a smile, a kind word, or by fondling or joy, your baby will do that thing more and more frequently. If you ignore it, it will be done less and less frequently. With these two methods, rewarding and ignoring, you will teach your child almost everything he learns.

What about punishment? Will a baby stop doing something if he is constantly punished for it? It should work that way but actually punishment doesn't work well in the first years of life. The baby usually can't figure out just what behavior is being punished. If you slap him when he throws a spoonful of food on the floor, he may not know whether he is being punished for eating, for trying to feed himself, or for something else. He may stop eating or trying to feed himself rather than start to become a neat eater. Then too, punishment is a form of attention. Some babies may enjoy attention more than they dislike the punishment. If a child who threw a spoonful of food on the floor saw just a slight frown on his mother's face and was rewarded with a smile for many of the times he got the spoon on his mouth, he would soon give up any purposeful spilling.

OF COURSE, the baby sooner or later must learn that some of the things he does makes people around him irritated or angry. You don't have to be always calm, smile or hold your temper. But, the fact that his behavior is sometimes irritating and that you show your irritation in natural ways at times is quite different from trying to teach him to behave through punishment.

There are some things your baby will do which are just plain dangerous. During the first year of life, if he gets hold of something sharp or something he can swallow, you just must take it away from him promptly. At the end of the first year, you can begin to teach him the meaning of "no" by rewarding him when he stops doing something dangerous when you say the word. Soon you will be able to use the word "no" to keep him out of dangerous situations. Save most of your harsh words and punishments for teaching him about things that are really dangerous. Don't waste your "no-no's" on things that really don't matter.

Important Years In Avoiding Drugs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Junior high school students who get poor grades and flout school rules are significantly more likely to use drugs during their high school years than are their more studious and orderly classmates.

This is among findings of a continuing five-year study of Boston elementary, junior high and high school students reported at a recent National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) seminar.

Older Workers Shown Efficient

A survey by the Prudential Insurance Company of America revealed that workers over the age of 65 had fewer on-the-job accidents and were absent from work less often because of illness.

"The number of 'over 65' people employed today is rapidly increasing," said Dr. Albert H. Domm, medical director of Prudential, "and this trend probably will be continued. It seems apparent that the older group can be effectively utilized in an expanding economy."

Idle Threats Are Bad For Discipline

By CYNTHIA PARSONS
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

There's something inherently wrong in the relationship between a parent and a child when the adult resorts to a hollow threat in an attempt to have a child obey an order.

For some peculiar reason supermarkets abound with examples of parents attempting to discipline their offspring with ridiculous threats.

"Stop running with that cart or I'll call the manager and he'll punish you."

"Don't take those cookies, or you can't have any dinner."

"Stop that, or I'll make you walk home." (This from a suburban housewife who has driven five miles from home to get to the market and who would never let her 6-year-old daughter walk all the way.)

A FAMILY about to leave for a vacation trip who says to a naughty child, "If you don't behave, you can't go with us," is using the most transparent of hollow threats. Would such a family really give up all vacation plans to discipline the naughty member? Probably not. They why issue an order that would never be invoked?

It's unfo.tunate, but too many parents issue such hollow threats doing neither themselves nor their children any good.

By way of contrast, consider the case of the farmer who was looking forward to his eldest son getting a driver's license. At last he'd have someone to help him with long hauls. But the boy broke a home rule, then he lied about it. The truth was uncovered and the parents thought that only a stiff punishment would impress the lad with the seriousness of his attempted deception.

No driver's license. Not for another year.

A sacrifice for the family, yes. But it was worth it because of the deep love both parents have for their son. It was quite a year for him as he lived up to the high principles set by his family.

Parents who don't make such sacrifices or support firm principles generally have very poor relationships with their children. There is a cumulative lack of respect on both sides of what becomes a generation gap.

The child early learns that the threats shouted by an irate mother or father will not be enforced, that small infractions of family rules met only with temporary verbal (sometimes physical) assaults, and that the best course of action is to stay out of the way and lie if the situation warrants it.

WHEN THE home doesn't set a clear path for acceptable behavior the child must seek his own moral standards in the larger community. This breeds the philosophy which says: "What can I get away with?"

It may seem to be stretching the point to make a connection between hollow threats to preschoolers and deviant social behavior of teen-agers, but the connection is a strong one. Poorly disciplined children often become socially deviant young adults.

And what's so tragic about this is that it's all unnecessary. Parents can exercise more care in their discipline; they can insure that the threat of punishment is credible.

It's not easy for young children to recognize when adults mean what they say and when they are making hollow threat, while they may mistake what other adults in authority mean.

This makes for unwelcome friction at school, at youth meetings, and at Sunday School.

The parent who truly loves his child will be honest in every way, especially in discipline.

'Rainwear' Is Out Of Picture

Rewriting the dictionary isn't the usual goal of fashion. But at Main Street, a clothing maker, high fashion coasts are rapidly making the word "rainwear" obsolete.

The fall '73 collection demonstrates anew that until a better word comes along, coats from this source could best be described as all-weather wear with a plus.

The plus means everywhere-wear in fashionables that don't look like rainwear but perform like it when drops begin to fall.

Fashions, Finally, For The Large

By PHYLLIS FELDKAMP

NEW YORK —Although clothes are supposed to give a woman a lift, the shopper who is a special size has often felt let down after a sortie into the stores.

Departments apologetically hidden behind the house dresses have been stocked with tenty numbers seemingly designed to provide little more than adequate coverage. Photographs of snappy clothes on willow size 6, 8 or 10 models, and display mannequins of spaghetti-thin proportions have reinforced the impression that larger-sized women are fashion's forgotten women.

Lately, however, more realistic approaches to fashion information in the news media, and plain economics in the marketplace, have altered these conditions. Newspapers frequently run stories offering advice and shopping tips for women with larger or fuller frames than average.

A YEAR or two ago it began to dawn on some of the Seventh Avenue designers that a vast untapped market of fashion-conscious women (an estimated 10 million) existed in special-size land.

Certain specialty chains, such as Lane Bryant and Roaman's, some time ago had recognized that their customers were no longer content with foundation garments and gloomy dark dresses alleviated by white collars and cuffs, but wanted instead to be with the rest of the with-it girls in pantsuits, tennis and Gatsby looks, and even body-conscious jersey dresses.

Both firms have long since gone into higher fashion gear. "Each season there are new styles that are flattering to the fuller figure, and that goes for fabrics, too," says Dee Revsin, a fashion coordinator for one of Lane Bryant's major city stores.

A few months ago the firm signed designer Gayle Kirkpatrick to a contract under which he will create a special collection for customers.

At present few name designers cut sizes larger than 14 or 16. One of the first to experiment with making extra-size versions of some models in his regular line was Stan Herman. For one season only he tried cutting a small group of 36's to 42's, which he said looked fine on his mother.

LAST YEAR Jerry Silverman and his designer, Shannon Rogers, broke their pattern by establishing a separate company, J.S. Ltd., making "Just show me the Jerry Silvermans, please," a password for bigger-proportioned women who wear sizes 12 to 20.

The target of J.S. Ltd. is "the real woman," and the styling "fool-the-eye to diminish yet play up the larger but fashionable figure," according to Silverman. Stores from Maine to Hawaii have ordered the line.

Robert Lagary, president of Leslie Pomer, the half-size division of prosperous Leslie Fay operation, credits the customer with having brought about the rise of more and better special-size fashions. "The consumer has become much more demanding and her constant complaints have started to pay off," he said recently.

With manufacturers and retailers now meeting her fashion needs, the larger woman has to fulfill her part of the bargain by making informed choices in her purchases. Even though she has a better selection, she must study herself more carefully and not expect the designer and the merchant to perform all her dressing miracles.

AS BEGINNING steps toward self-education, here are a few general tips:

Clothes can act as visual "spot reducers," as well as help minimize the extra-heavy frame.

A thick-wasted person, for example, should look for long-waisted, easy-fitting dresses in A-line or princess style. A long-line semi-fitted jacket is good; so is the long sweater top belted at the hip.

Broad shoulders can be softened with V-necks, or the wide line can be cut by means of a loosely tied scarf at the neck.

Broad hips are helped by A-line, soft-pleated, or slightly gathered skirts. The easy-fitting tunic top over pants or skirts is flattering.

Heavy calves may be concealed in pants, especially the wider-cut type. With skirts, dark stockings and a length just below the knee is de rigueur.

A person with heavy thighs might also look for front-slit skirts that elongate the whole leg. A-lines and other non-clingy skirts are also a good idea.

The extra-tall girl wants to avoid the up-and-down tube look, and needs to break the verticle line with broken-up areas, with strong horizontals of contrasting color perhaps, or by means of a definite separation such as a wide belt or a stand-away short jacket.

The extra-size woman, on the other hand, needs lines that lengthen rather than wide. Thus she will look for a verticle stripes (never horizontals that give a barrel-like appearance).

The Omega Speedmaster Professional

This is the watch chosen by NASA to be strapped to the wrist of all U. S. Astronauts. The only watch to be flight-qualified for all manned space missions. The watch that's been to the moon as many times as men have been there.

It's also the watch worn by a growing number of professionals on Earth—TV Producers' Sportsmen, Engineers, Military Men—people to whom time is more than just a casual concern.

The only way you can tell an Astronaut's Speedmaster from an Earthman's Speedmaster is by the band. The Astronaut's is larger, to fit around the bulky sleeve of his spacesuit.

Because it can survive violent shaking and vibrations, your Speedmaster will give you the right time even when you're sky-diving, skiing or auto racing. Or when you swing a tennis racket, throw a football or hit a golf ball.

And because the Speedmaster can tolerate the freezing cold and searing heat of space and the moon, and because it's water-resistant, you can take it anywhere on Earth —from the poles to the equator.

JESSIE STREET — As if seen through a delicate curtain of smoke — or, perhaps, the refracting light of a street lamp, the bricks in this building seem to billow and waver. Too, Chester Arnold's painting pushes the building's height beyond the topmost edge of the canvas and simultaneously presents immediate and distant views of a city street in a dazzling spectrum of colors. It is included in his one-man show of mixed media works at the Corte Madera Regional Library. (Independent-Journal photo)

ART REVIEW

Chester Arnold Show Reveals Complexities In Many Media

By ADA GARFINKEL

Chester Arnold, an artist of multiple complexities usually expressed in a modified German-Expressionist style, deals with tangibles and intangibles in a variety of media.

His current exhibit is at the Mill Valley Library. In etchings, lithographs and linocuts, in watercolor and oils, and in papier-mache sculpture, Arnold's tangibles seem to focus on landscapes and cityscapes, and his intangibles on death, religion, self-preoccupation as an observer and participant, and light as an objective and visual substance.

But nothing is quite that clear cut! Hence, while Arnold's landscapes present the physicality of nature, their imagery and aura — dense, rhythmic growth, bright, cold moonlight, water, and miasmic bodies of fuzzy contours — are as much the ingredients of mood as a stage setting of an Edgar Allen Poe drama.

Others, such as the two small oils entitled "The Morning Route" and "Walker of the Dark" are like mosaics in their deployment of jewel-like colors.

However, it is in his cityscapes in which intense light and multiple perspectives are the real subjects, that Arnold is at his best, as for example in "Memory of the House I Lived in Once," and in "The Way" — a bi-level view of a busy thoroughfare created within a valley of lush, Cezanne-like rectilinear planes in which intense and muted color contrasts generate a palpable temperature experience.

One of Arnold's favorite compositional devices is to escalate size as, for instance, in the painting of a huge typewriter which reflects the gleam of sunlight on its metallic case.

In another work entitled "Dream Concerto," the artist shows a massive self-portrait as a musician together with a whole section of an orchestra within the tightly compressed confines of a tall, narrow canvas.

But obviously Arnold is not an artist who is involved only with the elements and tools of his craft. His fertile mind and heightened imagination conjure up all manner of possibilities.

In "Writing a Letter to New York," for example, an oil painting shows the artist at his desk, bundled up in overcoat, muffler, and earflaps — because, you see, the letter is dated "Jan. 9!"

There are a wealth of things to see in this exhibit. Some subjects appear as if in flux, and others in more than one medium. And one can meet the artist, too. He is in attendance daily, painting, drawing, or sculpting.

This exhibit will continue through Aug. 24. Visiting hours are from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. and from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and to 6 p.m. on Friday and Saturday. The library is located at 375 Throckmorton Avenue.

Registration For Schools Is Set

Registration for new students at five Petaluma elementary schools will be held Aug. 22 from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Parents can register their youngsters at Grant, McDowell, McKinley, McNear or Valley Vista Schools. Other schools in the district are on a year-round schedule and have not set a date for registration.

School law requires proof that a child has been immunized against polio, measles, diptheria, tetanus and whooping cough.

Proof of birth date will be required for all kindergarten and first grade students. Youngsters must be four years and nine months old by Sept. 1 to enter kindergarten. First grade students must have been born on or before Dec. 2, 1967.

Children need not be present to be registered.

$10,000 Bill Found In Bushes

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Marie Walker, 63, lost a $10,000 bill Monday but it was found and returned to her Wednesday.

Mrs. Walker discovered the note missing from her purse after she had been jostled by two youths en route to a bank. About 30 minutes later, Irene Gorman found the note and took it home with her.

"I saw this piece of paper in the shrubbery in front of my home," said Mrs. Gorman. "It looked official so I picked it up."

News reports of the missing note alerted Mrs. Gorman and she contacted Mrs. Walker's bank. Now the note is resting in its owner's safe deposit box. Mrs. Gorman received a $150 reward.

Bypass Is More Than Half Done

Work on the $153 million Novato bypass, which will eliminate the last intersections with traffic signals from Highway 101 in Marin, is more than half completed, according to a spokesman for the state department of transportation.

The 5.2 mile project, six lanes of freeway from a mile south of Highway 37 to 1.2 miles north of Ahterton Avenue in Novato, is to be finished in mid-1974.

Two miles of existing freeway south of Novato will be widened and improved. The remaining 3.2 miles will be built east of Novato to permit the highway to bypass the city's business district.

The project includes interchanges at Rowland Boulevard and De Long Avenue and Atherton Avenues and a bridge over Novato Creek.

The existing Highway 101 through Novato will be resurfaced before being turned over to the city as a city street, the department spokesman said.

Federal Agency Accused Of Bias

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Ralph Nader-backed consumer organization has urged the government to investigate employment discrimination in the Transportation Department, claiming the 66,000-employee agency "had the worst record of minority employment in government."

In a 55-page report, the Aviation Consumer Action Project (ACAP) accused the Transportation Department of "systematic racial and sexual employment discrimination."

A spokesman for the department denied the charge, terming it "overstated." The department has the "second highest number of minorities in supergrade jobs—those that pay more than $31,000 a year," he said.

Little Hoover Panel Finds Idle School Sites

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A state Little Hoover Commission effort has resulted in a reduction in a "multimilliondollar logjam" in the state's school building aid program, chairman Manning J. Post reports.

Post Tuesday said the action came after a commission task force studied the program in which the state provides funds for school sites to districts that otherwise could not afford to acquire the land.

The review, he said, showed that 441 school sites, costing more than $100 million in state funds, had been acquired by local school districts and lay unused for more than five years. During the period, he said, the land was off the tax rolls and thus placed an added burden on taxpayers.

Post said the task force, headed by commission member Nathan Shappell of Beverly Hills, "met with concerned arms of state government and caused more than one-third of the properties to be either sold or put to proper educational uses.

JESSIE STREET — As if seen through a delicate curtain of smoke — or, perhaps, the refracting light of a street lamp, the bricks in this building seem to billow and waver. Too, Chester Arnold's painting pushes the building's height beyond the topmost edge of the canvas and simultaneously presents immediate and distant views of a city street in a dazzling spectrum of colors. It is included in his one-man show of mixed media works at the Corte Madera Regional Library. (Independent-Journal photo)

ART REVIEW

Chester Arnold Show Reveals Complexities In Many Media

By ADA GARFINKEL

Chester Arnold, an artist of multiple complexities usually expressed in a modified German-Expressionist style, deals with tangibles and intangibles in a variety of media.

His current exhibit is at the Mill Valley Library. In etchings, lithographs and linocuts, in watercolor and oils, and in papier-mache sculpture, Arnold's tangibles seem to focus on landscapes and cityscapes, and his intangibles on death, religion, self-preoccupation as an observer and participant, and light as an objective and visual substance.

But nothing is quite that clear cut! Hence, while Arnold's landscapes present the physicality of nature, their imagery and aura — dense, rhythmic growth, bright, cold moonlight, water, and miasmic bodies of fuzzy contours — are as much the ingredients of mood as a stage setting of an Edgar Allen Poe drama.

Little Hoover Panel Finds Idle School Sites

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A state Little Hoover Commission effort has resulted in a reduction in a "multimilliondollar logjam" in the state's school building aid program, chairman Manning J. Post reports.

Post Tuesday said the action came after a commission task force studied the program in which the state provides funds for school sites to districts that otherwise could not afford to acquire the land.

The review, he said, showed that 441 school sites, costing more than $100 million in state funds, had been acquired by local school districts and lay unused for more than five years. During the period, he said, the land was off the tax rolls and thus placed an added burden on taxpayers.

Post said the task force, headed by commission member Nathan Shappell of Beverly Hills, "met with concerned arms of state government and caused more than one-third of the properties to be either sold or put to proper educational uses.

Action Near On Penny Sales Tax Cut

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Top Democratic and Republican negotiators report a two-house conference committee is close to agreement on a penny rollback in the state sales tax.

Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, told a news conference Wednesday it was "very very possible" that conferees would reach agreement on the tax plan. "It's in the works," he said.

Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, another member of the six-man conference committee, confirmed that the conferees were "close" to agreement but said "there's still some unhappiness. It (agreement) won't be an ecumenical experience."

Moretti said the Senate Assembly panel was working on a compromise plan calling for a six-month cut in the sales tax and an income tax rebate that would offer wealthy persons a 20 per cent reduction next April and persons in lower tax brackets up to a 35 per cent slash.

The six-month sales tax rollback would save consumers an estimated $312 million.

The speaker said the committee also was considering linking the tax cuts with an increase in support to aged, blind and disabled welfare recipients, who face sweeping payment reductions as the result of new federal welfare regulations.

The state sales tax went up July 1 from five to six cents on the dollar in most counties when Reagan and the Democratic-controlled Legislature failed to reach agreement on a combination delay in the sales tax increase and a rebate in income taxes.

APPOINTEES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Senate Rules Committee has postponed recommending to the Senate confirmation of six appointees of Gov. Ronald Reagan, including two trustees of the California State University and Colleges.

Without explanation, the committee systematically and without discussion Wednesday took "under submission" the nominations of Frank P. Adams of Piedmont and Dean S. Lesher of Orinda and four other nominees James H. Hoover and Leland M. Edman, members of the Adult Authority; Harold Watts, superintendent of the California Conservation Center; and Paul F. Dauer, director of the Office of Administrative Hearings.

PENAL PLAN

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A lone Democrat joined Senate Finance Committee Republicans Wednesday to break a stalemate and vote committee approval to Gov. Ronald Reagan's controversial proposed reorganization of the state penal system.

Sen. Alan Short, D-Stockton, and the committee's six Republicans overwhelmed the opposition of five Democrats in sending the bill by Sen. W. Craig Biddle, R-Riverside, to the full Senate.

The bill (SB391) beasically would merge the state Department of Corrections and the Youth Authority into a new Department of Correctional Services. Various parole boards for men, women and youths also would be consolidated into one board.

EVIDENCE

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Senate Finance Committee has reversed itself and approved Gov. Ronald Reagan's bill permitting evidence obtained through illegal police search and seizure to be submitted in court.

Sen. Alan Short, D-Stockton, an attorney, supplied the go-ahead vote Wednesday when he split from Democratic ranks and joined Republicans in approving the measure on a 7-5 vote and sending it to the floor. At least seven favorable votes were needed.

On a party line vote, the committee rejected the measure Tuesday when Short was absent. But Sen. Robert J. Lagomarsino, R-Ojai, received permission to have the action reconsidered.

The bill, a keystone of Reagan's newly announced plan for "Controlling Crime in California," is opposed by the American Civil Liberties Union and the California Trial Lawyers Association.

It would eliminate the so-called "exclusionary rule" in favor of a procedure allowing persons to sue for damages as a result of illegal searches and seizures but still permit the evidence to be used in court.

WELFARE

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A multimillion-dollar bill increasing aid payments and adding other benefits for California's aged, blind and disabled welfare recipients has advanced in the Senate.

The sweeping measure by Assemblyman John Burton, D-San Francisco, won approval from the Senate Health and Welfare Committee Wednesday after about 400 disabled, blind and elderly persons held a rally on the West steps of the Capitol urging approval of such legislation.

Spokesmen for the Disabled and Blind Action Committee of California, sponsor of the rally, said the Burton bill and another measure by Sen. George Moscone, D-San Francisco, would prevent drops in grants and services which will occur if the state does not supplement new federal programs for the aged, blind and disabled.

RELATIVES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — It has cost California at least $1 for every $1.99 the state collected under the controversial "relatives responsibility" law, the legislative auditor general reports.

The law, a key feature of Gov. Ronald Reagan's 1971 welfare reform program, requires adult children to contribute to the support of their aged, blind or disabled welfare parents.

Word that the report was being released Wednesday prompted postponement for at least a day of Senate consideration of an override attempt on a measure (AB57) that would repeal the law.

Sen. Ralph C. Dills, D-Gardena, floor sponsor of the bill, asked for a delay in the override attempt while the report is being studied. The Assembly already has voted 59- 15 to override the veto by Reagan.

PAPER ROUTES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Young girls would be allowed to have newspaper routes and hold other sales jobs now open only to young boys under a bill proposed Wednesday by Assemblyman Leroy F. Greene.

"Any girl who can convince her parents to let her have a newspaper route should have the same opportunity to acquire one as does a boy," said the Sacramento Democrat.

Sooners' Story

OKALHOMA CITY (UPI) — Oklahoma was unique in instituting legally organized "land runs" which were begun with a pistol shot. The term "Sooners," a nickname for the state and its people, referred to those who "jumped the gun" and rossed into the land rush areas efore the official starting time n order to stake out claims to he best land.

OKALHOMA CITY (UPI) — Oklahoma was unique in instituting legally organized "land runs" which were begun with a pistol shot. The term "Sooners," a nickname for the state and its people, referred to those who "jumped the gun" and crossed into the land rush areas before the official starting time in order to stake out claims to the best land.

ART REVIEW

Chester Arnold Show Reveals Complexities In Many Media

By ADA GARFINKEL

Chester Arnold, an artist of multiple complexities usually expressed in a modified German-Expressionist style, deals with tangibles and intangibles in a variety of media.

His current exhibit is at the Mill Valley Library. In etchings, lithographs and linocuts, in watercolor and oils, and in papier-mache sculpture, Arnold's tangibles seem to focus on landscapes and cityscapes, and his intangibles on death, religion, self-preoccupation as an observer and participant, and light as an objective and visual substance.

But nothing is quite that clear cut! Hence, while Arnold's landscapes present the physicality of nature, their imagery and aura — dense, rhythmic growth, bright, cold moonlight, water, and miasmic bodies of fuzzy contours — are as much the ingredients of mood as a stage setting of an Edgar Allen Poe drama.

Others, such as the two small oils entitled "The Morning Route" and "Walker of the Dark" are like mosaics in their deployment of jewel-like colors.

However, it is in his cityscapes in which intense light and multiple perspectives are the real subjects, that Arnold is at his best, as for example in "Memory of the House I Lived in Once," and in "The Way" — a bi-level view of a busy thoroughfare created within a valley of lush, Cezanne-like rectilinear planes in which intense and muted color contrasts generate a palpable temperature experience.

One of Arnold's favorite compositional devices is to escalate size as, for instance, in the painting of a huge typewriter which reflects the gleam of sunlight on its metallic case.

In another work entitled "Dream Concerto," the artist shows a massive self-portrait as a musician together with a whole section of an orchestra within the tightly compressed confines of a tall, narrow canvas.

But obviously Arnold is not an artist who is involved only with the elements and tools of his craft. His fertile mind and heightened imagination conjure up all manner of possibilities.

In "Writing a Letter to New York," for example, an oil painting shows the artist at his desk, bundled up in overcoat, muffler, and earflaps — because, you see, the letter is dated "Jan. 9!"

There are a wealth of things to see in this exhibit. Some subjects appear as if in flux, and others in more than one medium. And one can meet the artist, too. He is in attendance daily, painting, drawing, or sculpting.

This exhibit will continue through Aug. 24. Visiting hours are from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. and from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and to 6 p.m. on Friday and Saturday. The library is located at 375 Throckmorton Avenue.

Registration For Schools Is Set

Registration for new students at five Petaluma elementary schools will be held Aug. 22 from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Parents can register their youngsters at Grant, McDowell, McKinley, McNear or Valley Vista Schools. Other schools in the district are on a year-round schedule and have not set a date for registration.

School law requires proof that a child has been immunized against polio, measles, diptheria, tetanus and whooping cough.

Proof of birth date will be required for all kindergarten and first grade students. Youngsters must be four years and nine months old by Sept. 1 to enter kindergarten. First grade students must have been born on or before Dec. 2, 1967.

Children need not be present to be registered.

$10,000 Bill Found In Bushes

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Marie Walker, 63, lost a $10,000 bill Monday but it was found and returned to her Wednesday.

Mrs. Walker discovered the note missing from her purse after she had been jostled by two youths en route to a bank. About 30 minutes later, Irene Gorman found the note and took it home with her.

"I saw this piece of paper in the shrubbery in front of my home," said Mrs. Gorman. "It looked official so I picked it up."

News reports of the missing note alerted Mrs. Gorman and she contacted Mrs. Walker's bank. Now the note is resting in its owner's safe deposit box. Mrs. Gorman received a $150 reward.

Bypass Is More Than Half Done

Work on the $153 million Novato bypass, which will eliminate the last intersections with traffic signals from Highway 101 in Marin, is more than half completed, according to a spokesman for the state department of transportation.

The 5.2 mile project, six lanes of freeway from a mile south of Highway 37 to 1.2 miles north of Ahterton Avenue in Novato, is to be finished in mid-1974.

Two miles of existing freeway south of Novato will be widened and improved. The remaining 3.2 miles will be built east of Novato to permit the highway to bypass the city's business district.

The project includes interchanges at Rowland Boulevard and De Long Avenue and Atherton Avenues and a bridge over Novato Creek.

The existing Highway 101 through Novato will be resurfaced before being turned over to the city as a city street, the department spokesman said.

Federal Agency Accused Of Bias

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Ralph Nader-backed consumer organization has urged the government to investigate employment discrimination in the Transportation Department, claiming the 66,000-employee agency "had the worst record of minority employment in government."

In a 55-page report, the Aviation Consumer Action Project (ACAP) accused the Transportation Department of "systematic racial and sexual employment discrimination."

A spokesman for the department denied the charge, terming it "overstated." The department has the "second highest number of minorities in supergrade jobs—those that pay more than $31,000 a year," he said.

Program Set With Jazz Music, Dance

A program of jazz music and improvisational dance will be presented Saturday at 8:30 p.m. at the Cinnabar Theater, Petaluma.

Featured in the program will be David Appel, dancer and jazz musician, and Pat Taylor, improvisational dancer. They will also offer a workshop in dance at 1:30 p.m. Sunday at the theater, 3333 Petaluma Boulevard North.

Little Hoover Panel Finds Idle School Sites

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A state Little Hoover Commission effort has resulted in a reduction in a "multimilliondollar logjam" in the state's school building aid program, chairman Manning J. Post reports.

Post Tuesday said the action came after a commission task force studied the program in which the state provides funds for school sites to districts that otherwise could not afford to acquire the land.

The review, he said, showed that 441 school sites, costing more than $100 million in state funds, had been acquired by local school districts and lay unused for more than five years. During the period, he said, the land was off the tax rolls and thus placed an added burden on taxpayers.

Post said the task force, headed by commission member Nathan Shappell of Beverly Hills, "met with concerned arms of state government and caused more than one-third of the properties to be either sold or put to proper educational uses.

Mrs. Walker discovered the note missing from her purse after she had been jostled by two youths en route to a bank. About 30 minutes later, Irene Gorman found the note and took it home with her.

"I saw this piece of paper in the shrubbery in front of my home," said Mrs. Gorman. "It looked official so I picked it up."

News reports of the missing note alerted Mrs. Gorman and she contacted Mrs. Walker's bank. Now the note is resting in its owner's safe deposit box. Mrs. Gorman received a $150 reward.

Bypass Is More Than Half Done

Work on the $153 million Novato bypass, which will eliminate the last intersections with traffic signals from Highway 101 in Marin, is more than half completed, according to a spokesman for the state department of transportation.

The 5.2 mile project, six lanes of freeway from a mile south of Highway 37 to 1.2 miles north of Ahterton Avenue in Novato, is to be finished in mid-1974.

Two miles of existing freeway south of Novato will be widened and improved. The remaining 3.2 miles will be built east of Novato to permit the highway to bypass the city's business district.

The project includes interchanges at Rowland Boulevard and De Long Avenue and Atherton Avenues and a bridge over Novato Creek.

The existing Highway 101 through Novato will be resurfaced before being turned over to the city as a city street, the department spokesman said.

Federal Agency Accused Of Bias

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Ralph Nader-backed consumer organization has urged the government to investigate employment discrimination in the Transportation Department, claiming the 66,000-employee agency "had the worst record of minority employment in government."

In a 55-page report, the Aviation Consumer Action Project (ACAP) accused the Transportation Department of "systematic racial and sexual employment discrimination."

A spokesman for the department denied the charge, terming it "overstated." The department has the "second highest number of minorities in supergrade jobs—those that pay more than $31,000 a year," he said.

Little Hoover Panel Finds Idle School Sites

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A state Little Hoover Commission effort has resulted in a reduction in a "multimilliondollar logjam" in the state's school building aid program, chairman Manning J. Post reports.

Post Tuesday said the action came after a commission task force studied the program in which the state provides funds for school sites to districts that otherwise could not afford to acquire the land.

The review, he said, showed that 441 school sites, costing more than $100 million in state funds, had been acquired by local school districts and lay unused for more than five years. During the period, he said, the land was off the tax rolls and thus placed an added burden on taxpayers.

Post said the task force, headed by commission member Nathan Shappell of Beverly Hills, "met with concerned arms of state government and caused more than one-third of the properties to be either sold or put to proper educational uses.

Action Near On Penny Sales Tax Cut

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Top Democratic and Republican negotiators report a two-house conference committee is close to agreement on a penny rollback in the state sales tax.

Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, told a news conference Wednesday it was "very very possible" that conferees would reach agreement on the tax plan. "It's in the works," he said.

Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, another member of the six-man conference committee, confirmed that the conferees were "close" to agreement but said "there's still some unhappiness. It (agreement) won't be an ecumenical experience."

Moretti said the Senate Assembly panel was working on a compromise plan calling for a six-month cut in the sales tax and an income tax rebate that would offer wealthy persons a 20 per cent reduction next April and persons in lower tax brackets up to a 35 per cent slash.

The six-month sales tax rollback would save consumers an estimated $312 million.

The speaker said the committee also was considering linking the tax cuts with an increase in support to aged, blind and disabled welfare recipients, who face sweeping payment reductions as the result of new federal welfare regulations.

The state sales tax went up July 1 from five to six cents on the dollar in most counties when Reagan and the Democratic-controlled Legislature failed to reach agreement on a combination delay in the sales tax increase and a rebate in income taxes.

APPOINTEES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Senate Rules Committee has postponed recommending to the Senate confirmation of six appointees of Gov. Ronald Reagan, including two trustees of the California State University and Colleges.

Without explanation, the committee systematically and without discussion Wednesday took "under submission" the nominations of Frank P. Adams of Piedmont and Dean S. Lesher of Orinda and four other nominees James H. Hoover and Leland M. Edman, members of the Adult Authority; Harold Watts, superintendent of the California Conservation Center; and Paul F. Dauer, director of the Office of Administrative Hearings.

PENAL PLAN

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A lone Democrat joined Senate Finance Committee Republicans Wednesday to break a stalemate and vote committee approval to Gov. Ronald Reagan's controversial proposed reorganization of the state penal system.

Sen. Alan Short, D-Stockton, and the committee's six Republicans overwhelmed the opposition of five Democrats in sending the bill by Sen. W. Craig Biddle, R-Riverside, to the full Senate.

The bill (SB391) beasically would merge the state Department of Corrections and the Youth Authority into a new Department of Correctional Services. Various parole boards for men, women and youths also would be consolidated into one board.

EVIDENCE

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Senate Finance Committee has reversed itself and approved Gov. Ronald Reagan's bill permitting evidence obtained through illegal police search and seizure to be submitted in court.

Sen. Alan Short, D-Stockton, an attorney, supplied the go-ahead vote Wednesday when he split from Democratic ranks and joined Republicans in approving the measure on a 7-5 vote and sending it to the floor. At least seven favorable votes were needed.

On a party line vote, the committee rejected the measure Tuesday when Short was absent. But Sen. Robert J. Lagomarsino, R-Ojai, received permission to have the action reconsidered.

The bill, a keystone of Reagan's newly announced plan for "Controlling Crime in California," is opposed by the American Civil Liberties Union and the California Trial Lawyers Association.

It would eliminate the so-called "exclusionary rule" in favor of a procedure allowing persons to sue for damages as a result of illegal searches and seizures but still permit the evidence to be used in court.

WELFARE

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A multimillion-dollar bill increasing aid payments and adding other benefits for California's aged, blind and disabled welfare recipients has advanced in the Senate.

The sweeping measure by Assemblyman John Burton, D-San Francisco, won approval from the Senate Health and Welfare Committee Wednesday after about 400 disabled, blind and elderly persons held a rally on the West steps of the Capitol urging approval of such legislation.

Spokesmen for the Disabled and Blind Action Committee of California, sponsor of the rally, said the Burton bill and another measure by Sen. George Moscone, D-San Francisco, would prevent drops in grants and services which will occur if the state does not supplement new federal programs for the aged, blind and disabled.

RELATIVES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — It has cost California at least $1 for every $1.99 the state collected under the controversial "relatives responsibility" law, the legislative auditor general reports.

The law, a key feature of Gov. Ronald Reagan's 1971 welfare reform program, requires adult children to contribute to the support of their aged, blind or disabled welfare parents.

Word that the report was being released Wednesday prompted postponement for at least a day of Senate consideration of an override attempt on a measure (AB57) that would repeal the law.

Sen. Ralph C. Dills, D-Gardena, floor sponsor of the bill, asked for a delay in the override attempt while the report is being studied. The Assembly already has voted 59- 15 to override the veto by Reagan.

PAPER ROUTES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Young girls would be allowed to have newspaper routes and hold other sales jobs now open only to young boys under a bill proposed Wednesday by Assemblyman Leroy F. Greene.

"Any girl who can convince her parents to let her have a newspaper route should have the same opportunity to acquire one as does a boy," said the Sacramento Democrat.

APPOINTEES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Senate Rules Committee has postponed recommending to the Senate confirmation of six appointees of Gov. Ronald Reagan, including two trustees of the California State University and Colleges.

Without explanation, the committee systematically and without discussion Wednesday took "under submission" the nominations of Frank P. Adams of Piedmont and Dean S. Lesher of Orinda and four other nominees James H. Hoover and Leland M. Edman, members of the Adult Authority; Harold Watts, superintendent of the California Conservation Center; and Paul F. Dauer, director of the Office of Administrative Hearings.

PENAL PLAN

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A lone Democrat joined Senate Finance Committee Republicans Wednesday to break a stalemate and vote committee approval to Gov. Ronald Reagan's controversial proposed reorganization of the state penal system.

Sen. Alan Short, D-Stockton, and the committee's six Republicans overwhelmed the opposition of five Democrats in sending the bill by Sen. W. Craig Biddle, R-Riverside, to the full Senate.

The bill (SB391) beasically would merge the state Department of Corrections and the Youth Authority into a new Department of Correctional Services. Various parole boards for men, women and youths also would be consolidated into one board.

EVIDENCE

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Senate Finance Committee has reversed itself and approved Gov. Ronald Reagan's bill permitting evidence obtained through illegal police search and seizure to be submitted in court.

Sen. Alan Short, D-Stockton, an attorney, supplied the go-ahead vote Wednesday when he split from Democratic ranks and joined Republicans in approving the measure on a 7-5 vote and sending it to the floor. At least seven favorable votes were needed.

On a party line vote, the committee rejected the measure Tuesday when Short was absent. But Sen. Robert J. Lagomarsino, R-Ojai, received permission to have the action reconsidered.

The bill, a keystone of Reagan's newly announced plan for "Controlling Crime in California," is opposed by the American Civil Liberties Union and the California Trial Lawyers Association.

It would eliminate the so-called "exclusionary rule" in favor of a procedure allowing persons to sue for damages as a result of illegal searches and seizures but still permit the evidence to be used in court.

WELFARE

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A multimillion-dollar bill increasing aid payments and adding other benefits for California's aged, blind and disabled welfare recipients has advanced in the Senate.

The sweeping measure by Assemblyman John Burton, D-San Francisco, won approval from the Senate Health and Welfare Committee Wednesday after about 400 disabled, blind and elderly persons held a rally on the West steps of the Capitol urging approval of such legislation.

Spokesmen for the Disabled and Blind Action Committee of California, sponsor of the rally, said the Burton bill and another measure by Sen. George Moscone, D-San Francisco, would prevent drops in grants and services which will occur if the state does not supplement new federal programs for the aged, blind and disabled.

RELATIVES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — It has cost California at least $1 for every $1.99 the state collected under the controversial "relatives responsibility" law, the legislative auditor general reports.

The law, a key feature of Gov. Ronald Reagan's 1971 welfare reform program, requires adult children to contribute to the support of their aged, blind or disabled welfare parents.

Word that the report was being released Wednesday prompted postponement for at least a day of Senate consideration of an override attempt on a measure (AB57) that would repeal the law.

Sen. Ralph C. Dills, D-Gardena, floor sponsor of the bill, asked for a delay in the override attempt while the report is being studied. The Assembly already has voted 59- 15 to override the veto by Reagan.

PAPER ROUTES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Young girls would be allowed to have newspaper routes and hold other sales jobs now open only to young boys under a bill proposed Wednesday by Assemblyman Leroy F. Greene.

"Any girl who can convince her parents to let her have a newspaper route should have the same opportunity to acquire one as does a boy," said the Sacramento Democrat.

Hijacked Arab Plane Lands In Israel, Arab Man Is Arrested

TEL AVIV (UPI) — A young Arab man hijacked a Middle East Airways flight today and forced it to land at Lod International Airport where specially trained Israeli security guards boarded it, freed the 119 passengers and crew and captured the hijacker without firing a shot, official Israeli sources said.

(Lebanese sources in New York said it was actually another Israeli attempt to capture Palestinian guerrillas and that there were two "hijackers" who were actually Israeli secret agents. The Israelis seized another Lebanese airliner last Friday and diverted it to Israeli where no Palestinians were found aboard.)

Israelis said the Boeing 707, owned by Lebanon, was hijacked over Cyprus on a flight from Libya to Lebanon. A flight of Israeli F4 Phantom jets escorted the plane to the airport. Israeli troops had ringed the aircraft with armored personnel carriers, fire trucks and ambulances in case of emergency.

The hijacker, about 25 years old and dressed in a green suit, was led away from the red, white and blue Boeing 707 smiling broadly. His intentions remained a mystery. He had made no demands to Israeli authorities. No shots were fired during the rescue attempt, a military spokesman said, and no one was hurt.

The hijacker, who had brandished two pistols in seizing control of the airliner over Cyprus, was immediately questioned by military officials, including the armed forces chief of staff, Lt. Gen. David Elazar.

There were unconfirmed reports he had requested political asylum.

Passengers and crew members from the airliner boarded three buses parked near the plane and were taken into the Lod passenger lounge where they were served orange juice and cakes while waiting for their flight to Beirut to resume.

Witnesses said the hijacker was standing in an open doorway at the rear of the plane talking with an Israeli security man on the ground when three other security men entered the aircraft from the other side and jumped him.

The man had already begun letting women and children leave the plane via two emergency chutes. One child and an elderly men were hurt in sliding down the inflated rubberized escape slides. Defense Minister Moshe Dayan and Elazar, were reported by military spokesmen to have offered the pilot of the Arab airliner all the assistance he needed.

Johnson Got To Pick Portrait For Stamp

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an effort to avoid potential controversy, Lyndon B. Johnson personally selected the portrait from which his memorial stamp was designed, a Postal Service spokesman said today.

The stamp will be officially issued during a ceremony in Austin, Tex., Aug. 27, which would have been Johnson's 65th birthday.

The Postal Service said it asked Johnson to make the selection and that he picked a portrait of himself by Elizabeth Shoumatoff last Sept. 26, less than four months before his death.

"There was so much controversy about the portrait that was selected for the Eisenhower commemorative stamp, that we thought it was a good idea to allow Mr. Johnson to select the portrait himself," the spokesman said. "He was very cooperative."

The present 8 cent stamp carries a portrait of an unsmiling Dwight D. Eisenhower. The design and portrait, selected by the postal service, was publicly criticized by family members and the public.

"We didn't want the same thing to happen again," the spokesman said.

The Johnson 8 cent stamp, designed by Bradbury Thompson, has the Capitol in the background and is colored in buff, yellow, red, blue and black.

Urban Problems On Collegians' Minds

NEW YORK (UPI) — A survey of state colleges and universities shows a steadily growing involvement with urban problems.

The result of this, says the American Association of State Colleges and Universities: an increase in specialized academic programs and a proliferation of community service projects diversified throughout the urban environment.

Today is Thursday, August 16th, the 228th day of 1973 with 137 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last quarter. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus and Jupiter.

Robert Ringling, originator of the major circus world, was born Aug. 16, 1897.

Also on this day in history:

In 1896, gold was discovered in the Klondike region of Canada's Yukon territory.

In 1948, baseball home run king Babe Ruth died in New York City of cancer.

In 1965, all 30 persons aboard died when a plane crashed and sank in Lake Michigan.

In 1971, New York stocks broke a 179-year price and volume record in an upward response to President Nixon's wage-price-rent freeze announced the day before.

A thought for the day: American naturalist John Burroughs said: "Time does not become sacred until we have lived it."

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.
Other areas:
San Francisco, clean air.
San Jose, light air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

ALMANAC

Today is Thursday, August 16th, the 228th day of 1973 with 137 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last quarter. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus and Jupiter.

Robert Ringling, originator of the major circus world, was born Aug. 16, 1897.

Also on this day in history:

In 1896, gold was discovered in the Klondike region of Canada's Yukon territory.

In 1948, baseball home run king Babe Ruth died in New York City of cancer.

In 1965, all 30 persons aboard died when a plane crashed and sank in Lake Michigan.

In 1971, New York stocks broke a 179-year price and volume record in an upward response to President Nixon's wage-price-rent freeze announced the day before.

A thought for the day: American naturalist John Burroughs said: "Time does not become sacred until we have lived it."

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.
Other areas:
San Francisco, clean air.
San Jose, light air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

STILL EXPERIMENTAL

Acupuncture Tried By Some Dentists

LOS ANGELES (AP) — While they do not believe it will replace the traditional anesthetic needle, University of Southern California dentists are finding acupuncture useful in treating stubborn jaw and mouth pain.

So far, the USC dentists have inserted the fine needles in patients' hands and faces mainly to relieve pain in the muscles and joint of the jaw. Oral discomfort results from nervous clenching, grinding of teeth, accidents — or some ailment that cannot be pinpointed.

The temporomandibular joint (TMJ), is where the lower jaw is hinged, is frequently a site of severe and sometimes inexplicable pain, Dr. Sylvan Schireson told a reporter Tuesday. Acupuncture has given some patients complete relief after repeated treatments, he said.

"For some patients, acupuncture works beautifully," said Schireson. "But others have not noticed improvement." No statistics on its effectiveness in dental uses are yet available, he said.

"It's still an experimental procedure but I think it will become a standard part of the tools we have for treating pain."

Although he and his colleagues are beginning to evaluate acupuncture as an anesthetic for work on the teeth and gums, Schireson said it will be an additional method, not a substitute for the common painkillers like Novocaine.

"For one thing, it takes quite a while — a half hour or so — to produce anesthesia. Also we have to stimulate the needles with electricity for anesthesia; we don't have to do that to treat jaw pain," he said.

He said acupuncture has been used on about 25 patients at the USC dental school's Temporomandibular Joint and Perioral Pain Clinic. Perioral means "around the mouth."

Most patients have had no luck with conventional treatments and in some cases, the dentists have not been able to find the source of the pain.

"We had a man who had been treated with conventional methods for a year, and after two acupuncture treatments he was completely free of pain," said Schireson. He added that in most cases the patients receive six to 10 once-a-week treatments.

He and the clinics associated director, Dr. Hershel Mintzer, are among a group of USC dentists who became interested in the ancient Oriental practice a few years ago. For the past two years, Schireson and Mintzer studied under Dr. Yiu Wing Choi, who learned the practice at Peking University.

The dentists have been no more successful than other American medical men in determining exactly how acupuncture works.

"Current theories link it to the autonomic nervous system," said Schireson.

"This is the nervous system we can't usually control that affects the heartbeat or blood pressure, for example. The theory is that the needle at a certain acupuncture point will block pain signals from the nerves along certain pathways in the body."

He said he is excited about the prospects for the use of acupuncture in a variety of dental processes.

Whatever its eventual usefulness is, he said, "it is a method of treatment that fits our most important requirements: it cannot possibly leave the patient worse off than before he came to the clinic."

Co-Ed's Parents Ask $200,000

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The University of California was sued for $200,000 Tuesday by the parents of a co-ed who was murdered.

In their petition to the California Supreme Court, Vitaly and Lydia Tarasoff claimed the university was negligent in failing to heed a warning regarding death threats against their daughter, Tatiana, 20. The suit claimed Prosenjit Poddar had told a psychiatrist at UC Berkeley that he intended to kill her.

Poddar was convicted of the slaying in October 1969.

The suit said the psychiatrist, Dr. Lawrence Moore, and other university officials should have taken steps to prevent the slaying.

Car Thieves Pick The Worst Spot

ALBANY (UPI) — Two young men had been sitting in their car outside the Albany Police Station for two hours Wednesday when officers decided to investigate.

A check of the auto showed it had been stolen from nearby Oakland.

Raymond Ireland, 18, and Gary L. Harris, 20, both of Richmond, told police the car had run out of gas in front of police headquarters and they were waiting for a nearby service station to open.

STILL EXPERIMENTAL

Acupuncture Tried By Some Dentists

LOS ANGELES (AP) — While they do not believe it will replace the traditional anesthetic needle, University of Southern California dentists are finding acupuncture useful in treating stubborn jaw and mouth pain.

So far, the USC dentists have inserted the fine needles in patients' hands and faces mainly to relieve pain in the muscles and joint of the jaw. Oral discomfort results from nervous clenching, grinding of teeth, accidents — or some ailment that cannot be pinpointed.

The temporomandibular joint (TMJ), is where the lower jaw is hinged, is frequently a site of severe and sometimes inexplicable pain, Dr. Sylvan Schireson told a reporter Tuesday. Acupuncture has given some patients complete relief after repeated treatments, he said.

"For some patients, acupuncture works beautifully," said Schireson. "But others have not noticed improvement." No statistics on its effectiveness in dental uses are yet available, he said.

"It's still an experimental procedure but I think it will become a standard part of the tools we have for treating pain."

Although he and his colleagues are beginning to evaluate acupuncture as an anesthetic for work on the teeth and gums, Schireson said it will be an additional method, not a substitute for the common painkillers like Novocaine.

"For one thing, it takes quite a while — a half hour or so — to produce anesthesia. Also we have to stimulate the needles with electricity for anesthesia; we don't have to do that to treat jaw pain," he said.

He said acupuncture has been used on about 25 patients at the USC dental school's Temporomandibular Joint and Perioral Pain Clinic. Perioral means "around the mouth."

Most patients have had no luck with conventional treatments and in some cases, the dentists have not been able to find the source of the pain.

"We had a man who had been treated with conventional methods for a year, and after two acupuncture treatments he was completely free of pain," said Schireson. He added that in most cases the patients receive six to 10 once-a-week treatments.

He and the clinics associated director, Dr. Hershel Mintzer, are among a group of USC dentists who became interested in the ancient Oriental practice a few years ago. For the past two years, Schireson and Mintzer studied under Dr. Yiu Wing Choi, who learned the practice at Peking University.

The dentists have been no more successful than other American medical men in determining exactly how acupuncture works.

"Current theories link it to the autonomic nervous system," said Schireson.

"This is the nervous system we can't usually control that affects the heartbeat or blood pressure, for example. The theory is that the needle at a certain acupuncture point will block pain signals from the nerves along certain pathways in the body."

He said he is excited about the prospects for the use of acupuncture in a variety of dental processes.

Whatever its eventual usefulness is, he said, "it is a method of treatment that fits our most important requirements: it cannot possibly leave the patient worse off than before he came to the clinic."

PIN-UP — Dental acupuncture is being tried at the USC School of Dentistry in Los Angeles to relieve stubborn, hard to diagnose pains that don't respond to other methods. Placement of the needles is shown here on one of the 25 patients undergoing the treatment.

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

COMMUNITY NURSE

Clients Are Neighbors

By FRED STREBEIGH

Mandatory retirement at age 65 will bring a close Monday to Marion L. Taylor's 20 year career as public health nurse for Marin City, the Sausalito houseboat community, and the rest of southern Marin.

What does Miss Taylor think of mandatory retirement?

"After working 16 to 18 hours a day for the last 20 years," she said, "I think it's great."

Last week as parents and young children flooded into the public health clinc to pick up their weekly disbursement of food supplements, Miss Taylor was surrounded by people that, she said, "I won't see for a long time."

A woman from the houseboats put her hand on Miss Taylor's shoulder and said, "Be sure to come over and visit some time."

"I will," she said with a tired sigh, "but at first I'm going to rest at home for a while."

However, Marion Taylor's return home is not a retreat from the health needs of the community she has been immersed in.

She moved from Mill Valley eight years ago to her Marin City home, only a few blocks from the clinic at 630 Drake Avenue, to be closer to her many friends there.

"I have friendships I know I wouldn't have had if I hadn't been living here," she said, and "I never cease to wonder at the courage of some of these people with the problems that they are faced with."

She said that most of Marin County has a view of the community based on ignorance. "I think that most of the county thinks that this is the most awful place in the world — most people are afraid to come into Marin City."

She found that when she moved there she began to receive "a lot of calls from people at my home when they had problems — and I still have. And I expect them to continue."

What she fears may not continue is the present quality of public health service in Marin. Elimination by attrition of public health nurses in the county — a reduction from nine nurses 10 years ago to six at her retirement — is cause for worry, she says.

She said that county administration is generally supportive, but nevertheless "our nursing staff is being reduced." She said that other areas will have to be adjusted to provide nursing service for her southern Marin area.

She said that her years as a nurse have been generally satisfying. Working in public health, she said, "gives you a better perspective as far as being 'umble, and thankful, and feeling that perhaps you can be useful to other people."

There has also been, she says, "a lot of frustration, because you feel you don't have what it takes to motivate the people you're dealing with to help themselves", or because the time factor precludes "more in depth working with these people."

"And some people are very hard to reach and very skeptical", she said. Such was the case with the people who live in the houseboat community.

"I'm sure that because of the hassel they've had from other county agencies, including environmental health, they had every right to think I was part of the set-up to.

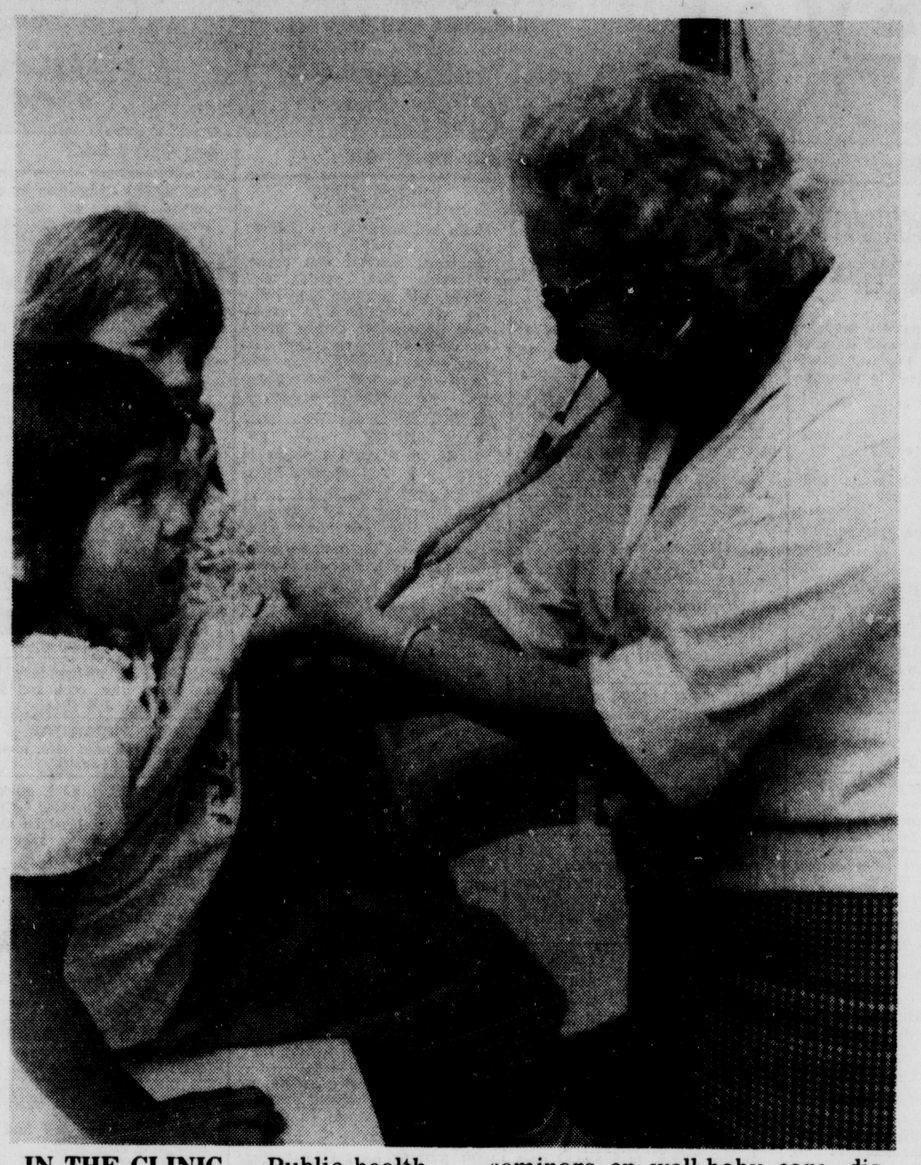
"But after climbing in and out of the houseboats and showing them I could help without saying 'This is dirty,' or 'This isn't up to standard, they accept me for what I am. And I accept them for what they are. And I think they're great.

"It depends on what you call dirt — it's not filth. They may not have had a shower this morning, but these people have a heart of gold.

"And if they like you they'll do anything for you — and they're living on a shoestring."

What do Miss Taylor's 20 years in public health add up to?

"What they add up to," she said, "is that I've become a part of the total community where I work, and that I'm as concerned about the young people as they grow from babyhood to adulthood as their parents or their grandparents would be."



IN THE CLINIC — Public health nurse Marion L. Taylor checks health of Jennifer Mora (foreground) and Camille Speck, both of Waldo Point in Sausalito. As public health nurse for Marin City, Sausalito, and the Tiburon penninsula, she holds regular seminars on well-baby care, disburses food supplements for children and pregnant mothers, and makes house calls throughout the region. She will retire Monday, ending 20 years at Southern Marin work.

Employees Group Changes Name

The Marin County Employees Association has changed its name.

The organization will now be known as the Marin Association of Public Employees, according to Frank O'Connell, general manager.

He said the name change was decided on since 30 per cent of the group's members are not employed by county government, but by other public agencies like the Marin Municipal Water District and San Rafael Sanitation District.

Sausalito Planners Allow Dock Work

The Sausalito Planning Commission Wednesday granted a permit to the Marinship Yacht Harbor to replace old decking on an existing dock and to pave an area adjacent to the yacht harbor for parking, according to Chairman Robert L. Nissen.

Plans for the Bridgeway Improvement District were outlined for commissioners by architect Donald K. Olsen. Olsen's proposal includes a raised median strip for emergency vehicles on Bridgeway from Princess Street to Bay Street. The strip is expected to add about $34,000 to the $224,000 tab for the sidewalk widening and beautification project.

November Vote Set On Sewer

Bolinas residents will vote in November on whether land for a new sewer project will include only acreage necessary for operation of the sewer system, with the Bolinas Community Public Utilities District forbidden to purchase extra land for parks, farms, and open space.

District directors reached that decision last night after receiving petitions asking them either to rescind an ordinance authorizing purchase of the 95-acre Sharon property or else put the question to a vote.

But both the directors and the petitioners agreed that no matter how the vote goes, the exact amount of land needed for the sewer project will be determined by the state, which has final say on grants expected to cover 87 per cent of the $1.6 million estimated cost for the total system.

Peter A. Evans, a director of the Bolinas Property Owners Association presented petitions which he said were signed by 100 voters, nearly three times the required number.

The crux of the argument over the sewage costs has centered on whether the utility board should reduce its land purchase to 52 acres, needed for sewage treatment ponds, thus eliminating plans for parks and crop irrigation on the disputed acres.

The Bolinas Community Public Utilities District board also:

WATER — Heard that the road to the Arroyo Honda Dams, damaged in last winters storm, will probably be open next weekend. Meanwhile, the district is pumping some 80,000 gallons per day from the dam against district use of up to 140,000 gallons per day. Electric pumps which will gain 144,000 gallons daily from Pine Gulch Creek are expected to be ready for operation Friday.

ANNEXATION — Learned from director Lewis MacAdams that owners of property representing approximately $66,000 in assessed valuation have asked to be annexed to the district, but postponed action until next week's meeting.

Petaluma School Officials Move

Everett Neil, vice principal at Rohnert Park Junior High School, has been transferred to Rancho Cotate High School.

Supt. Lesly H. Meyer said Neil9will replace vice principal Frank Hutchinson, who has been named principal of Rohnert Park Junior High school.

Neil has been with the Petaluma School District since 1967 and received his teaching credential from Sacramento State University and a master's degree from Sonoma State College.

Report Required For Pet Cemetery

A pet cemetery proposed for Muir Beach will require an environmental impact statement, the county environmental hearing officer ruled yesterday.

Norman Herkenham asked Gilbert F. Allard of Mill Valley, the cemetery's developer, to obtain an impact statement after several Muir Beach residents appeared at the hearing to ask for one.

Allard is seeking a use permit to establish the cemetery on 19 acres at the corner of Shoreline Highway and Frank Valley Road.

The completed impact report will be presented to the hearing officer. If he approves the project, Allard can seek a use permit from the County planning department.

The ruling was Herkenham's last duty as hearing officer. He left the job yesterday.

Deck Hand Returned For Theft Charges

A man accused of stealing a car and equipment from a boat docked in Tiburon was returned to Marin from Detroit Wednesday by Tiburon police.

Leroy Francis Nace Jr., 34, of no known address, was estradited on a warrant charging him with two counts of embezzlement.

Police said Nace is charged with taking a car and electronic equipment belonging to Charles Shalz of Sacramento, who employed him as a deckhand.

Shalz had left Nace in Tiburon in May while he went on a three-week trip. He also left the boat, the auto and a credit card in Nace's care, according to officers, who said Nace disappeared on May 24, along with the equipment, car and card.

Nace was arrested June 8 by Detroit police who said he was using the card to buy tires at a gas station. The auto was not recovered.

Nace was booked yesterday at Marin County Jail and held in lieu of $5,000 bail to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

Cotati Bloc Modifies Recall Goal

Recall backers in Cotati have softened their stand on ousting Mayor Geoffrey Dunham in the Sept. 4 recall election.

Vice Mayor Herbert T. Winter, chairman of the Committee for Sound Government, said a "no opinion" attitude has now been taken on Dunham although the group is still pushing hard for the recall of Councilmen Annette Lombardi and Stephen Laughlin.

Winter said Dunham has maintained a fair voting record and has not automatically sided with Miss Lombardi and Laughlin on issues as had been feared.

"We've never really had any trouble with him," Winter said. "We're still full steam ahead on the other two."

Discussion On Pacemakers Set

Dr. Thomas W. Holmes Jr., of San Rafael, will talk about cardiac pacemakers under sponsorship of Marin Division 17 of the California Licensed Vocational Nurses Association, at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the blue room at Marin General Hospital.

Dr. Holmes, who organized an open heart surgery program at Children's Hospital, San Francisco, and is a member of the pulmonary surgery committee of the American College of Chest Physicians, will discuss nursing care and techniques for patients having pacemakers, including the new permanent pacemaker.

The program is open to all the division said.

A Swindle Game—$500 Given Away

A San Rafael woman was bilked out of $500 yesterday by another woman and a female accomplice who claimed she had found $20,000 in an envelope, police reported today.

According to police, she was shopping in the Northgate Shopping Center about 1 p.m. yesterday when a young woman approached her and said an acquaintance had just found $20,000 in an envelope outside.

Acting out the classic "pigeon drop" swindle, the self-styled finder of the cash left, saying she wanted to consult her boss about the find, then returned and said the cash was "gambler's money" and could be split three ways if "good faith" money was produced.

The victim withdrew $500 from her bank and handed it over, and the two women vanished, police said.

Police described the swindlers as young women, both weighting about 120 pounds and having brown hair. One was about 23 years old and wore a white sweater and pants, and the other was about 30 years old, officers said.

Driver Not Ready For His Swim

When Eugene L. Meade, 50, of 32 Balra Drive, Novato, backed out of his driveway Tuesday night, he hadn't planned on taking a dip in a pool.

Meade's car backed across Balra Drive, through a fence and into the pool of a neighbor, Charles F. Edmonds at 1415 Monte Maria Avenue at 8:45 p.m., according to Novato police.

Meade, who wasn't injured, told officers he was unfamiliar with the car and "hit the wrong pedal."

Police listed damage to the fence, diving board and pool at the Edmonds home and major damage to Meade's car.

Meade also had hit his own rear garage wall "pulling in" and the south garage wall "on the way out," police said.

A pet cemetery proposed for Muir Beach will require an environmental impact statement, the county environmental hearing officer ruled yesterday.

Norman Herkenham asked Gilbert F. Allard of Mill Valley, the cemetery's developer, to obtain an impact statement after several Muir Beach residents appeared at the hearing to ask for one.

Allard is seeking a use permit to establish the cemetery on 19 acres at the corner of Shoreline Highway and Frank Valley Road.

The completed impact report will be presented to the hearing officer. If he approves the project, Allard can seek a use permit from the County planning department.

The ruling was Herkenham's last duty as hearing officer. He left the job yesterday.

Deck Hand Returned For Theft Charges

A man accused of stealing a car and equipment from a boat docked in Tiburon was returned to Marin from Detroit Wednesday by Tiburon police.

Leroy Francis Nace Jr., 34, of no known address, was estradited on a warrant charging him with two counts of embezzlement.

Police said Nace is charged with taking a car and electronic equipment belonging to Charles Shalz of Sacramento, who employed him as a deckhand.

Shalz had left Nace in Tiburon in May while he went on a three-week trip. He also left the boat, the auto and a credit card in Nace's care, according to officers, who said Nace disappeared on May 24, along with the equipment, car and card.

Nace was arrested June 8 by Detroit police who said he was using the card to buy tires at a gas station. The auto was not recovered.

Nace was booked yesterday at Marin County Jail and held in lieu of $5,000 bail to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

Cotati Bloc Modifies Recall Goal

Recall backers in Cotati have softened their stand on ousting Mayor Geoffrey Dunham in the Sept. 4 recall election.

Vice Mayor Herbert T. Winter, chairman of the Committee for Sound Government, said a "no opinion" attitude has now been taken on Dunham although the group is still pushing hard for the recall of Councilmen Annette Lombardi and Stephen Laughlin.

Winter said Dunham has maintained a fair voting record and has not automatically sided with Miss Lombardi and Laughlin on issues as had been feared.

"We've never really had any trouble with him," Winter said. "We're still full steam ahead on the other two."

Discussion On Pacemakers Set

Dr. Thomas W. Holmes Jr., of San Rafael, will talk about cardiac pacemakers under sponsorship of Marin Division 17 of the California Licensed Vocational Nurses Association, at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the blue room at Marin General Hospital.

Dr. Holmes, who organized an open heart surgery program at Children's Hospital, San Francisco, and is a member of the pulmonary surgery committee of the American College of Chest Physicians, will discuss nursing care and techniques for patients having pacemakers, including the new permanent pacemaker.

The program is open to all the division said.

A Swindle Game—$500 Given Away

A San Rafael woman was bilked out of $500 yesterday by another woman and a female accomplice who claimed she had found $20,000 in an envelope, police reported today.

According to police, she was shopping in the Northgate Shopping Center about 1 p.m. yesterday when a young woman approached her and said an acquaintance had just found $20,000 in an envelope outside.

Acting out the classic "pigeon drop" swindle, the self-styled finder of the cash left, saying she wanted to consult her boss about the find, then returned and said the cash was "gambler's money" and could be split three ways if "good faith" money was produced.

The victim withdrew $500 from her bank and handed it over, and the two women vanished, police said.

Police described the swindlers as young women, both weighting about 120 pounds and having brown hair. One was about 23 years old and wore a white sweater and pants, and the other was about 30 years old, officers said.

Driver Not Ready For His Swim

When Eugene L. Meade, 50, of 32 Balra Drive, Novato, backed out of his driveway Tuesday night, he hadn't planned on taking a dip in a pool.

Meade's car backed across Balra Drive, through a fence and into the pool of a neighbor, Charles F. Edmonds at 1415 Monte Maria Avenue at 8:45 p.m., according to Novato police.

Meade, who wasn't injured, told officers he was unfamiliar with the car and "hit the wrong pedal."

Police listed damage to the fence, diving board and pool at the Edmonds home and major damage to Meade's car.

Meade also had hit his own rear garage wall "pulling in" and the south garage wall "on the way out," police said.

Local Catholic priest just traded this clean little Chevrolet Malibu 2-dr. sport coupe to us for a Buick sport coupe. Purchased locally in '69—this air conditioned little Malibu is clean as whistle inside and out.

Along with the GM air conditioning this Malibu has automatic, radio, heater, power steering and the full vinyl interior. A well maintained little car that would make a good car for the student going back to the books in Sept. XPG 806.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Anti-Obesity Drug Popular In Europe Is Not Really Worth It

Fenfluramine has been widely used in Europe for years in the treatment of obesity. At this writing, the Food and Drug Administration has not approved it for dieting in the United States. Is it another crutch or does it really work? Researchers from the University of Pennsylvania compared its value with amphetamines and a placebo. Weight loss occurs, but the drug's efficacy clearly is limited. What the investigators mean is that the users did not lose enough weight (less than a pound a week) to justify its use.

FURTHERMORE, there was a high frequency (89 per cent) of side effects following the use of fenfluramine. Drowsiness was the most common side effect, followed by gastrointestinal symptoms. All of the patients were given general advice on eating, but no diets were prescribed. The investigators did this because they wanted to determine what medicine alone could do. Incidentally, those on amphetamines lost as much weight and had fewer side reactions.

If fenfluramine had been used in conjunction with a low caloric diet, more weight might have been lost. This drug is an amphetamine derivative, but lacks the usual central stimulating effects of amphetamines. As we said, it has just the opposite effect.

Other appetite-suppressant drugs on the market are Tenuate and Preludin. Most of them are used to encourage weight loss during the early period of dieting. The majority of these drugs lose their effectiveness after a short time.

MOST PEOPLE can lose weight by eating less food than they require for their daily energy needs. This is the purpose of a low caloric diet. On these regimens, the body gets so few calories that it must burn up its own fatty deposits. The fat is changed into carbon dioxide which is exhaled and into water that is eliminated by the kidneys. Many physicians tell dieters to use less salt because it tends to hold water in the tissues.

Dieting works like this: A pound of fatty tissue is the energy equivalent of 3,500 calories. Everytime you eat 3,500 less calories than you use up, you should lose a pound. A deficit of 500 calories a day means loss of one pound a week or 52 pounds a year.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to Dr. Van Dellen, c/o the Independent-Journal, P.O. Box 330, San Rafael, Ca. 94902.

HAIRY EARS

Mr. R. R. writes: I have hairy ears. I clip the hairs periodically. Is permanent removal possible?

REPLY

Yes, but it may be too difficult or expensive to remove each hair by electrolysis. Have the barber cut them when you get your haircut or use the clipper on the electric razor. On the other hand, hairy ears are said to be a sign of virility in men. Still want to part with them?

DISABLING ARTHRITIS

G. A. writes: Where is arthritis most disabling?

REPLY

In the knees and wrists. But in reality, it depends upon the occupation and habits of the individual. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on home aids in arthritis.

HERNIAS

N. B. writes: Are Hernias hereditary?

REPLY

No, but they are congenital. The victim is born with a weakness of the tissues in the area where hernias usually develop. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on hernias.

RESOLUTION OF INTENTION TO MAKE CHANGES IN THE COST OF THE WORK AND ASSESSMENTS TO BE LEVIED IN INDUSTRIAL WAY ASSESSMENT DISTRICT, CITY OF LARKSPUR, MARIN COUNTY, CALIFORNIA

WHEREAS, bids for the doing of the work in Industrial Way Assessment District, City of Larkspur, Marin County, California, have been received, and the low bid is in excess of the Engineer's Estimate of Cost, both in the matter of the total cost of the work and with regard to certain categories of work which affect individual assessments;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the City Council of the City of Larkspur, Marin County, California, as follows:

1. That it is the intention of said City Council to make changes in the Engineer's Estimate of Cost and in the spread of the assessment of such costs against the individual properties benefiting therefrom;

2. That the total cost of the work will be increased by reason of such changes from the sum of $102,467.23 as previously set forth in the Engineer's Report dated July 5, 1973, to the sum of $124,598.38, which amount is set forth in the Amended Engineer's Report dated August 15, 1973.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Anti-Obesity Drug Popular In Europe Is Not Really Worth It

Fenfluramine has been widely used in Europe for years in the treatment of obesity. At this writing, the Food and Drug Administration has not approved it for dieting in the United States. Is it another crutch or does it really work? Researchers from the University of Pennsylvania compared its value with amphetamines and a placebo. Weight loss occurs, but the drug's efficacy clearly is limited. What the investigators mean is that the users did not lose enough weight (less than a pound a week) to justify its use.

FURTHERMORE, there was a high frequency (89 per cent) of side effects following the use of fenfluramine. Drowsiness was the most common side effect, followed by gastrointestinal symptoms. All of the patients were given general advice on eating, but no diets were prescribed. The investigators did this because they wanted to determine what medicine alone could do. Incidentally, those on amphetamines lost as much weight and had fewer side reactions.

If fenfluramine had been used in conjunction with a low caloric diet, more weight might have been lost. This drug is an amphetamine derivative, but lacks the usual central stimulating effects of amphetamines. As we said, it has just the opposite effect.

Other appetite-suppressant drugs on the market are Tenuate and Preludin. Most of them are used to encourage weight loss during the early period of dieting. The majority of these drugs lose their effectiveness after a short time.

MOST PEOPLE can lose weight by eating less food than they require for their daily energy needs. This is the purpose of a low caloric diet. On these regimens, the body gets so few calories that it must burn up its own fatty deposits. The fat is changed into carbon dioxide which is exhaled and into water that is eliminated by the kidneys. Many physicians tell dieters to use less salt because it tends to hold water in the tissues.

Dieting works like this: A pound of fatty tissue is the energy equivalent of 3,500 calories. Everytime you eat 3,500 less calories than you use up, you should lose a pound. A deficit of 500 calories a day means loss of one pound a week or 52 pounds a year.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to Dr. Van Dellen, c/o the Independent-Journal, P.O. Box 330, San Rafael, Ca. 94902.

HAIRY EARS

Mr. R. R. writes: I have hairy ears. I clip the hairs periodically. Is permanent removal possible?

REPLY

Yes, but it may be too difficult or expensive to remove each hair by electrolysis. Have the barber cut them when you get your haircut or use the clipper on the electric razor. On the other hand, hairy ears are said to be a sign of virility in men. Still want to part with them?

DISABLING ARTHRITIS

G. A. writes: Where is arthritis most disabling?

REPLY

In the knees and wrists. But in reality, it depends upon the occupation and habits of the individual. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on home aids in arthritis.

HERNIAS

N. B. writes: Are Hernias hereditary?

REPLY

No, but they are congenital. The victim is born with a weakness of the tissues in the area where hernias usually develop. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on hernias.

WEEKDAY MEAL SERVICE

A Timely Whistlestop Project

By PAUL CANE

"We have no money. We might as well die."

People like Mary Traverso of San Rafael are the ones really caught in the middle as food prices skyrocket this summer.

Because she, and countless other pensioners and social security recipients, are forced to spend an ever-increasing portion of their fixed incomes on the basic necessity of life — food.

"Eggs are a dollar a dozen, chicken is a dollar a pound — what can I do?" she asks plaintively. "I'm on a special diet and I need to eat these things for my health, but what if I can't afford them?"

To help relieve the cost crunch for the elderly, the Marin Senior Co-ordinating Council is now completing plans for weekday meal service at the Whistlestop, a senior citizens recreation center on Tamalpais Avenue in San Rafael.

Under the direction of Ed Ryken, the council will offer a hot meal five nights per week, beginning Monday, for persons 60 years and older at $1.25 per meal.

Most of the people relaxing yesterday at the Whistlestop said they were looking forward to sampling the cuisine offered by the program, both from a money-saving standpoint, and because of the pleasant dinnertime socializing.

According to Ryken, the program will be able to handle up to 75 diners in one sitting on a reservation basis, from 5 to 7 p.m.

The program has been in the works for 18 months, and is thus not directly a result of the recent food price increases, according to Ryken. "But it certainly is timely," he commented. "The increase in prices has had a tragic, direct effect on seniors lives."

Mrs. Traverso, a widow living on a $78 per month pension, bears that out.

"I go to the store to shop when I can get somebody to take me there, but when I get there I can't afford to buy much," she said.

Ryken said many of the elderly at the Whistlestop have tried desperately to cut their food costs.

First, they tend to go to the larger discount stores instead of the more exclusive markets.

Second, they purchase different kinds of foods. "Seniors have really continued the meat boycott, and changed their diet into more grains, spaghetti, rice, soup and canned products," Ryken said.

Meals program sparkplug

Third, the elderly are becoming more cautious buyers, traveling from store to store plucking rare sale items from the shelves. The Whistlestop Wheels program, which assists the elderly by driving them to marketing, allows shoppers to visit more than one store in search of bargains.

Fourth, seniors are now making long-range eating plans. According to Ryken, many residents of housing communities or the elderly are banding together to purchase large units of beef and pork to divide and freeze for future use.

Another woman, Meta Wester of San Rafael, says she is trying to survive by cutting down on meat purchases. "I hardly buy any meat anymore," she admitted.

Ryken is worried that senior citizens cooking for themselves might neglect their diet, and to that end has hired a dietician to supervise the content of the program's meals.

One sample menu might be: molded salad, baked chicken, mashed potatoes, corn, cherry tart and coffee.

Or another: tossed salad, beef burgundy, rice, string beans, pudding and coffee.

When it was decided to make meals available to the elderly at cost, the cost estimates ranged as low as 75 cents per meal. With the rising prices, the cost to the Whistlestop, hence to the seniors, soon jumped to the $1.25 level.

The meals will be served in the multipurpose room at the Whistlestop. A newly-equipped kitchen is ready to handle the cooking, staffed by five new employees.

Long fold-away tables can be wheeled out of the room minutes after a meal, to prepare the area for the Whistlestop's bridge club or square dancing classes.

Food stamps currently will not be accepted as payment for a meal, although Ryken said that federal legislation may change that soon.

If the program's response is highly enthusiastic, Ryken said the nightly seating capacity could be increased to 150 by adding an extra sitting.

"I don't really like to cook," said Mrs. Wester. "So I'll come a lot — depending on how good the food is," she added with a wry grin.

Texans Get Extra Holiday This Year

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Legislature passed a law this year designating Aug. 27, the birthday of President Lyndon B. Johnson, as a state holiday. Because the bill gave the state one more than its alloted number of holidays, it also deleted June 3, the birthday of Jefferson Davis, as a holiday.

The bill was passed and signed into law between June 3 and Aug. 27, but Attorney General John Hill ruled Wednesday that state offices will close a week from Monday anyhow, giving state employes an extra day off in 1973. June 3 will no longer be observed as a holiday beginning in 1974.

Accident Victim Off Critical List

A San Francisco woman injured Tuesday in an automobile accident in Novato has been removed from the critical list and is now in "stable, but serious" condition, a spokesman for Novato General Hospital reported today.

Mary Ellen Wilson, 22, was injured when she lost control of her car while attempting to make a turn on North Novato Boulevard. The car overturned and she was thrown from it.

WEEKDAY MEAL SERVICE

A Timely Whistlestop Project

By PAUL CANE

"We have no money. We might as well die."

People like Mary Traverso of San Rafael are the ones really caught in the middle as food prices skyrocket this summer.

Because she, and countless other pensioners and social security recipients, are forced to spend an ever-increasing portion of their fixed incomes on the basic necessity of life — food.

"Eggs are a dollar a dozen, chicken is a dollar a pound — what can I do?" she asks plaintively. "I'm on a special diet and I need to eat these things for my health, but what if I can't afford them?"

To help relieve the cost crunch for the elderly, the Marin Senior Co-ordinating Council is now completing plans for weekday meal service at the Whistlestop, a senior citizens recreation center on Tamalpais Avenue in San Rafael.

Under the direction of Ed Ryken, the council will offer a hot meal five nights per week, beginning Monday, for persons 60 years and older at $1.25 per meal.

Most of the people relaxing yesterday at the Whistlestop said they were looking forward to sampling the cuisine offered by the program, both from a money-saving standpoint, and because of the pleasant dinnertime socializing.

According to Ryken, the program will be able to handle up to 75 diners in one sitting on a reservation basis, from 5 to 7 p.m.

The program has been in the works for 18 months, and is thus not directly a result of the recent food price increases, according to Ryken. "But it certainly is timely," he commented. "The increase in prices has had a tragic, direct effect on seniors lives."

Mrs. Traverso, a widow living on a $78 per month pension, bears that out.

"I go to the store to shop when I can get somebody to take me there, but when I get there I can't afford to buy much," she said.

Ryken said many of the elderly at the Whistlestop have tried desperately to cut their food costs.

First, they tend to go to the larger discount stores instead of the more exclusive markets.

Second, they purchase different kinds of foods. "Seniors have really continued the meat boycott, and changed their diet into more grains, spaghetti, rice, soup and canned products," Ryken said.

Meals program sparkplug

Third, the elderly are becoming more cautious buyers, traveling from store to store plucking rare sale items from the shelves. The Whistlestop Wheels program, which assists the elderly by driving them to marketing, allows shoppers to visit more than one store in search of bargains.

Fourth, seniors are now making long-range eating plans. According to Ryken, many residents of housing communities or the elderly are banding together to purchase large units of beef and pork to divide and freeze for future use.

Another woman, Meta Wester of San Rafael, says she is trying to survive by cutting down on meat purchases. "I hardly buy any meat anymore," she admitted.

Ryken is worried that senior citizens cooking for themselves might neglect their diet, and to that end has hired a dietician to supervise the content of the program's meals.

One sample menu might be: molded salad, baked chicken, mashed potatoes, corn, cherry tart and coffee.

Or another: tossed salad, beef burgundy, rice, string beans, pudding and coffee.

When it was decided to make meals available to the elderly at cost, the cost estimates ranged as low as 75 cents per meal. With the rising prices, the cost to the Whistlestop, hence to the seniors, soon jumped to the $1.25 level.

The meals will be served in the multipurpose room at the Whistlestop. A newly-equipped kitchen is ready to handle the cooking, staffed by five new employees.

Long fold-away tables can be wheeled out of the room minutes after a meal, to prepare the area for the Whistlestop's bridge club or square dancing classes.

Food stamps currently will not be accepted as payment for a meal, although Ryken said that federal legislation may change that soon.

If the program's response is highly enthusiastic, Ryken said the nightly seating capacity could be increased to 150 by adding an extra sitting.

"I don't really like to cook," said Mrs. Wester. "So I'll come a lot — depending on how good the food is," she added with a wry grin.

Accident Victim Off Critical List

A San Francisco woman injured Tuesday in an automobile accident in Novato has been removed from the critical list and is now in "stable, but serious" condition, a spokesman for Novato General Hospital reported today.

Mary Ellen Wilson, 22, was injured when she lost control of her car while attempting to make a turn on North Novato Boulevard. The car overturned and she was thrown from it.

Texans Get Extra Holiday This Year

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Legislature passed a law this year designating Aug. 27, the birthday of President Lyndon B. Johnson, as a state holiday. Because the bill gave the state one more than its alloted number of holidays, it also deleted June 3, the birthday of Jefferson Davis, as a holiday.

The bill was passed and signed into law between June 3 and Aug. 27, but Attorney General John Hill ruled Wednesday that state offices will close a week from Monday anyhow, giving state employes an extra day off in 1973. June 3 will no longer be observed as a holiday beginning in 1974.

Novato Bloc Presses Probe Of Trips, Calls

Novato Citizens for Change, a group of residents that has charged City Mgr. Charles A. Brown with mismanagement, Wednesday asked for an investigation of airport trips and telephone calls.

The group by letter asked Mayor Fred F. Ruegg if it were true that Novato police officers have chauffeured "member of city government" to and from "a distant airport" at time and a half salary.

"Was the service of these police officers paid by the Novato taxpayers?", the group's president, Thomas Stahlbaum, asked.

The group also asked if there are records relating to long distance telephone calls by city employees for personal reasons. "We understand that at least one employee of the City of Novato has made such calls to locate a missing relative who wasn't a citizen of Novato," Stahlbaum said.

The group posed a series of questions last month on Brown's management, including his handling of the resignation of former police chief Allen V. Klemme, which was answered by Mayor Ruegg at the July 31 city council meeting.

Stahlbaum said the group wasn't satisfied with Ruegg's "general statements as complete answers" and asked that the group's queries be placed on the council agenda "at the earliest regularly scheduled" council meeting.

Search Warrant Ruling Is Made

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court has ruled police may search a car without a warrant if they have good reason to believe there's contraband in it and if getting a warrant is not practical.

Justice Stanley Mosk, writing the majority opinion Tuesday, said that "man requires some sanctuary in which his freedom to escape the intrusions of society is all but absolute.

"Certain other places carry with them an expectation of privacy which, although considerable, is less intense and insistent." An automobile is such a place, the high court concluded.

Consumer Faces New Cost Jumps

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The American consumer faces the prospect of continuing rising prices for everything from food to toasters, refrigerators and automobiles.

The big four automakers, U.S. Steel and more than 60 other large corporations have notified the Cost of Living Council (CLC) they intend to boost prices under the Phase IV stabilization program.

Other steel producers also have announced their intention to hike prices, by about 5 per cent.

The CLC said today that 68 corporations, each with annual sales of more than $100 million, have notified it of planned price increases. If the council does not challenge the increases within 30 days the companies may put the higher prices into effect.

More expensive steel can only mean higher costs for manufactured goods two major firms indicated Wednesday. Food prices have been rising steadily and the end is not in sight. A spokesman for Westinghouse Electric said the firm was "very concerned" about increases in the cost of raw materials. A General Motors spokesman said GM, which has already asked for price increases on 1974 model cars, was "leaving the door open" for further hikes because of the steel increases.

In other developments:

The administrator of the U.S. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service said he sees food prices leveling off, and even coming down a little, but not to the levels they held in the past. "We now see the world demand at a record level," said Kenneth E. Frick at a San Francisco news conference. "We are moving out of a period of surpluses."

He said he expects record crops of corn, wheat and soybeans this year and "full supply to the housewife over the next six months of everything, including meat."

The Agriculture Department in San Diego, Calif., said approximately 10,000 of the 30,000 cars checked while crossing the border at Tijuana last weekend were carrying meat bought at inexpensive butcher shops in Mexico. The department warned that eggs, poultry and pork are banned for fear of disease.

Corona Insists He's Innocent

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Juan V. Corona, who was convicted of the slaying of 25 migrant farm workers near Yuba City, says he is innocent.

"I never lost faith in God that some day I'll be free because why should I be in prison for the rest of my life if I didn't commit those crimes?" he asked in televised interview (KRON).

Corona, currently at the California Medical Facility in Vacaville, said he wanted to testify in his own defense at the trial, but his attorney, Richard Hawk, wouldn't let him.

The administrator of the U.S. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service said he sees food prices leveling off, and even coming down a little, but not to the levels they held in the past. "We now see the world demand at a record level," said Kenneth E. Frick at a San Francisco news conference. "We are moving out of a period of surpluses."

He said he expects record crops of corn, wheat and soybeans this year and "full supply to the housewife over the next six months of everything, including meat."

The Agriculture Department in San Diego, Calif., said approximately 10,000 of the 30,000 cars checked while crossing the border at Tijuana last weekend were carrying meat bought at inexpensive butcher shops in Mexico. The department warned that eggs, poultry and pork are banned for fear of disease.

Corona Insists He's Innocent

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Juan V. Corona, who was convicted of the slaying of 25 migrant farm workers near Yuba City, says he is innocent.

"I never lost faith in God that some day I'll be free because why should I be in prison for the rest of my life if I didn't commit those crimes?" he asked in televised interview (KRON).

Corona, currently at the California Medical Facility in Vacaville, said he wanted to testify in his own defense at the trial, but his attorney, Richard Hawk, wouldn't let him.

Tillie Gondak Favored In Tourney Of Champs Golf Play

Pinpoint accuracy on a narrow golf course could hold the key to the coronation of the queen in the sixth annual Marin County Women's Tournament of Champions Friday at 9 a.m. at Marin Country Club in Novato. (Other golf stories, page 34.)

The six Marin course champions consider the 18-hole course narrow and there are several out of bounds areas that could increase the participants scores, according to Bill Leahy, Marin Country Club pro.

The 5,689-yard layout may favor club champion Tillie Gondak, because it "is her home course. That would be the reason I would pick her," Leahy said.

The U-shaped course, with its water hazards, could affect the outcome, but the competitors seemed unperturbed by it. In picking the favorite, mixed views were expressed.

However, the majority apparently leans toward Mrs. Gondak because of her long-ball hitting abilities and familiarity with the course.

Dissenting votes were cast for perennial Meadow Club champion Laura Cann and San Geronimo champ Nancy Gapinski. Defending champion Cookie Baer of Peacock Gap, a 14-handicapper, was given little chance to repeat, and she agreed with the prevailing opinion. "I don't think I'll have much of a chance, but I'll be in there trying," Mrs. Baer said.

Other Tourney of Champions participants are Indian Valley winner Virginia May and Mill Valley Municipal victor Terry Nichols.

Mrs. May, who has played in every Champs Tourney except for the 1972 edition, also has a good shot at winning the wide-open event. She believed the outcome will probably be determined by accuracy, not distance.

"I know I'll be concentrating on just hitting the ball straight," Mrs. May stated.

And the 1968 winner had a word of warning. "Watch out for Terry. She's a little tiger. She is very aggressive and is always determined to win."

Determination is an attribute of Mrs. Gapinski, the 1971 champion, who, after recently returning from a fishing trip in Trinity County, is smoothing out her game. Mrs. Gapinski, the participants stress, is capable of regaining the title — providing she is prepared.

Another player to be reckoned with will be Mrs. Cann, the only two-time winner in the history of event (1969 and 1970.

She will receive a stiff argument from Mrs. Gapinski, the 1971 winner, and Mrs. Gondak, a veteran Champs Tourney participant would enjoy winning her first title before the home folks.

She will get that chance against stern competition Friday. It is a veteran field with only Mrs. Nichols being a first-time player. Seemintly, all the gals realize that victory will be achieved by the most accurate golfer along the straight and narrow of Marin Country Club.

Young Giants Take A Page From Past

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants, who call themselves a team of the future, borrowed a page from the past to beat the Philadelphia Phillies 11-2 Wednesday.

Willie McCovey, 35, hammered a three-run homer in the first inning and that was all 34-year-old Juan Marichal needed to win his 10th game of the season.

"It makes it much easier to pitch with a lead," Marichal said.

Marichal now has 237 career victories, tops among active pitchers and three more than Bob Gibson of the St. Louis Cardinals, who ranks second.

"I don't care about that," Marichal said of his lead. "If I win more than Gibson that's good. If I don't, that's still all right. Besides, he is injured and can't pitch."

Marichal used a side-arm delivery to subdue all the Phillies except Bob Boone. Boone had a double and homer and scored both Philadelphia runs.

"I usually have trouble with the Phillies," Marichal said. "Luzinski had a homer in every game I pitched against Philadelphia," Marichal held Greg Luzinski hitless Wednesday.

McCovey, who is being given days off to rest by Manager Charlie Fox, homered off loser Wayne Twitchell, 11-5, following a single by Garry Maddox and a hit batsman. The homer was his 21st of the season.

"McCovey can help us the most if he gets days off. I ask him every day how he feels. Sometimes, after night games, he's stiff. This time he wasn't," Fox said.

Fox and McCovey had a disagreement earlier in the season about when the first baseman would play. Now they are communicating.

Bobby Bonds scored three runs for the Giants to give him 102 for the season.

"That was one of my goals," Bonds said. "Now I would like to drive in 100 runs." He had 80 runs batted in going into today's final game of the series with the Phillies.

TENNIS DEVELOPMENT IN SAN RAFAEL

Amid a setting of eucalyptus trees at 925 Bell Avenue in San Rafael, the Marin Tennis Club is building an 11-court tennis facility for its 275 members. The membership quota is now filled. Two courts are finished. One is being used for teaching, the other for members' playing. Lessons under pro Gene Cantin began Tuesday, according to San Rafael's Francis L. (Bud) Whister, club president. Another three courts are scheduled to be finished by mid-September. The remainder of the construction, including pool, lockers, and clubhouse should be finished by Nov. 1. Roy Anderson of San Leandro is the contractor for the non-profit club. Whister estimated that 50 per cent of the members are from San Rafael. About 86 per cent of the membership is from Marin.

2 Marin DiMaggio Teams Playing Way To Eureka

Going to Stockton via Eureka may not be a wise idea in this era of gasoline shortages, but one of Marin's two Joe DiMaggio League baseball champions are hoping to do just that.

South division winner Italian Athletic Club (16-1) will play Friday through Sunday in the double-elimination tournament at Babe Ruth Field in Eureka. It will be facing Fortuna American Legion Friday at 5:30 p.m.

North division titleholder Holiday Magic (12-5) was also supposed to play in the tournament, but is unable to because "some of the coaches and players are on vacation, and four kids could not get off work," according to league president Gary Hughes. North runnerup Sebastopol was also unable to go for substantially the same reasons.

The winner of the now three team tourney (Outdoor Store team of Arcata is the third) will advance to the state competition the following week in Stockton.

Italian Club was regional champion and state runner-up last year, and with many of the same personnel returning, hopes to move up one crucial notch this season.

Under DiMaggio rules, each team is permitted to add three players from other teams in its division, and the Italians took pitcher Jerry Wachowiak of Rohnert Park, pitcher Tom Cronin of Toby's Truckers and Toby's outfielder Rich Lopez.

This gives the team a deep staff of lefties Wachowiak, Mark Ruggles, right-handers Gene Frey, Ed Andersen and Cronin, and southpaw reliever Jeff Lucchesi.

"You can never have enough pitching," stressed Hughes. "In a double-elimination tournamtne like this, you may end up playing seven games in four days."

Veteran youth league coach Gino DeMartini will handle the Italian Club in the absence of vacationing Al Endriss.

Disappointed A.L. Owners Hopeful

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and American League owners, their hopes for inter-league play next year blocked by the National League, broke up the summer meetings today visibly disappointed but still hopeful for the future.

Kuhn appeared before the major league executive council and made a personal and passionate plea for a limited number of inter-league games—something he felt would stimulate fan interest.

But, he failed to shake the unanimity of the National League against the revolutionary plan that would have each American League team playing one National League team in a four-game, home-and-home series.

"We still feel the same way," one National League official said after separate sessions of the two leagues Wednesday. "I didn't notice any sentiment for inter-league play. We don't need it."

Milwaukee Brewers' President Allan "Bud" Selig, a member of the special committee on inter-league play, still planned to present his proposal to the closing session of the summer major league meetings, but it was doubtful if the issue would be forced.

The question was whether the American League would seek to force Kuhn to cast a tiebreaking vote. Under the rules of baseball, with both leagues deadlocked the way they are, Kuhn would have the authority to decide.

"Maybe that's what we're waiting for," said one official. "Maybe we want the commissioner to stand up and insist on voting on this issue.

"Of course, even if he does, some of us still feel the commissioner isn't God."

Kuhn's plea came in a private meeting with baseball's executive council. The council consists of the two league presidents, Joe Cronin of the American and Chub Feeney of the National, and four team officials, Walter O'Malley of the Dodgers, John McHale of the Expos, Bob Reynolds of the Angels and Calvin Griffith of the Twins.

Also present were Selig and Francis Dale of the Cincinnati Reds, who served with Selig, Cronin and Feeney on the special committee.

"He tried hard, awful hard," said one National League official. "But he was shot down. I was shocked by the solidarity of opinion against inter-league play in our league. If the expression wasn't unanimous, it was certainly mighty close to it."

A main reason for National League opposition is the fact that the league has the most fan support, largely because of its abundance of superstars and new parks.

UNIVERSITY GAMES

U.S. Basketballers Seek Moscow Gold

MOSCOW (UPI) — The U.S. basketball team, unbeaten after 11 games in Eastern Europe, began its quest today for a gold medal in the seventh World University Games.

The Games officially opened Wednesday night with a 61-nation parade of colors marked by loud booing of the Israeli delegation.

The U.S. cagers, led by All-America David Thompson of North Carolina State, met Britain in the first round of competition. At stake in the end, however, is the pride and prestige of the United States, which lost at these Games four years ago and then was shattered in the dispute-marred Olympic competition at Munich last summer.

Thompson, a unanimous All-America selection during N.C. State's 25-0 season this past year, led all scorers with 20 points per game in the Americans' sweep of teams from Poland, Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia.

The gala and colorful opening ceremonies, held at rain-drenched Lenin Stadium before nearly 90,000 persons, were clouded by a chorus of boos and whistles directed at the 32-member Israeli delegation, one of two participating contingents not having diplomatic relations with the Soviets.

The other nation, South Korea, was received with no noticeable favor pro or con. North Korea is boycotting the Games because of the participation of its southern neighbor.

The rain, which caused the processions of flag bearers, bands and natons to dodge numerous puddles on the Stadium infield sod, cut short a fireworks display at the ceremony's finale but not before a youthful Soviet track and field star, Ludmila Zharkova, lit the traditional Games torch.

The 300-strong U.S. contingent, dressed in blue blazers with white pants, was led by two-time Olympic goid medal winner Cathy Carr, a swimmer from Albuquerque, N.M. Miss Carr, 18, captured Olympic titles in both the 100-meter breaststroke and 400-meter medley relay in the 1972 Summer Games at Munich.

A's Blue Faces Boston's Curtis

BOSTON (UPI) — An uncooperative weatherman has forced the Oakland A's to spend another day in Boston.

Wednesday's game with the Red Sox at Fenway Park was rained out and the contest was rescheduled for today. Vida Blue (12-7) of the A's will face John Curtis (11-9). Both are left-handers.

Blue has won his last three games since being the losing pitcher when Jim Bibby of Texas threw a no-hitter at the A's July 30.

Oakland flies back to the West Coast right after the game in order to open an extensive homestand Friday night against the Milwaukee Brewers.

QB Reaves Vs. Steelers In Football

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

John Reaves will be wearing the green and white of the Philadelphia Eagles tonight and hoping to avoid the Greene and White of Pittsburgh.

New Coach Mike McCormack will start the second-year quarterback against the American Conference Central Division champions and two of the biggest obstacles Reaves will have to overcome will be Joe Greene and Dwight White.

Greene, the Steelers' 6-foot-4, 275-pound defensive tackle, was named Lineman of the Year and Defensive Player of the Year last season in the AFC. White, a 6-5 255-pound defensive end, was named All Conference and starred in the Pro Bowl.

The Eagles were clobbered 45-21 by Cincinnati last week after a 13-0 victory over Buffalo and Reaves' play was one of the few bright spots.

The Pittsburgh-Philadelphia game tonight at Veterans Stadium begins a four-day pro football weekend. On Friday night, Washington is at Buffalo while on Saturday Baltimore meets Detroit in Memphis, St. Louis is at Denver, Houston takes on Green Bay at Milwaukee, Minnesota is at Kansas City, Chicago at Miami, New England at Atlanta, New Orleans at Dallas and Oakland plays Los Angeles at Berkeley, Calif.

On Sunday, the New York Giants take on the New York Jets at New Haven, Conn., Cleveland plays Cincinnati at Columbus, Ohio, and San Diego is at San Francisco.

Bee Wins, Loses In Amateur Tennis Play

HAVERFORD, Pa. — Bee Kilgore of Tiburon was eliminated Wednesday from the singles division of the Women's Open Amateur Tennis Tournament at the Merion Cricket Club here, but stayed alive in the doubles competition.

Bee fell in the third round to top-seeded Betsy Nagelson of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 6-2, 6-4. Miss Kilgore and partner Carrie Meyer of Indianapolis beat the Knoxville, Tenn. team of Nancy Yergin and Candy Reynolds, 6-2, 6-4, to advance in the doubles against the Fort Lauderdale duo of Miss Nagleson and Lele Forood.

49ers Name Vet Beard Assistant

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — Veteran San Francisco 49er linebacker Ed Beard, who injured his knee last season, has signed on as a coach after announcing his retirement.

Beard, 33, made the announcement Wednesday. Head Coach Dick Nolan said the former University of Tennessee player will coach linebackers and the special teams, which he captained for four years.

Beard played with the 49ers for eight years after graduating from Tennessee. He started at middle linebacker during the second half of last season and injured his knee during a playoff game against Dallas.

He underwent surgery during the winter but was unable to pass the team physical this year.

Wide receiver Gene Washington and quarterback John Brodie also learned they will be featured in a segment of National Football League films on the long pass.

"I defy any defender to contain Gene one-and-one," Brodie said of his favorite receiver. "In fact, when I'm sure the opposition isn't going to double up on him, I'll almost invariably throw to Gene because I know he'll get out in the open."

Sharon Defeated

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Sixth-seeded Sharon Walsh of San Rafael Wednesday was ousted by Ching Ling-Chang of Taiwan, 6-2, 6-2, in the $90,000 National Clay Court Tennis Championships.

Mrs. May, who has played in every Champs Tourney except for the 1972 edition, also has a good shot at winning the wide-open event. She believed the outcome will probably be determined by accuracy, not distance.

"I know I'll be concentrating on just hitting the ball straight," Mrs. May stated.

And the 1968 winner had a word of warning. "Watch out for Terry. She's a little tiger. She is very aggressive and is always determined to win."

Determination is an attribute of Mrs. Gapinski, the 1971 champion, who, after recently returning from a fishing trip in Trinity County, is smoothing out her game. Mrs. Gapinski, the participants stress, is capable of regaining the title — providing she is prepared.

Another player to be reckoned with will be Mrs. Cann, the only two-time winner in the history of event (1969 and 1970.

She will receive a stiff argument from Mrs. Gapinski, the 1971 winner, and Mrs. Gondak, a veteran Champs Tourney participant would enjoy winning her first title before the home folks.

She will get that chance against stern competition Friday. It is a veteran field with only Mrs. Nichols being a first-time player. Seemintly, all the gals realize that victory will be achieved by the most accurate golfer along the straight and narrow of Marin Country Club.

Young Giants Take A Page From Past

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants, who call themselves a team of the future, borrowed a page from the past to beat the Philadelphia Phillies 11-2 Wednesday.

Willie McCovey, 35, hammered a three-run homer in the first inning and that was all 34-year-old Juan Marichal needed to win his 10th game of the season.

"It makes it much easier to pitch with a lead," Marichal said.

Marichal now has 237 career victories, tops among active pitchers and three more than Bob Gibson of the St. Louis Cardinals, who ranks second.

"I don't care about that," Marichal said of his lead. "If I win more than Gibson that's good. If I don't, that's still all right. Besides, he is injured and can't pitch."

Marichal used a side-arm delivery to subdue all the Phillies except Bob Boone. Boone had a double and homer and scored both Philadelphia runs.

"I usually have trouble with the Phillies," Marichal said. "Luzinski had a homer in every game I pitched against Philadelphia," Marichal held Greg Luzinski hitless Wednesday.

McCovey, who is being given days off to rest by Manager Charlie Fox, homered off loser Wayne Twitchell, 11-5, following a single by Garry Maddox and a hit batsman. The homer was his 21st of the season.

"McCovey can help us the most if he gets days off. I ask him every day how he feels. Sometimes, after night games, he's stiff. This time he wasn't," Fox said.

Fox and McCovey had a disagreement earlier in the season about when the first baseman would play. Now they are communicating.

Bobby Bonds scored three runs for the Giants to give him 102 for the season.

"That was one of my goals," Bonds said. "Now I would like to drive in 100 runs." He had 80 runs batted in going into today's final game of the series with the Phillies.

TENNIS DEVELOPMENT IN SAN RAFAEL

Amid a setting of eucalyptus trees at 925 Bell Avenue in San Rafael, the Marin Tennis Club is building an 11-court tennis facility for its 275 members. The membership quota is now filled. Two courts are finished. One is being used for teaching, the other for members' playing. Lessons under pro Gene Cantin began Tuesday, according to San Rafael's Francis L. (Bud) Whister, club president. Another three courts are scheduled to be finished by mid-September. The remainder of the construction, including pool, lockers, and clubhouse should be finished by Nov. 1. Roy Anderson of San Leandro is the contractor for the non-profit club. Whister estimated that 50 per cent of the members are from San Rafael. About 86 per cent of the membership is from Marin.

2 Marin DiMaggio Teams Playing Way To Eureka

Going to Stockton via Eureka may not be a wise idea in this era of gasoline shortages, but one of Marin's two Joe DiMaggio League baseball champions are hoping to do just that.

South division winner Italian Athletic Club (16-1) will play Friday through Sunday in the double-elimination tournament at Babe Ruth Field in Eureka. It will be facing Fortuna American Legion Friday at 5:30 p.m.

North division titleholder Holiday Magic (12-5) was also supposed to play in the tournament, but is unable to because "some of the coaches and players are on vacation, and four kids could not get off work," according to league president Gary Hughes. North runnerup Sebastopol was also unable to go for substantially the same reasons.

The winner of the now three team tourney (Outdoor Store team of Arcata is the third) will advance to the state competition the following week in Stockton.

Italian Club was regional champion and state runner-up last year, and with many of the same personnel returning, hopes to move up one crucial notch this season.

Under DiMaggio rules, each team is permitted to add three players from other teams in its division, and the Italians took pitcher Jerry Wachowiak of Rohnert Park, pitcher Tom Cronin of Toby's Truckers and Toby's outfielder Rich Lopez.

This gives the team a deep staff of lefties Wachowiak, Mark Ruggles, right-handers Gene Frey, Ed Andersen and Cronin, and southpaw reliever Jeff Lucchesi.

"You can never have enough pitching," stressed Hughes. "In a double-elimination tournamtne like this, you may end up playing seven games in four days."

Veteran youth league coach Gino DeMartini will handle the Italian Club in the absence of vacationing Al Endriss.

Disappointed A.L. Owners Hopeful

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and American League owners, their hopes for inter-league play next year blocked by the National League, broke up the summer meetings today visibly disappointed but still hopeful for the future.

Kuhn appeared before the major league executive council and made a personal and passionate plea for a limited number of inter-league games—something he felt would stimulate fan interest.

But, he failed to shake the unanimity of the National League against the revolutionary plan that would have each American League team playing one National League team in a four-game, home-and-home series.

"We still feel the same way," one National League official said after separate sessions of the two leagues Wednesday. "I didn't notice any sentiment for inter-league play. We don't need it."

Milwaukee Brewers' President Allan "Bud" Selig, a member of the special committee on inter-league play, still planned to present his proposal to the closing session of the summer major league meetings, but it was doubtful if the issue would be forced.

The question was whether the American League would seek to force Kuhn to cast a tiebreaking vote. Under the rules of baseball, with both leagues deadlocked the way they are, Kuhn would have the authority to decide.

"Maybe that's what we're waiting for," said one official. "Maybe we want the commissioner to stand up and insist on voting on this issue.

"Of course, even if he does, some of us still feel the commissioner isn't God."

Kuhn's plea came in a private meeting with baseball's executive council. The council consists of the two league presidents, Joe Cronin of the American and Chub Feeney of the National, and four team officials, Walter O'Malley of the Dodgers, John McHale of the Expos, Bob Reynolds of the Angels and Calvin Griffith of the Twins.

Also present were Selig and Francis Dale of the Cincinnati Reds, who served with Selig, Cronin and Feeney on the special committee.

"He tried hard, awful hard," said one National League official. "But he was shot down. I was shocked by the solidarity of opinion against inter-league play in our league. If the expression wasn't unanimous, it was certainly mighty close to it."

A main reason for National League opposition is the fact that the league has the most fan support, largely because of its abundance of superstars and new parks.

UNIVERSITY GAMES

U.S. Basketballers Seek Moscow Gold

MOSCOW (UPI) — The U.S. basketball team, unbeaten after 11 games in Eastern Europe, began its quest today for a gold medal in the seventh World University Games.

The Games officially opened Wednesday night with a 61-nation parade of colors marked by loud booing of the Israeli delegation.

The U.S. cagers, led by All-America David Thompson of North Carolina State, met Britain in the first round of competition. At stake in the end, however, is the pride and prestige of the United States, which lost at these Games four years ago and then was shattered in the dispute-marred Olympic competition at Munich last summer.

Thompson, a unanimous All-America selection during N.C. State's 25-0 season this past year, led all scorers with 20 points per game in the Americans' sweep of teams from Poland, Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia.

The gala and colorful opening ceremonies, held at rain-drenched Lenin Stadium before nearly 90,000 persons, were clouded by a chorus of boos and whistles directed at the 32-member Israeli delegation, one of two participating contingents not having diplomatic relations with the Soviets.

The other nation, South Korea, was received with no noticeable favor pro or con. North Korea is boycotting the Games because of the participation of its southern neighbor.

The rain, which caused the processions of flag bearers, bands and natons to dodge numerous puddles on the Stadium infield sod, cut short a fireworks display at the ceremony's finale but not before a youthful Soviet track and field star, Ludmila Zharkova, lit the traditional Games torch.

The 300-strong U.S. contingent, dressed in blue blazers with white pants, was led by two-time Olympic gold medal winner Cathy Carr, a swimmer from Albuquerque, N.M. Miss Carr, 18, captured Olympic titles in both the 100-meter breaststroke and 400-meter medley relay in the 1972 Summer Games at Munich.

A's Blue Faces Boston's Curtis

BOSTON (UPI) — An uncooperative weatherman has forced the Oakland A's to spend another day in Boston.

Wednesday's game with the Red Sox at Fenway Park was rained out and the contest was rescheduled for today. Vida Blue (12-7) of the A's will face John Curtis (11-9). Both are left-handers.

Blue has won his last three games since being the losing pitcher when Jim Bibby of Texas threw a no-hitter at the A's July 30.

Oakland flies back to the West Coast right after the game in order to open an extensive homestand Friday night against the Milwaukee Brewers.

QB Reaves Vs. Steelers In Football

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

John Reaves will be wearing the green and white of the Philadelphia Eagles tonight and hoping to avoid the Greene and White of Pittsburgh.

New Coach Mike McCormack will start the second-year quarterback against the American Conference Central Division champions and two of the biggest obstacles Reaves will have to overcome will be Joe Greene and Dwight White.

Greene, the Steelers' 6-foot-4, 275-pound defensive tackle, was named Lineman of the Year and Defensive Player of the Year last season in the AFC. White, a 6-5 255-pound defensive end, was named All Conference and starred in the Pro Bowl.

The Eagles were clobbered 45-21 by Cincinnati last week after a 13-0 victory over Buffalo and Reaves' play was one of the few bright spots.

The Pittsburgh-Philadelphia game tonight at Veterans Stadium begins a four-day pro football weekend. On Friday night, Washington is at Buffalo while on Saturday Baltimore meets Detroit in Memphis, St. Louis is at Denver, Houston takes on Green Bay at Milwaukee, Minnesota is at Kansas City, Chicago at Miami, New England at Atlanta, New Orleans at Dallas and Oakland plays Los Angeles at Berkeley, Calif.

On Sunday, the New York Giants take on the New York Jets at New Haven, Conn., Cleveland plays Cincinnati at Columbus, Ohio, and San Diego is at San Francisco.

Bee Wins, Loses In Amateur Tennis Play

HAVERFORD, Pa. — Bee Kilgore of Tiburon was eliminated Wednesday from the singles division of the Women's Open Amateur Tennis Tournament at the Merion Cricket Club here, but stayed alive in the doubles competition.

Bee fell in the third round to top-seeded Betsy Nagelson of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 6-2, 6-4. Miss Kilgore and partner Carrie Meyer of Indianapolis beat the Knoxville, Tenn. team of Nancy Yergin and Candy Reynolds, 6-2, 6-4, to advance in the doubles against the Fort Lauderdale duo of Miss Nagleson and Lele Forood.

49ers Name Vet Beard Assistant

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — Veteran San Francisco 49er linebacker Ed Beard, who injured his knee last season, has signed on as a coach after announcing his retirement.

Beard, 33, made the announcement Wednesday. Head Coach Dick Nolan said the former University of Tennessee player will coach linebackers and the special teams, which he captained for four years.

Beard played with the 49ers for eight years after graduating from Tennessee. He started at middle linebacker during the second half of last season and injured his knee during a playoff game against Dallas.

He underwent surgery during the winter but was unable to pass the team physical this year.

Wide receiver Gene Washington and quarterback John Brodie also learned they will be featured in a segment of National Football League films on the long pass.

"I defy any defender to contain Gene one-and-one," Brodie said of his favorite receiver. "In fact, when I'm sure the opposition isn't going to double up on him, I'll almost invariably throw to Gene because I know he'll get out in the open."

Sharon Defeated

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Sixth-seeded Sharon Walsh of San Rafael Wednesday was ousted by Ching Ling-Chang of Taiwan, 6-2, 6-2, in the $90,000 National Clay Court Tennis Championships.

TREVINO TALKS GOLF

HEAD OVER HILLS

By LEE TREVINO

The sidehill shot isn't all that tough. It just takes a little planning. The ball is over your feet, and it nearly always produces a right-to-left action on the ball.

Remember you're closer to the ball at address when it's on a sidehill lie than when on level ground. If you're holding your club at the butt in normal fashion, the odds are that you'll hit the ground behind the ball. So move your grip a few inches down the shaft. This has the effect of shortening the club.

Since your weight is riding on your heels, there is a tendency to fall away from the ball. I don't expect all my golf theories to be accepted as gospel. Some of these tour sharks think the Mex is on loco weed — until they check the winnings. But on a sidehill lie I come up on my toes like there's a plank under my heels.

Aim slightly right of the target. This compensates for the natural hooking tendency of a sidehill lie.

Golfer Hruska Gets 2nd Tourney Chance

(Fifth in a series)

"I'm looking forward to it. I just hope I don't hack it too badly," said Roy Hruska, San Geronimo National Golf Club champion, referring to Sunday's Tournament of Champions at Indian Valley.

"I was supposed to go last year," the five handicapper continued, "but I was out of town." He said: "I've never played with any of these guys, but I heard Mike (Mat Palacio Jr., Marin Country Club champ in Novato) is pretty good. I also think (Al) Randig has a good shot at it. It's his course."

Whether Hruska's views are accurate will be determined Sunday at 8 a.m. when the champions begin play in the 18-hole seventh annual event. The field includes: defending champion Jack Sterley, Peacock Gap; Palacio; Randig, Indian Valley; Byron Eggleston, Mill Valley Municipal; and George Frazer, Meadow Club near Fairfax.

The challenging 6,195-yard Indian Valley layout could be tailor-made for Hruska's short game. "The short game keeps me going," said the two-time San Geronimo club king.

Dubbing himself a "weekend hacuer," the San Francisco packaged meat distributor returned recently to the fairways after a five month layoff due to "business commitments."

"All facets of my game need work," he confided, "but I've been out there the last two months practicing on the weekends. I hope it will be enough."

He'll find out Sunday.

Twins' Decker Hit Hard In Victory

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Petaluma's Joe Decker was belted for six runs, but his Minnesota Twins' teammates Wednesday night rallied for a 9-7 victory over Detroit.

Decker, a right-handed starter, hurled the first six innings, giving up eight hits and two walks while striking out five and committing an error. Decker's record remains at 7-5 as center fielder Steve Brye blasted a three-run home run to pace comeback by the Twins.

Mrs. Gapinski's Itinerary Includes Golf Tourney

(Sixth in a series)

Although her mind is elsewhere, Nancy Gapinski, San Geronimo National Golf Club champion, is determined to win the 1973 Marin County Women's Tournament of Champions Friday, 9 a.m. at Marin Country Club in Novato.

The seven handicapper and 1971 champion leaves Saturday for a three-week trip to England with her husband Larry. "I don't think I'll be packing a golf club either."

However, she will have her clubs Friday for the sixth annual event. Mrs. Gapinski returned Saturday night from a two-week fishing trip in Trinity County. "My husband and I enjoy fishing. We caught our share," says Mrs. Gapinski, who has two children: Bruce, 19, and Laurie, 16.

She will be fishing for a title Friday on a course she "doesn't take lightly, because there are a lot of penalty strokes there. I would think Mrs. (Tillie) Gondak (of Marin Country Club) should play the course well; it's her course, and she knows all the pitfalls. And you can't count out Laura Cann" (Meadow Club champion).

Mrs. Gapinski says her long ball game is her strong suit. "But accuracy is more important here."

She will be facing: defending champion Cookie Baer of Peacock Gap in San Rafael, Mrs. Gondak, Virginia May of Indian Valley and Terry Nichols of Mill Valley Municipal.

By LEE TREVINO

The sidehill shot isn't all that tough. It just takes a little planning. The ball is over your feet, and it nearly always produces a right-to-left action on the ball.

Remember you're closer to the ball at address when it's on a sidehill lie than when on level ground. If you're holding your club at the butt in normal fashion, the odds are that you'll hit the ground behind the ball. So move your grip a few inches down the shaft. This has the effect of shortening the club.

Since your weight is riding on your heels, there is a tendency to fall away from the ball. I don't expect all my golf theories to be accepted as gospel. Some of these tour sharks think the Mex is on loco weed — until they check the winnings. But on a sidehill lie I come up on my toes like there's a plank under my heels.

It requires a slow, smooth swing to stay on your toes through the hitting zone. Just pretend there's a block of wood beneath your heels.

Aim slightly right of the target. This compensates for the natural hooking tendency of a sidehill lie.

Perry's win assures him of retaining second place in championship point standings behind Larry Damitz of Vallejo.

Golfer Hruska Gets 2nd Tourney Chance

(Fifth in a series)

"I'm looking forward to it. I just hope I don't hack it too badly," said Roy Hruska, San Geronimo National Golf Club champion, referring to Sunday's Tournament of Champions at Indian Valley.

"I was supposed to go last year," the five handicapper continued, "but I was out of town." He said: "I've never played with any of these guys, but I heard Mike (Mat Palacio Jr., Marin Country Club champ in Novato) is pretty good. I also think (Al) Randig has a good shot at it. It's his course."

Whether Hruska's views are accurate will be determined Sunday at 8 a.m. when the champions begin play in the 18-hole seventh annual event. The field includes: defending champion Jack Sterley, Peacock Gap; Palacio; Randig, Indian Valley; Byron Eggleston, Mill Valley Municipal; and George Frazer, Meadow Club near Fairfax.

The challenging 6,195-yard Indian Valley layout could be tailor-made for Hruska's short game. "The short game keeps me going," said the two-time San Geronimo club king.

Dubbing himself a "weekend hacuer," the San Francisco packaged meat distributor returned recently to the fairways after a five month layoff due to "business commitments."

"All facets of my game need work," he confided, "but I've been out there the last two months practicing on the weekends. I hope it will be enough."

He'll find out Sunday.

Twins' Decker Hit Hard In Victory

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Petaluma's Joe Decker was belted for six runs, but his Minnesota Twins' teammates Wednesday night rallied for a 9-7 victory over Detroit.

Decker, a right-handed starter, hurled the first six innings, giving up eight hits and two walks while striking out five and committing an error. Decker's record remains at 7-5 as center fielder Steve Brye blasted a three-run home run to pace comeback by the Twins.

Mrs. Gapinski's Itinerary Includes Golf Tourney

(Sixth in a series)

Although her mind is elsewhere, Nancy Gapinski, San Geronimo National Golf Club champion, is determined to win the 1973 Marin County Women's Tournament of Champions Friday, 9 a.m. at Marin Country Club in Novato.

The seven handicapper and 1971 champion leaves Saturday for a three-week trip to England with her husband Larry. "I don't think I'll be packing a golf club either."

However, she will have her clubs Friday for the sixth annual event. Mrs. Gapinski returned Saturday night from a two-week fishing trip in Trinity County. "My husband and I enjoy fishing. We caught our share," says Mrs. Gapinski, who has two children: Bruce, 19, and Laurie, 16.

She will be fishing for a title Friday on a course she "doesn't take lightly, because there are a lot of penalty strokes there. I would think Mrs. (Tillie) Gondak (of Marin Country Club) should play the course well; it's her course, and she knows all the pitfalls. And you can't count out Laura Cann" (Meadow Club champion).

Mrs. Gapinski says her long ball game is her strong suit. "But accuracy is more important here."

She will be facing: defending champion Cookie Baer of Peacock Gap in San Rafael, Mrs. Gondak, Virginia May of Indian Valley and Terry Nichols of Mill Valley Municipal.

Golfer Rosburg Is Suspended

Combined AP & UPI

NEW YORK — Bob Rosburg, a former Professional Golfers Association champion known as one of the most outspoken players on the pro golf tour, won't play for the next three weeks because of an unproven charge that Billy Casper cheated in winning the Western Open last month.

"Rosburg's remarks raised question as to the diligence of players and TPD (PGA Tournament Players Division) officials in applying the rules of golf," said Joe Dey, commissioner of the TPD, who announced Rosburg's three-week suspension Wednesday.

Rosburg will not be allowed to play in the USI classic at Sutton, Mass., which began today, next week's L&M Open at Raleigh, N.C., and the following week's Greater Hartford Open.

After the Western Open, in which Casper beat Larry Hinson by a stroke, Hinson asked a PGA official if it were a violation to move a divot in the way of a ball on the fairway. The official told him it was, and Rosburg then told newsmen Casper had done that at the Western and not been penalized.

Casper said he was innocent, adding, "I've won 50 tournaments. I should know the rules."

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Gordon Johncock has been allowed to keep nearly $70,000 of his prize money for winning this year's Indianapolis 500, but a federal bankruptcy referee Wednesday ordered him to surrender $17,500 of the jackpot to his creditors.

Referee Nicholas W. Sufana has ruled that Johncock may also keep a home in nearby Franklin, Ind., a 1972 car in possession of his estranged wife, and the 1973 Pace car he received for winning the Memorial Day race.

ATLANTA — A court suit brought by Ken Burrow of the Atlanta Falcons shows Burrow signed a contract with a professional management company and one of its agents contrary to National Collegiate Athletic Association rules, the Atlanta Journal reported Wednesday.

Burrow filed suit against Probus and Young, charging mismanagement of his salary, filing a false federal income tax return on his behalf and failing to file a Georgia state income tax return.

SANTA ROSA (UPI) — Running back Clarence Davis is tired of being the forgotten man of the Oakland Raiders.

This summer, he's making his presence felt in deed rather than words and is angling for a starting job in the backfield. He carries impressive credentials going into Saturday afternoon's game against the Los Angeles Rams at Berkeley.

The third year pro from Southern California tops the Raiders in both rushing and receiving and is also the leading kickoff returner with a 22.3 average. He has 90 yards on 16 rushing attempts for a 5.6 average and has caught six passes for 85 yards.

2. What great stage actor of the century has a birthday celebration coming up? On Sunday, Aug. 19, he will be 80. But it's no big thing to his attractive wife. She is already 86. SOUTH WON

West opened the king of diamonds, and South won with the ace. Declarer looked at the dummy and sniffed. "Does this all belong to me?" he asked sarcastically.

"Did I promise you any more?" his partner countered.

Declarer shrugged his shoulders in traditional Gallic fashion. This was perfectly appropriate, since the hand was dealt in the annual Monte Carlo tournament.

Declarer then laid down the ace of spades. West showed out, and now South had to think. How was he to avoid the loss of a heart and a spade?

ORDINARY PLAYS FAIL

South thought of cashing the top hearts. This would work well if the queen happened to drop. It wouldn't.

South next thought of leading a low trump to force an eventual entry to dummy with a trump. Then he could take the heart finesse. But the finesse would lose.

FINALLY SAW

South finally saw a plan that would surely work. He led a low heart toward dummy. West could take the queen of hearts, but South could get to dummy next time with the ten of hearts. This would give him only the same four heart tricks that he was always sure to win, but it would give him the right to lead from dummy.

When South eventually got to dummy with the ten of hearts, he could safely take the trump finesse and thus make his slam contract.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with two spades, and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - 4 3 2
♥ - 5 4 3 2
♦ - 4 3 2
♣ - 4 3 2

What do you do?

ANSWER: Bid two no-trump (but make a mental note to punch the dealer in the nose). A hand like this is cruel and unusual punishment, but you should still respond to your partner's forcing bid. Imagine how much worse you'd feel if an opponent made a forcing bid.

Inouye Reflects On Japanese And Slurs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The rifle grenade that shattered the right arm of Sen. Daniel K. Inouye and dashed a ghetto youth's hopes of becoming a surgeon seemed light years away as the Hawaii Democrat reflected on the recent "little Jap" furor.

Inouye smiled wryly as he leaned back in a leather easy chair in the quiet of his Senate office this week and joked, "Not all Orientals are inscrutable."

Inouye pokes fun at himself now with the ease of a man whose pride in his ancestry has overcome the "dirty Jap" slurs he heard as a youth even before World War II.

"I don't get uptight about it," Inouye says softly. "I can show you letters that refer to 'Jap bastard' long before Watergate. And if I get too shook up by that I have no business serving in the Senate."

Inouye says, however, he was gratified when Washington attorney John J. Wilson apologized for describing Inouye as "that little Jap," —a remark that prompted angry reaction from members of Congress and the public.

Chairman Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., defended his colleague on the Senate Watergate Committee as "one of the most gallant of all Americans" who lost an arm as a U.S. Army combat soldier in Italy fighting "not only for the liberty of our country but the liberty of the free world."

More than 4,500 letters and telegrams poured into Inouye's office during the week that followed Wilson's remarks to a UPI reporter during a recess in the Watergate hearings.

One letter came from Wilson himself, who said, "No insult was intended and I never dreamed of it as a 'racial slur'. If the word 'Jap' is a term of opprobrium, I did not realize it and did not intend it as such."

Inouye indicated in an interview he has a special understanding for impromptu remarks. He had been heard to mutter "What a liar" after questioning Wilson's client, former presidential aide John D. Ehrlichman.

"I'd like to see the person come forward who can say he has never said a bad word or hasn't cussed under his breath," said Inouye, an apparent reference to his own highly-publicized remark.

Name-calling is something Inouye, 48, has become used to. He was born in a Japanese ghetto in Honolulu to immigrant parents, and knew the procedures used in high school to subtly segregate students of Japanese ancestry.

He was enrolled in a pre-med course at the University of Hawaii when prejudice against Japanese Americans crested after Japan bombed Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941. Inouye enlisted in the U.S. Army when President Roosevelt announced formation of combat teams of "loyal American citizens of Japanese descent."

Inouye's hopes of becoming a surgeon ended on April 21, 1945, fighting against German troops in Northern Italy. He was shot in the stomach, then had his right arm shattered by a rifle-launched grenade.

Inouye, his right arm useless, tossed his own grenade left-handed into a machinegun nest and won the Distinguished Service Cross to go with other citations.

The war was a turning point. Inouye, forced to give up thoughts of medicine, turned to law.

But he still knew the sting of ethnic slurs. He was en route home from a Michigan hospital after the war, and a barber near San Francisco refused to serve him, saying "We don't cut Jap hair."

"I wanted to hit him," Inouye wrote in his autobiography. "I could see myself —it was as though I were standing in front of a mirror. There I stood, in full uniform, the new captain's bars on my shoulders, four rows of ribbons on my chest, the combat infantry badge, the distinguished unit citations — and a hook where my hand was supposed to be. And he didn't cut Jap hair. To think I had gone through a war to save his skin —and he didn't cut Jap hair."

Inouye told him: "I'm sorry. I'm sorry for you and the likes of you."

The senator believes there has been a remarkable change in the use of the term "Jap" by Americans in the years since the war when movies and newspaper headlines frequently used the word which Japanese-Americans consider derisive.

"When they realized it displeased us they made an effort to change," said Inouye. "And they didn't have to. We are only a small minority."

Inouye said he felt "disbelief" when he learned of Wilson's "little Jap" remark, and thinks "most Americans consider that word an ethnic slur. Let's put it this way. It is not a word of endearment."

Several women on Inouye's staff burst into tears when the remark was reported on television and the Senator said, "I told them just wait. The people of the United States will respond in a very generous and warm fashion."

His voice serious, Inouye asked rhetorically, "Should we (Japanese-Americans) do anything differently? Should we be the 'good Jap' so we won't be called Jap? Should we walk around with our shoulders slightly stooped?

"No, we should carry on courteously, exercising our rights and behaving as Americans. No more, no less."

Inouye Reflects On Japanese And Slurs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The rifle grenade that shattered the right arm of Sen. Daniel K. Inouye and dashed a ghetto youth's hopes of becoming a surgeon seemed light years away as the Hawaii Democrat reflected on the recent "little Jap" furor.

Inouye smiled wryly as he leaned back in a leather easy chair in the quiet of his Senate office this week and joked, "Not all Orientals are inscrutable."

Inouye pokes fun at himself now with the ease of a man whose pride in his ancestry has overcome the "dirty Jap" slurs he heard as a youth even before World War II.

"I don't get uptight about it," Inouye says softly. "I can show you letters that refer to 'Jap bastard' long before Watergate. And if I get too shook up by that I have no business serving in the Senate."

Inouye says, however, he was gratified when Washington attorney John J. Wilson apologized for describing Inouye as "that little Jap," —a remark that prompted angry reaction from members of Congress and the public.

Chairman Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., defended his colleague on the Senate Watergate Committee as "one of the most gallant of all Americans" who lost an arm as a U.S. Army combat soldier in Italy fighting "not only for the liberty of our country but the liberty of the free world."

More than 4,500 letters and telegrams poured into Inouye's office during the week that followed Wilson's remarks to a UPI reporter during a recess in the Watergate hearings.

One letter came from Wilson himself, who said, "No insult was intended and I never dreamed of it as a 'racial slur'. If the word 'Jap' is a term of opprobrium, I did not realize it and did not intend it as such."

Inouye indicated in an interview he has a special understanding for impromptu remarks. He had been heard to mutter "What a liar" after questioning Wilson's client, former presidential aide John D. Ehrlichman.

"I'd like to see the person come forward who can say he has never said a bad word or hasn't cussed under his breath," said Inouye, an apparent reference to his own highly-publicized remark.

Name-calling is something Inouye, 48, has become used to. He was born in a Japanese ghetto in Honolulu to immigrant parents, and knew the procedures used in high school to subtly segregate students of Japanese ancestry.

He was enrolled in a pre-med course at the University of Hawaii when prejudice against Japanese Americans crested after Japan bombed Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941. Inouye enlisted in the U.S. Army when President Roosevelt announced formation of combat teams of "loyal American citizens of Japanese descent."

Inouye's hopes of becoming a surgeon ended on April 21, 1945, fighting against German troops in Northern Italy. He was shot in the stomach, then had his right arm shattered by a rifle-launched grenade.

Inouye, his right arm useless, tossed his own grenade left-handed into a machinegun nest and won the Distinguished Service Cross to go with other citations.

The war was a turning point. Inouye, forced to give up thoughts of medicine, turned to law.

But he still knew the sting of ethnic slurs. He was en route home from a Michigan hospital after the war, and a barber near San Francisco refused to serve him, saying "We don't cut Jap hair."

"I wanted to hit him," Inouye wrote in his autobiography. "I could see myself —it was as though I were standing in front of a mirror. There I stood, in full uniform, the new captain's bars on my shoulders, four rows of ribbons on my chest, the combat infantry badge, the distinguished unit citations — and a hook where my hand was supposed to be. And he didn't cut Jap hair. To think I had gone through a war to save his skin —and he didn't cut Jap hair."

Inouye told him: "I'm sorry. I'm sorry for you and the likes of you."

The senator believes there has been a remarkable change in the use of the term "Jap" by Americans in the years since the war when movies and newspaper headlines frequently used the word which Japanese-Americans consider derisive.

"When they realized it displeased us they made an effort to change," said Inouye. "And they didn't have to. We are only a small minority."

Inouye said he felt "disbelief" when he learned of Wilson's "little Jap" remark, and thinks "most Americans consider that word an ethnic slur. Let's put it this way. It is not a word of endearment."

Several women on Inouye's staff burst into tears when the remark was reported on television and the Senator said, "I told them just wait. The people of the United States will respond in a very generous and warm fashion."

His voice serious, Inouye asked rhetorically, "Should we (Japanese-Americans) do anything differently? Should we be the 'good Jap' so we won't be called Jap? Should we walk around with our shoulders slightly stooped?

"No, we should carry on courteously, exercising our rights and behaving as Americans. No more, no less."

SOUTH WON

West opened the king of diamonds, and South won with the ace. Declarer looked at the dummy and sniffed. "Does this all belong to me?" he asked sarcastically.

"Did I promise you any more?" his partner countered.

Declarer shrugged his shoulders in traditional Gallic fashion. This was perfectly appropriate, since the hand was dealt in the annual Monte Carlo tournament.

Declarer then laid down the ace of spades. West showed out, and now South had to think. How was he to avoid the loss of a heart and a spade?

ORDINARY PLAYS FAIL

South thought of cashing the top hearts. This would work well if the queen happened to drop. It wouldn't.

South next thought of leading a low trump to force an eventual entry to dummy with a trump. Then he could take the heart finesse. But the finesse would lose.

FINALLY SAW

South finally saw a plan that would surely work. He led a low heart toward dummy. West could take the queen of hearts, but South could get to dummy next time with the ten of hearts. This would give him only the same four heart tricks that he was always sure to win, but it would give him the right to lead from dummy.

When South eventually got to dummy with the ten of hearts, he could safely take the trump finesse and thus make his slam contract.

What do you do?

ANSWER: Bid two no-trump (but make a mental note to punch the dealer in the nose). A hand like this is cruel and unusual punishment, but you should still respond to your partner's forcing bid. Imagine how much worse you'd feel if an opponent made a forcing bid.

Brown Defends Right To Collect Signers

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. has moved to aid volunteer initiative efforts by asking the state Supreme Court to allow petition signatures to be gathered at shopping centers.

In a brief filed with the high court Tuesday, Brown urged the justices to overturn a lower court decision which allows shopping centers to ban petition circulators from their premises.

ANSWER: Bid two no-trump (but make a mental note to punch the dealer in the nose). A hand like this is cruel and unusual punishment, but you should still respond to your partner's forcing bid. Imagine how much worse you'd feel if an opponent made a forcing bid.

Inouye Reflects On Japanese And Slurs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The rifle grenade that shattered the right arm of Sen. Daniel K. Inouye and dashed a ghetto youth's hopes of becoming a surgeon seemed light years away as the Hawaii Democrat reflected on the recent "little Jap" furor.

Inouye smiled wryly as he leaned back in a leather easy chair in the quiet of his Senate office this week and joked, "Not all Orientals are inscrutable."

Inouye pokes fun at himself now with the ease of a man whose pride in his ancestry has overcome the "dirty Jap" slurs he heard as a youth even before World War II.

"I don't get uptight about it," Inouye says softly. "I can show you letters that refer to 'Jap bastard' long before Watergate. And if I get too shook up by that I have no business serving in the Senate."

Inouye says, however, he was gratified when Washington attorney John J. Wilson apologized for describing Inouye as "that little Jap," —a remark that prompted angry reaction from members of Congress and the public.

Chairman Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., defended his colleague on the Senate Watergate Committee as "one of the most gallant of all Americans" who lost an arm as a U.S. Army combat soldier in Italy fighting "not only for the liberty of our country but the liberty of the free world."

More than 4,500 letters and telegrams poured into Inouye's office during the week that followed Wilson's remarks to a UPI reporter during a recess in the Watergate hearings.

One letter came from Wilson himself, who said, "No insult was intended and I never dreamed of it as a 'racial slur'. If the word 'Jap' is a term of opprobrium, I did not realize it and did not intend it as such."

Inouye indicated in an interview he has a special understanding for impromptu remarks. He had been heard to mutter "What a liar" after questioning Wilson's client, former presidential aide John D. Ehrlichman.

"I'd like to see the person come forward who can say he has never said a bad word or hasn't cussed under his breath," said Inouye, an apparent reference to his own highly-publicized remark.

Name-calling is something Inouye, 48, has become used to. He was born in a Japanese ghetto in Honolulu to immigrant parents, and knew the procedures used in high school to subtly segregate students of Japanese ancestry.

He was enrolled in a pre-med course at the University of Hawaii when prejudice against Japanese Americans crested after Japan bombed Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941. Inouye enlisted in the U.S. Army when President Roosevelt announced formation of combat teams of "loyal American citizens of Japanese descent."

Inouye's hopes of becoming a surgeon ended on April 21, 1945, fighting against German troops in Northern Italy. He was shot in the stomach, then had his right arm shattered by a rifle-launched grenade.

Inouye, his right arm useless, tossed his own grenade left-handed into a machinegun nest and won the Distinguished Service Cross to go with other citations.

The war was a turning point. Inouye, forced to give up thoughts of medicine, turned to law.

But he still knew the sting of ethnic slurs. He was en route home from a Michigan hospital after the war, and a barber near San Francisco refused to serve him, saying "We don't cut Jap hair."

"I wanted to hit him," Inouye wrote in his autobiography. "I could see myself —it was as though I were standing in front of a mirror. There I stood, in full uniform, the new captain's bars on my shoulders, four rows of ribbons on my chest, the combat infantry badge, the distinguished unit citations — and a hook where my hand was supposed to be. And he didn't cut Jap hair. To think I had gone through a war to save his skin —and he didn't cut Jap hair."

Inouye told him: "I'm sorry. I'm sorry for you and the likes of you."

The senator believes there has been a remarkable change in the use of the term "Jap" by Americans in the years since the war when movies and newspaper headlines frequently used the word which Japanese-Americans consider derisive.

"When they realized it displeased us they made an effort to change," said Inouye. "And they didn't have to. We are only a small minority."

Inouye said he felt "disbelief" when he learned of Wilson's "little Jap" remark, and thinks "most Americans consider that word an ethnic slur. Let's put it this way. It is not a word of endearment."

Several women on Inouye's staff burst into tears when the remark was reported on television and the Senator said, "I told them just wait. The people of the United States will respond in a very generous and warm fashion."

His voice serious, Inouye asked rhetorically, "Should we (Japanese-Americans) do anything differently? Should we be the 'good Jap' so we won't be called Jap? Should we walk around with our shoulders slightly stooped?

"No, we should carry on courteously, exercising our rights and behaving as Americans. No more, no less."

Lorillard Case On Drugs Set

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (UPI) — Pierre L. Lorillard, grandson of the founder of a tobacco empire, was arrested and charged with the sale of a narcotic drug, police said Wednesday.

Lorillard, 23, who told authorities he had been living in a mountain cabin northwest of town, was released on $5,000 property bond. A preliminary hearing in district court was scheduled for Aug. 31.

He was arrested Aug. 6 in connection with the sale of an oil extract of hashish, police said. He is the son of Louis Lorillard, former head of the Lorillard tobacco compaay, which was sold some time ago to to Loews, Inc.

San Anselmo Man Will Go To Trial

A San Anselmo man must go to trial in Marin Superior Court on burglary and auto theft charges, Marin Municipal Court Judge Robert A. Smallman ruled Tuesday.

Smallman found there is enough evidence to try Billy Dean Trumble, 18, on charges he took a car from Bob's Arco Station, 100 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, San Anselmo, on July 20.

Fluoridation Start Off To December

Fluoridation of Marin Municipal Water District water, scheduled to begin Sept. 1, will have to be postponed until Dec. 1. (Another story, page 1.)

James T. Farnkopf, manager of water treatment and distribution, said difficulties in obtaining the necessary equipment have caused the delay.

The fluoridation program, approved by voters last November, was originally planned to start April 1. But opposition from local anti-fluoridationists and a lawsuit to require the water district to prepare an environmental impact statement on the project caused the starting date to be pushed back several times.

The district began ordering fluoridation equipment and preparing to install it at its San Geronimo treatment plant after a Marin Municipal Court judge on May 30 rejected claims that an impact statement was needed.

Antipregnancy Shots Tested

NEW DELHI (UPI) — A team of biochemists at the All-India Institute of Medical Sciences (AIIMS) are hopeful of developing a vaccine that would "immunize" a woman against pregnancy.

Dr. Gursharan Prasad Talwar, head of the AIIMS biochemistry department and leader of the team, said if developed successfully, the vaccine will prevent pregnancy by inhibiting growth of placenta which normally begins to develop a couple of days after conception or fertilization.

Although animal trials have been successful, he said the vaccine is still in experimental stage.

ANYONE FOR BICYCLING?

Engulfed in a sea of bicycles of every size and description, Marin County Deputy Sheriff Walter Weidauer examines some of the approximately 100 bicycles now held by the sheriff's office. Weidauer said the two-wheelers are usually turned in as abandoned but most are actually stolen. He said the bicycles will be auctioned in the near future at a sheriff's sale or in conjunction with a coroner's office auction. While some bicycles have registration numbers which can be recorded by the department, most do not and losers can find it a real chore to locate their bikes in the massive collection.

Lorillard Case On Drugs Set

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (UPI) — Pierre L. Lorillard, grandson of the founder of a tobacco empire, was arrested and charged with the sale of a narcotic drug, police said Wednesday.

Lorillard, 23, who told authorities he had been living in a mountain cabin northwest of town, was released on $5,000 property bond. A preliminary hearing in district court was scheduled for Aug. 31.

He was arrested Aug. 6 in connection with the sale of an oil extract of hashish, police said. He is the son of Louis Lorillard, former head of the Lorillard tobacco compaay, which was sold some time ago to to Loews, Inc.

San Anselmo Man Will Go To Trial

A San Anselmo man must go to trial in Marin Superior Court on burglary and auto theft charges, Marin Municipal Court Judge Robert A. Smallman ruled Tuesday.

Smallman found there is enough evidence to try Billy Dean Trumble, 18, on charges he took a car from Bob's Arco Station, 100 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, San Anselmo, on July 20.

Fluoridation Start Off To December

Fluoridation of Marin Municipal Water District water, scheduled to begin Sept. 1, will have to be postponed until Dec. 1. (Another story, page 1.)

James T. Farnkopf, manager of water treatment and distribution, said difficulties in obtaining the necessary equipment have caused the delay.

The fluoridation program, approved by voters last November, was originally planned to start April 1. But opposition from local anti-fluoridationists and a lawsuit to require the water district to prepare an environmental impact statement on the project caused the starting date to be pushed back several times.

The district began ordering fluoridation equipment and preparing to install it at its San Geronimo treatment plant after a Marin Municipal Court judge on May 30 rejected claims that an impact statement was needed.

Antipregnancy Shots Tested

NEW DELHI (UPI) — A team of biochemists at the All-India Institute of Medical Sciences (AIIMS) are hopeful of developing a vaccine that would "immunize" a woman against pregnancy.

Dr. Gursharan Prasad Talwar, head of the AIIMS biochemistry department and leader of the team, said if developed successfully, the vaccine will prevent pregnancy by inhibiting growth of placenta which normally begins to develop a couple of days after conception or fertilization.

Although animal trials have been successful, he said the vaccine is still in experimental stage.

Wall Street Rallies On Dollar Rise

NEW YORK (UPI) — Continued dollar strength aboard, coupled with word of the nation's first balance of payments surplus since 1969 helped stocks rally in moderate active trading today on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said investors, ready for an upswing following more than two weeks of declines, gained some buying incentive from news late Wednesday the nation showed its first balance of payments surplus since 1969 in the June quarter. The dollar responded to the news today with a strong rally, which in turn helped the stock market.

Bausch & Lomb was the most active issue, and dropped 1 ⅝ to 34 ⅝ on 118,600 shares.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange were broadly ahead on light trading. Syntex was the volume leader, tumbling 6 to 94 ⅛ on 33,800 shares.

On the Big Board, a number of drug concerns fell, following a newspaper account discussing possible harm to the group that could result from Senate hearings due this fall on industry pricing practice.

New Firm Offers Financial And Tax Help For Marin Business

Complete financial service and tax preparation for businesses in Marin, both large and small, are offered by a new firm in Mill Valley doing business as Galen H. Williams & Associates.

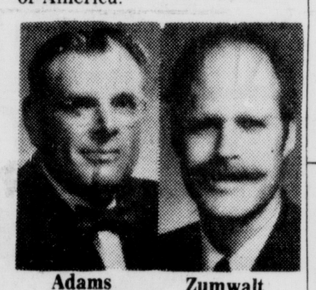
Williams, who lives on Quarry Road in Mill Valley, just received the Marin franchise for the AMRICO system of computerized financial and management services, management counseling and tax preparation. Amrico is a division of Data Research Inc., San Francisco.

"The Amrico system is unique in that it can accommodate the small proprietorship writing 40 to 50 checks per month or the multi-million dollar contractor with complex job cost requirements," said Williams. His monthly fees for the basic general ledger and financial statements range from $50 to $500 per month.

Williams said the Amrico system relieves businessmen of every financial worry such as balancing books, payroll withholding, accounts receivable and payable and tax returns. "We'll keep and balance books for him," said Williams. "All he does it throw the raw data into a drawer, and we'll take care of the rest."

An 11-year resident of Mill Valley, Williams has a master of business administration degree from the University of Chicago Graduate School of Business. He was assistant vice president and manager of business marketing planning at Wells Fargo Bank in San Francisco, where he worked for the last six and one-half years.

LEON D. ADAMS of Mill Valley, noted wine authority, will conduct an informal wine seminar at Brentano's at Northgate Mall on Saturday (Aug. 18) at 1 p.m. He will answer questions about wine, discuss the wine revolution and its history in America, and autograph copies of his new book, "The Wines of America."



Adams Zumwalt

ROBERT E. ZUMWALT of San Rafael has been promoted to vice president in the San Francisco office of the national architectural and engineering firm of Welton Becket and Associates.

Zumwalt joined the Becket organization in 1969 and was promoted in 1971 to executive assistant to Nick Primiani, senior vice president and office director. Zumwalt has a degree in architecture from the University of Washington.

THE OLD MARKET antiques is the name of a new collection of antique shops that replaced Charlie's Market at 1701 Fourth Street in San Rafael.

Owner Joan Coughlin of Peacock Gap said she chose the name "Old Market" because customers kept asking, "Is this the old market?"

The building has been completely remodeled inside and out so that former customers of Charlie's Market will not recognize the place. Mrs. Coughlin has repainted and refurbished the interior with new lighting and wall-to-wall rug to create a spacious 4,000-square-foot display area including a new mezzanine floor. She has 13 different dealers within the shop in the manner of the Collectives in San Anselmo and has space for still more dealers. Free customer parking is available to the rear of the building.

Among displays in the Old Market antique shop are tiffany lamps and terrariums by Penny Jacobs, stained glass, plants, Oriental arts and rugs, silver, oil paintings, and furniture of all kinds. "We have just about everything, and if we don't have it, we try to find it," said Mrs. Coughlin. She worked at the Collectives in San Anselmo for a couple of months last year and has been collecting antiques for about 20 years.

BASKIN-ROBBINS 31 Ice Cream Stores has a thriving outlet in Novato, which we neglected to mention in this column on Tuesday when we listed the Baskin-Robbins shops in Marin.

The Novato shop at 1769 Grant Avenue has been operated by Janice Gibian for six years. Other Baskin-Robbins shopsare in San Rafael, San Anselmo and Mill Valley, and a new one is planned at the Alpha Beta Shopping Center in Larkspur.

LAND INVESTORS RESEARCH of Larkspur announced the appointment of Herbert D. Sims of Ross as director of marketing programs. Sims graduated from Oregon State University and won his master of business administration degree from Stanford University this year. Before that, he worked for IBM for aobut two years in accounting and financial controls.

FIFTEEN BANKERS in Marin were appointed to California Bankers Association committees for 1973-74.

They include E. A. Iversen and Kenneth V. Larkin of Bank of America; Wells W. Rasmussen, William P. Murray Jr., and Alan L. Hoover, Bank of Marin; Harold R. Arthur, Lauren D. Upson, John B. Barnes, Christopher T. Ford, and Lane P. Brennan, Wells Fargo Bank; Richard D. Puntillo, Redwood Bank; Timothy F. Harrington Jr. and Robert L. Shearn, the Bank of California; John W. Pring and Donald K. White, Crocker National Bank.

In petaluma, two executives from Sierra National Bank were named to California Bankers Association committees. They are James L. Ryan and Wayne C. Littleton.

JAMES TUFTS of Kentfield has been appointed merchandise manager of Baker & Hamilton, San Francisco wholesale distributors of hardware, steel, household and sporting goods. Tufts has been with the firm for 23 years and will retain his position as industrial sales manager.

NEW YORK LIFE Insurance Co. named five Marin agents to the 1973 Presidents Council on the basis of their 1972-73 sales records. They are Robert A. Davies of Belvedere, Edward R. Middendorf and Cyrus J. Shaw of Tiburon, B. R. (Barney) Whitehill of San Anselmo, and Mrs. Eve B. Wyatt of Sausalito.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Retired Man Advised To Hold And Wait

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I own a $5,000 Ogden Corp. 5 per cent convertible bond. I am retired and would like to increase my income. What do you advise? — B.M.

A. At its recent trading price of $610, this convertible bond yields 8.2 per cent currently, very little below the rate available in good quality straight debt issues. Furthermore, probability of price appreciation in this bond appears to be better than average. Ogden's earnings are expected to be strong again this year, which the market should eventually take into account. An increase in price of the underlying common shares should also be reflected in the trading price of the bond. Should the bond move to a 7 per cent current yield basis, you might at that point consider switching to a straight bond.

Q. Our investment club has purchased 750 shares of Unishops Inc. (NYSE) at $11, $7.50 and $2. It looks as if the company has much potential although it is still very speculative. What is your opinion of buying such a stock for a long-term investment? — R.H.

A. According to management, Unishops anticipates a smaller deficit in 1973 than the 79 -a-share loss reported in 1972. This, in itself, certainly does not justify committing additional funds to what, at this point, is a highly speculative situation. For the first half Unishops had a loss of about $8 million, substantially higher than the $4.8 million deficit of the comparable 1972 interim period.

Management expects that a turnaround in the final quarter, when retail stores do most of their business, will help to offset these earlier deficit quarters. The company has reduced inventories by 20 per cent — in recent years inventories had grown sharply. Expansion has been cut back, expenses curtailed and certain assets disposed of. At the mid-year cash flow was in a positive position. Losses were primarily chalked up by two divisions, Bobbie Sue and White Modell. Restructuring in both areas and the sale of 84 leased departments should benefit results in the latter half. In my opinion this is a wait-and-see situation and purchase is not advised.

Ampex Recovers After Brush With Bankruptcy

REDWOOD CITY (UPI) — Ampex Corporation, the company that brings you tape recorded music and the instant TV replay, almost went bankrupt 18 months ago.

Today its top executives say the "New Ampex" is on the road back.

During the fiscal year ended April 28, Ampex had a $3.6 million profit—compared with a loss of $85.7 million the previous fiscal year.

In the fall of 1971, San Francisco financier Richard Elkus, an Ampex board member, became concerned about a relatively modest loss the previous fiscal year which seemed to be continuing. He investigated and uncovered a situation which showed that the losses were mounting at an alarming rate.

When the extent of the financial disaster became known it was mostly on the basis of Elkus' prestige that Ampex creditors gave the company time to save itself. There was a general housecleaning throughout management. Arthur H. Hausman came in as president. Elkus became the full-time "top policy officer."

Ampex stock, which hit a high of 49-⅞ in 1970, slipped to a low of 3-¼ earlier this year. It is now selling a little higher.

SOUNDPROOF

This strange looking wall is on an anechoic chamber built by Westinghouse engineers in Sunnyvale, Calif. to measure the noise level generated by gears being tested for a Navy destroyer program. Two walls and the ceiling are composed of these special foam blocks. The other two walls are of plywood and can be removed to place the gears. (UPI Telephoto)

Wall Street Rallies On Dollar Rise

NEW YORK (UPI) — Continued dollar strength aboard, coupled with word of the nation's first balance of payments surplus since 1969 helped stocks rally in moderate active trading today on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said investors, ready for an upswing following more than two weeks of declines, gained some buying incentive from news late Wednesday the nation showed its first balance of payments surplus since 1969 in the June quarter. The dollar responded to the news today with a strong rally, which in turn helped the stock market.

Bausch & Lomb was the most active issue, and dropped 1 ⅝ to 34 ⅝ on 118,600 shares.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange were broadly ahead on light trading. Syntex was the volume leader, tumbling 6 to 94 ⅛ on 33,800 shares.

On the Big Board, a number of drug concerns fell, following a newspaper account discussing possible harm to the group that could result from Senate hearings due this fall on industry pricing practice.

New Firm Offers Financial And Tax Help For Marin Business

Complete financial service and tax preparation for businesses in Marin, both large and small, are offered by a new firm in Mill Valley doing business as Galen H. Williams & Associates.

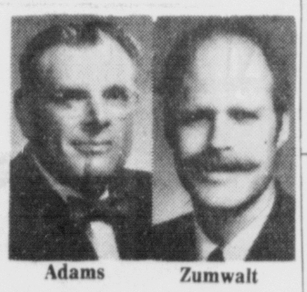
Williams, who lives on Quarry Road in Mill Valley, just received the Marin franchise for the AMRICO system of computerized financial and management services, management counseling and tax preparation. Amrico is a division of Data Research Inc., San Francisco.

"The Amrico system is unique in that it can accommodate the small proprietorship writing 40 to 50 checks per month or the multi-million dollar contractor with complex job cost requirements," said Williams. His monthly fees for the basic general ledger and financial statements range from $50 to $500 per month.

Williams said the Amrico system relieves businessmen of every financial worry such as balancing books, payroll withholding, accounts receivable and payable and tax returns. "We'll keep and balance books for him," said Williams. "All he does it throw the raw data into a drawer, and we'll take care of the rest."

An 11-year resident of Mill Valley, Williams has a master of business administration degree from the University of Chicago Graduate School of Business. He was assistant vice president and manager of business marketing planning at Wells Fargo Bank in San Francisco, where he worked for the last six and one-half years.

LEON D. ADAMS of Mill Valley, noted wine authority, will conduct an informal wine seminar at Brentano's at Northgate Mall on Saturday (Aug. 18) at 1 p.m. He will answer questions about wine, discuss the wine revolution and its history in America, and autograph copies of his new book, "The Wines of America."



Adams Zumwalt

ROBERT E. ZUMWALT of San Rafael has been promoted to vice president in the San Francisco office of the national architectural and engineering firm of Welton Becket and Associates.

Zumwalt joined the Becket organization in 1969 and was promoted in 1971 to executive assistant to Nick Primiani, senior vice president and office director. Zumwalt has a degree in architecture from the University of Washington.

THE OLD MARKET antiques is the name of a new collection of antique shops that replaced Charlie's Market at 1701 Fourth Street in San Rafael.

Owner Joan Coughlin of Peacock Gap said she chose the name "Old Market" because customers kept asking, "Is this the old market?"

The building has been completely remodeled inside and out so that former customers of Charlie's Market will not recognize the place. Mrs. Coughlin has repainted and refurbished the interior with new lighting and wall-to-wall rug to create a spacious 4,000-square-foot display area including a new mezzanine floor. She has 13 different dealers within the shop in the manner of the Collectives in San Anselmo and has space for still more dealers. Free customer parking is available to the rear of the building.

Among displays in the Old Market antique shop are tiffany lamps and terrariums by Penny Jacobs, stained glass, plants, Oriental arts and rugs, silver, oil paintings, and furniture of all kinds. "We have just about everything, and if we don't have it, we try to find it," said Mrs. Coughlin. She worked at the Collectives in San Anselmo for a couple of months last year and has been collecting antiques for about 20 years.

BASKIN-ROBBINS 31 Ice Cream Stores has a thriving outlet in Novato, which we neglected to mention in this column on Tuesday when we listed the Baskin-Robbins shops in Marin.

The Novato shop at 1769 Grant Avenue has been operated by Janice Gibian for six years. Other Baskin-Robbins shopsare in San Rafael, San Anselmo and Mill Valley, and a new one is planned at the Alpha Beta Shopping Center in Larkspur.

LAND INVESTORS RESEARCH of Larkspur announced the appointment of Herbert D. Sims of Ross as director of marketing programs. Sims graduated from Oregon State University and won his master of business administration degree from Stanford University this year. Before that, he worked for IBM for aobut two years in accounting and financial controls.

FIFTEEN BANKERS in Marin were appointed to California Bankers Association committees for 1973-74.

They include E. A. Iversen and Kenneth V. Larkin of Bank of America; Wells W. Rasmussen, William P. Murray Jr., and Alan L. Hoover, Bank of Marin; Harold R. Arthur, Lauren D. Upson, John B. Barnes, Christopher T. Ford, and Lane P. Brennan, Wells Fargo Bank; Richard D. Puntillo, Redwood Bank; Timothy F. Harrington Jr. and Robert L. Shearn, the Bank of California; John W. Pring and Donald K. White, Crocker National Bank.

In petaluma, two executives from Sierra National Bank were named to California Bankers Association committees. They are James L. Ryan and Wayne C. Littleton.

JAMES TUFTS of Kentfield has been appointed merchandise manager of Baker & Hamilton, San Francisco wholesale distributors of hardware, steel, household and sporting goods. Tufts has been with the firm for 23 years and will retain his position as industrial sales manager.

NEW YORK LIFE Insurance Co. named five Marin agents to the 1973 Presidents Council on the basis of their 1972-73 sales records. They are Robert A. Davies of Belvedere, Edward R. Middendorf and Cyrus J. Shaw of Tiburon, B. R. (Barney) Whitehill of San Anselmo, and Mrs. Eve B. Wyatt of Sausalito.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Retired Man Advised To Hold And Wait

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I own a $5,000 Ogden Corp. 5 per cent convertible bond. I am retired and would like to increase my income. What do you advise? — B.M.

A. At its recent trading price of $610, this convertible bond yields 8.2 per cent currently, very little below the rate available in good quality straight debt issues. Furthermore, probability of price appreciation in this bond appears to be better than average. Ogden's earnings are expected to be strong again this year, which the market should eventually take into account. An increase in price of the underlying common shares should also be reflected in the trading price of the bond. Should the bond move to a 7 per cent current yield basis, you might at that point consider switching to a straight bond.

Q. Our investment club has purchased 750 shares of Unishops Inc. (NYSE) at $11, $7.50 and $2. It looks as if the company has much potential although it is still very speculative. What is your opinion of buying such a stock for a long-term investment? — R.H.

A. According to management, Unishops anticipates a smaller deficit in 1973 than the 79 -a-share loss reported in 1972. This, in itself, certainly does not justify committing additional funds to what, at this point, is a highly speculative situation. For the first half Unishops had a loss of about $8 million, substantially higher than the $4.8 million deficit of the comparable 1972 interim period.

Management expects that a turnaround in the final quarter, when retail stores do most of their business, will help to offset these earlier deficit quarters. The company has reduced inventories by 20 per cent — in recent years inventories had grown sharply. Expansion has been cut back, expenses curtailed and certain assets disposed of. At the mid-year cash flow was in a positive position. Losses were primarily chalked up by two divisions, Bobbie Sue and White Modell. Restructuring in both areas and the sale of 84 leased departments should benefit results in the latter half. In my opinion this is a wait-and-see situation and purchase is not advised.

"That financial scandal was a real tragedy for everybody except the lawyers."

Ampex Recovers After Brush With Bankruptcy

REDWOOD CITY (UPI) — Ampex Corporation, the company that brings you tape recorded music and the instant TV replay, almost went bankrupt 18 months ago.

Today its top executives say the "New Ampex" is on the road back.

During the fiscal year ended April 28, Ampex had a $3.6 million profit—compared with a loss of $85.7 million the previous fiscal year.

In the fall of 1971, San Francisco financier Richard Elkus, an Ampex board member, became concerned about a relatively modest loss the previous fiscal year which seemed to be continuing. He investigated and uncovered a situation which showed that the losses were mounting at an alarming rate.

When the extent of the financial disaster became known it was mostly on the basis of Elkus' prestige that Ampex creditors gave the company time to save itself. There was a general housecleaning throughout management. Arthur H. Hausman came in as president. Elkus became the full-time "top policy officer."

Ampex stock, which hit a high of 49-⅞ in 1970, slipped to a low of 3-¼ earlier this year. It is now selling a little higher.

Dividend Declared

LOS ANGELES — Farmers New World Life Insurance Company directors declared the regular quarterly divided of 3 cents per share payable Sept. 14, 1973, to stockholders of record Aug. 24, 1973.

Amaroli Seeks Board Reelection

George A. Amaroli of Novato, an engineer with the state Public Utilities Commission, has announced he will seek reelection to the North Marin County Water District Board.

Two seats are open in the North Marin County Water District election Nov. 6 when the terms of Amaroli and Frank V. Baccaglio expire. The district has 17,547 registered voters.

Amaroli said he intended to file his nomination papers today or friday.

Amaroli, 40, has been a member of the board for four years and a resident of Novato for 16 years.

Amaroli said water is the key to growth, but it isn't the water board's job to function as planners.

He said he believes in a growth rate in keeping with general plans for the area and "we have planned water around these considerations."

He said he is an advocate of a "modest continuous growth rate" and wasn't an advocate either of "no growth" or of unlimited growth "which would exhaust the water supply."

Novato, he said, has been growing at a faster pace than the 450 to 500 dwellings units a year, and if growth continues unlimited, the planned capacity in the Russian River aqueduct could be "burned up" in four years instead of lasting ten."

The district should insure that the water gained by the bond measure should last for the period proposed to the voters, a 10-to-13-year period, Amaroli said.

(Voters approved a $4.1 million bond measure in June to finance a new aqueduct to deliver Russian River water.)

"I think the key issue in passage of the water bond issue wasthe city itself coming to grips with the 500-a-year growth limit," he said.

Amaroli was born in Santa Rosa. He is a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley, with a degree in Engineering in 1955.

Amaroli, his wife, Marilan and two children live at 11 Rebecca Way.

Lost $10,000 Bill Returned The Next Day

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Marie Walker, 63, lost a $10,000 bill one day and it was found and returned to her two days later.

"I saw this piece of paper in the shrubbery in front of my home," said Mrs. Irene Gorman. "It looked official so I picked it up."

The "official" paper was a $10,000 U.S. Treasury bill which is almost as easy to cash as a personal check.

Mrs. Walker discovered the security note missing from her purse Monday after she had been jostled by two youths en route to a bank. About 30 minutes later, Mrs. Gorman found the note.

News reports of the missing note alerted Mrs. Gorman Wednesday and she contacted Mrs. Walker's bank. Now the security note is resting in its owner's safe deposit box and Mrs. Gorman received a $150 reward.

Amaroli Seeks Board Reelection

George A. Amaroli of Novato, an engineer with the state Public Utilities Commission, has announced he will seek reelection to the North Marin County Water District Board.

Two seats are open in the North Marin County Water District election Nov. 6 when the terms of Amaroli and Frank V. Baccaglio expire. The district has 17,547 registered voters.

Amaroli said he intended to file his nomination papers today or friday.

Amaroli, 40, has been a member of the board for four years and a resident of Novato for 16 years.

Amaroli said water is the key to growth, but it isn't the water board's job to function as planners.

He said he believes in a growth rate in keeping with general plans for the area and "we have planned water around these considerations."

He said he is an advocate of a "modest continuous growth rate" and wasn't an advocate either of "no growth" or of unlimited growth "which would exhaust the water supply."

Novato, he said, has been growing at a faster pace than the 450 to 500 dwellings units a year, and if growth continues unlimited, the planned capacity in the Russian River aqueduct could be "burned up" in four years instead of lasting ten."

The district should insure that the water gained by the bond measure should last for the period proposed to the voters, a 10-to-13-year period, Amaroli said.

(Voters approved a $4.1 million bond measure in June to finance a new aqueduct to deliver Russian River water.)

"I think the key issue in passage of the water bond issue wasthe city itself coming to grips with the 500-a-year growth limit," he said.

Amaroli was born in Santa Rosa. He is a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley, with a degree in Engineering in 1955.

Amaroli, his wife, Marilan and two children live at 11 Rebecca Way.

Lost $10,000 Bill Returned The Next Day

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Marie Walker, 63, lost a $10,000 bill one day and it was found and returned to her two days later.

"I saw this piece of paper in the shrubbery in front of my home," said Mrs. Irene Gorman. "It looked official so I picked it up."

The "official" paper was a $10,000 U.S. Treasury bill which is almost as easy to cash as a personal check.

Mrs. Walker discovered the security note missing from her purse Monday after she had been jostled by two youths en route to a bank. About 30 minutes later, Mrs. Gorman found the note.

News reports of the missing note alerted Mrs. Gorman Wednesday and she contacted Mrs. Walker's bank. Now the security note is resting in its owner's safe deposit box and Mrs. Gorman received a $150 reward.

Youngster Drowns

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — The 3-year-old son of John Schmitz, former Republican congressman and American Independent Party candidate for president, died Tuesday after a swimming pool accident.
